ANNOUNCEMENT

To My Friends and Customers of the City of Peterborough—

I beg to notify all my friends and the public generally that I have disposed of my drug business in this city to Mr. C. M. Moncur, Phm.B., a gentleman whom I can highly recommend to the citizens of Peterborough as one who is fully capable of taking charge of and carrying on a drug business in a careful and up-to-date manner.

In making this announcement I take the opportunity of thanking my patrons for their many kindnesses shown to me in the forty years that I have been before them, and I trust that they will give the same confidence to my successor as they did to me. As he has been associated with me for some time past I know that he is well versed in all that pertains to the drug business, and in retiring it gives me great pleasure to feel that I have placed my interests in the hands of one who is so well worthy of the respect and esteem of the citizens of this city.

Signed,
Very respectfully,
J. D. TULLY

INTIMATION

In connection with the above, I beg to announce that I have purchased the business of Mr. J. D. Tully. I will do my utmost endeavor to give the people of Peterborough a drug service that will in every way be equal to that of any in the city.

I feel, owing to my long experience in the business, not only in this city but in Ottawa, Detroit, New York and Newark, in which places I have spent some eight years as a dispensing druggist, that I am fully qualified to give every attention and care to the patrons of the store.

It is hardly necessary to say that this stock of drugs, supplies, etc., will be kept thoroughly fresh and of the highest quality, and that every care and attention will be given to the preparation of prescriptions and orders.

Very respectfully,

"I HONESTLY BELIEVE 'FRUIT-A-TIVES'

The Greatest Cure For Rheumatism In The World"

KNOWLTON, QUE., Oct. 12th. 1909.

"For many years, I suffered from severe Rheumatism, and the attacks were very distressing and prevented me from doing my ordinary work. I tried many remedies and physicians' treatments, but nothing seemed to do me much good, and I was becoming very anxious for fear I would become a permanent cripple from the disease.

I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and this medicine has entirely cured me and I honestly believe it is the greatest Rheumatism cure in the world."

E. R. MILLS.

Such a statement could not be bought from a man like Mr. Mills. He thinks too much of his good name, to sell it or sign it to an untruth. Mr. Mills tried "Fruit-a-tives" after all other treatment failed—and "Fruit-a-tives" cured him of Rheumatism. In the goodness of his heart, he wrote the above letter in order that sufferers in all parts of Canada would know that there is one remedy that actually does cure Rheumatism. This testimonial was entirely unsolicited on our part. We did not know that Mr Mills was taking "Fruit-a-tives" until we received the above letter.

It is a case like Mr. Mills' that proves the marvellous powers of "Fruit-a-tives" in arresting and curing disease. It may be stated, without fear of contradiction, that "Fruit-a-tives" will positively cure Rheumatism when properly used.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices and is the greatest Rheumatism cure known to modern science.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c. Sold by all dealers or sent, postpaid, on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

An Incident

The Hall's Bridge farmer who was arrested for being drunk, called in to-day to state that he did not spend $90 on a spree. He said it was only $15. He said that he only owed $6.00 for his horses' keep. He stated that he was not drunk, although he pleaded guilty at the court.

"How can a man get drunk on beer?" he asked as he walked out into the street.

"Would you like your name used?"

Turning, he said, "Not by a —— sight."

Preparations are being made at a large coke-oven plant at Connellsville, Pa., to extract oil from smoke.

BISHOP FALLON MAKES REPLY TO DETRACTORS

ESSEX ILLITERATE OWING TO PRESENT SYSTEM

Standard of Education in That County is Lowest in His Diocese, Declares Bishop of London, and That is His Reason for Opposing Bilingual Schools—Also Charges Maisonville With Persistent Attacks on Him.

Goderich, Oct. 17.—M. F. Fallon, Bishop of London, issued a statement yesterday, of which a summary follows. He conducted a confirmation service at 10 a.m., and preached at vespers at 7 p.m.

"On Sept. 29 last, because of certain articles in the daily press, representing me as hostile to the French language and to the interests of the French-Canadian people, and particularly because of the definite false charge that I had forbidden the teaching of the French language in the schools of Belle River and Walkerville, I issued a statement, from which I now quote the following paragraphs:

"'I have never been, by word or deed, by intent or resign, unfriendly to the interests of the French-Canadian people, and I never shall be unfriendly to them at any time or place, no matter what the provocation. A number of them live within the limits of my own diocese, and I am as solicitous for their welfare, whether spiritual or temporal, as I am for that of any other portion of the flock confided to my care.

"'I have not, and I never had, any objection to the teaching of French, or of any other language, in accordance with the laws of the Province of Ontario, and the regulations of the Provincial Department of Education.'

"Within recent days a memorandum from the Hon. Mr. Hanna to the Hon. Dr. Pyne, purporting to contain the account of a conversation I had with the former in Sarnia, has been made public, with the evident design of discrediting my previous declaration.

"Let me state at once that I desire to fully and entirely exonerate Mr. Hanna from even the suspicions of dishonorable conduct. I am convinced that he had nothing to do with the publication of his memorandum, and, as published, it is as unjust to him as it is to me. Where I suspect the responsibility rested, I shall at once make clear.

"The dismissal of the private secretary of the Minister of Public Works by no means reaches the root of the matter. I owe nothing to any man in public life, except decent treatment and fair play. I expect nothing else from him. Now, the dismissal of Mr. Maisonville has been by far too long delayed. I informed the Hon. Mr. Reaume privately over four months ago, and shortly after the stealing of the Hanna memorandum, that his private secretary had sent a lying and libelous attack on me to The Detroit Free Press.

"I refrained at the time through a desire to be more than fair to Dr. Reaume, from laying the matter before the Prime Minister. I knew that Sir James Whitney would not tolerate for an instant that any man should draw a salary from the province, and at the same time receive pay from newspapers for fomenting racial and national strife. Dr. Reaume assumed an attitude of almost apoplexy for his secretary, and though he promised to 'investigate,' I heard nothing of the results of his investigation.

"What I should now like to know is how the Hon. Dr. Reaume failed in four months to discover what it took Sir James Whitney less than 48 hours to unearth and promptly deal with. I have no hesitation in affirming as my opinion that Mr. Maisonville lost no sleep through any dread of punishment from his official chief, because of his mischievous misdeeds.

"On the main issue, Mr. Hanna stated my views with absolute exactitude, and I desire now to reaffirm them. The alleged bilingual system of education, as it prevails in certain parts of the Province of Ontario, is absolutely futile as concerning the teaching of either English or French, and utterly hostile to the best interests of the children, both English and French. Let me cite a few facts, culled from a multitude that I have collected on my tour through the diocese of London.

"The French-Canadian parishes of Belle River, Big Point, French settlement, McGregor, Ruscombe, Staples, Stoney Point, Paincourt and Tilbury with eighteen separate schools and upwards of 2,000 children on the rolls, passed a total of ten pupils at their recent entrance examinations. It is from some of these parishes that the loudest noise comes regarding my insistence that these conditions are a disgrace.

"If the separate schools in these districts are bad, the public schools, also under the alleged bilingual system, are worse. For in the above mentioned districts the public schools succeeded in getting only seven children through the entrance examination, of which Tilbury furnished four, McGregor, Big Point and Paincourt one each, and the others none. And I could cite many other instances of equal inefficiency. All these facts have been supplied to me over their own signatures by the pastors of the parishes I have named.

"Is it any wonder that I should raise my voice on behalf of all the children who live in what might be called the bilingual belt of my diocese? And is it not monstrous that for so doing I should be charged with hostility to the French language, and to the interests of the French-Canadian people? In the schools that are inflicted on the children, neither English nor French is properly taught or decently spoken. The regulations of the Education Department are in many instances utterly disregarded. Because of the conditions that prevail, children are either not sent to school at all, or are withdrawn in the face of the difficulties.

"During my present confirmation tour the French-Canadian pastor of a French-Canadian parish in Essex County, said to me in the presence of witnesses: 'Half the boys whom you confirmed this morning (they ranged from 11 to 15 years of age) can neither read nor write. Every year since I came here I have offered a gold medal to the child that would pass the entrance examination. Not one has ever passed.'

"Essex stands lowest educationally amongst the nine counties that constitute the Diocese of London. Everything flourishes there except education. The land is heavy with rich harvests, choice fruits and a generation of uneducated children. One could almost be inclined to believe in the existence of a well-contrived conspiracy among the enemies of the French-Canadian people to keep them in a position of self-perpetuating intellectual inferiority.

"In conclusion, I desire to again affirm that I am not, and will not be, unfriendly to any interest of the French-Canadian people, as distinguished from other people.

"This whole question is not a contest between English-speaking and French-speaking Catholics. It is a matter of great public moment. On the one side of the discussion are a certain number of French-Canadians, led by noisy agitators; on the other side are also French-Canadians in no small numbers, together with the rest of the population of the Province of Ontario, without distinction of creed or nationality. And let me hazard the prophecy that, when this second division awakes to the gravity of the situation, it will make short work of an alleged bilingual school system, which teaches neither English nor French, encourages incompetency, gives a prize to hypocrisy, and breeds ignorance.

(Signed) M. Fallon,
Bishop of London."

'TWAS FAIRY GOLD HE HAD

Sheldon Told Employes He Had a Big Reserve in Montreal.

Montreal, Oct. 17.—David Burnside, who has been manager for C. D. Sheldon since he started extensive operations in this city, stated Saturday that he really had nothing more to say, which would give the public any enlightenment as to the whereabouts of Sheldon, or as to the possibility of their getting back the money, which they entrusted to the frenzied financier.

"As I said before," he added, "I place no reliance upon the promises made in the letter I received. I thought Mr. Sheldon absolutely straight. If I hadn't I wouldn't have been with him. But now he runs away, leaving us in this predicament. As you know, I have sworn out a warrant against him."

At this point Mr. Burnside said a word to the press: "All I ask," he stated, "is a square deal, and I'm not getting it. Many of the accounts make it appear I was hand in glove with Sheldon. Friday a paper comes out with a headline: 'Sheldon writes to his pals,' and that after I have taken the responsibility of doing exactly what the papers have advised, swearing out a warrant for the arrest of the man. I tell you it isn't fair."

If there is anything laughable in the Sheldon affair, certainly it is the sight of David Burnside, the Sheldon manager, going down to Mr. Chandler to get the $683,000 Sheldon said he had deposited there.

When Mr. Chandler heard the request for $683,000, his eyes nearly popped out of his head.

"How much?" he said in a dazed way.

Mr. Burnside said it was $683,000.

Mr. Chandler recovered after a while, but the shock was great. After he recovered he smiled.

And this was the way Sheldon flimflammed his clerks and managers. They believed Sheldon had $683,000 on deposit in one office in Montreal. Here is the evidence to convict C. D. Sheldon of fraud. It is a fac-simile of a broker's daily balance sheet, and was supposedly made out in the office of Broker Chandler. Mr. Chandler says it is a forgery, and that it was not made out in his office.

WELLMAN HEADING FOR EUROPE IN HIS DIRIGIBLE

On Sunday at Noon Message is Received Saying That Airship's Position is 300 Miles off Coast, and Heading for Old World.

Siasconsett, Mass., Oct. 17.—Somewhere east of Nantucket Island, off the coast of Massachusetts, and approximately 300 miles from Atlantic City, the starting point, Walter Wellman's airship America, signalled a wireless, "All's well and good-bye" at 12.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and swung on up the coast through the fog. This message, the last of the day's wireless conversations, was received here by A. H. Ginman, the Marconi operator, who had been on the alert since dawn.

At 9 o'clock yesterday morning, Siasconsett first came in touch with the giant dirigible. Then, although the wireless range of the craft is comparatively short, owing to necessarily limited power and antennae, the station was surprised to hear its call "M S C" clear and strong, followed by "W S," the code signal for airship. Judging from the strength of the signals, it was assumed that the America was in close proximity to Nantucket, and immediately all the life-saving stations and lighthouses on the island were notified by telephone to keep a sharp lookout.

But the fog, which had enshrouded the America since her departure on Saturday morning, still hung over the ocean, shutting off the view. The Marconi station, however, began a rapid fire of interrogation and learned from Jack Irwin, the America's operator, that the ship's motors had been stopped, and that the dirigible was heading east-northeast, and making twenty-five miles an hour with the wind. At Nantucket excitement was acute, but with motors idle, the airship sailed along as silently as a phantom in the sky, where ordinarily the engine's exhaust would have reverberated along the coast.

However, the electric voice of the Marconi station filled in at times what the eye and ear were denied, and intermittently the operators here exchanged greetings with their late associate, who, it will be recalled, received at this station the dramatic "C Q D" from the ill-fated steamship Republic. At 10.30 a.m. signals from the dirigible became suddenly stronger, and it was momentarily expected that the America would come in sight of the station. Irwin, in fact, flashed that he thought that he could hear the sounds of the breakers, but the fog effectually shut the craft from view, although she was probably passing over the shoals surrounding the island.

From that time on signals from the airship grew steadily weaker, until finally, at 12.45, a message flashed from here asking if everything aboard was O.K. Faintly came the reply "yes," then fainter still the two letters "GB," goodbye.

Unable to take observations in the fog, the America's exact position remained unknown throughout the day, as has been the case since she set sail. Her course, however, has been along the steamship lines, and, as no word to the contrary has been received, the assumption is that Mr. Wellman, with 50 days' fuel and 50 days' provisions aboard, is adhering to his plan of crossing the Atlantic and landing on the British Isles.

It is likely that no further word from the airship will be received here, but a dozen of the Atlantic liners fitted with wireless, were in her zone last night.

When last heard from at 12.45 p.m. the America had been in the air just 18 minutes less than 29 hours, and, having covered approximately 300 miles, must have averaged in forward progress between ten and eleven miles an hour. At this rate the craft would not pass Sable Isle, 400 miles distant from Nantucket, until 9 a.m. Tuesday, and Cape Race, 650 miles further, 7 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Brisk westerly winds aided the passage yesterday, and, the engines being idle while off Nantucket, the wireless must have been operated by storage battery. This probably accounts for the briefness of Irwin's message, for he was doubtless hoarding his limited supply of energy for an emergency. With the motors in operation a dynamo can be pressed into service, but the sparking interferes with the receiving, and better results are obtained when they are silent.

ENGINEER TAKES BLAME SAYS HE OVER-RAN ORDERS

Three Men Perish in Wreck of Imperial Limited Express Near Cartier, When it Runs Into Stock Train—Many Cattle Are Killed.

North Bay, Oct. 17.—The remarkable part of the head-on collison Saturday between the Imperial Limited westbound express and a stock train is the small casualty list, which was confined to three engine-men, caught in the crash before they had time to leap from the engines.

The express received order at Cartier to meet the stock train at Geneva, three miles west, where no stop is usually made, and the stock train was slowing up, preparatory to taking a siding, when the express thundered through Geneva, and, with a crash, piled into the stock train, just six minutes after leaving Cartier. A number of cattle were killed, and other injured.

In one car every animal perished.

Engineer D. S. McLennan of the express, before his death at Sudbury Hospital, made a statement, in which he admitted responsibility for overrunning his orders, and expressing a desire to take the entire blame.

As the track is of a curving nature west of Geneva, the headlights of the approaching trains were hidden and the express rushed on through the night to certain disaster. Engineer Smith of the stock train was slowing down to take the siding at Geneva, and the brakeman stood upon the step of the engine, ready to throw the switch, when he observed the headlight of the coming express, and yelled to the engine-men to jump for their lives, at the same time making his own escape.

Engineer Smith succeeded in clearing his engine before the crash, but Fireman Percy Vice was caught and killed. Fireman William Summers of the express was so seriously injured that he died last night at Sudbury Hospital. Engineer McLennan leaves a wife and two children. His body was taken to Ottawa for interment.

While the passengers and other members of the train crew were severely shaken up, no one received serious injuries. Traffic was resumed fourteen hours after the accident happened, the track being badly torn up, and the wrecked engines and cars being in a shape hard to handle.

DIES FROM HIS INJURIES

London, Oct. 17.—Ex-Alderman Robert Parsons, who was injured in an auto accident on Friday night at Crumlin, died from his injuries at Victoria Hospital yesterday. He was injured internally, but it was not thought at the time that he would die. Paralysis, however, set in. He is survived by his wife and one daughter. He was a well-known East London business man, and was in the city council for several years.

The members of the royal commission on technical education arrived here on Saturday, and will hear evidence and visit London factories today and to-morrow.

SENT CABLE TO POPE

Montreal, Oct. 17.—Some twenty-five thousand people gathered on the Champ de Mars last evening, presided over by Archbishop Bruchesi, who, with Henri Bourassa, M.P.P.; Hon. J. Decarie, Dr. S. Lachapelle and Mayor Guerin, delivered addresses denouncing Mayor Nathan of Rome, and expressing sympathy with the Pope. Bishops Emard of Valleyfield, Bernard of St. Hyacinthe, Laroque of Sherbrooke, and Archambault of Joliette also sent in their adhesion, and Mgr. Bruchesi said that the gathering represented a million and a half of the faithful. His lordship of Joliette hoped for the day when the city of the righteousness would triumph over the city of evil, and the church of Christ over Freemasonry, which, he added, propagated impiety and revolution throughout the world. His grace introduced Dr. Guerin as the Catholic mayor of Montreal against Mayor Nathan of Rome.

STRIKE QUARREL ENDS IN SHOOTING

Albany, N.Y., Oct. 17.—Following a quarrel over a strike situation among employes of the companies by which they were employed, Edward Maye of Troy was shot and killed at Green Island Saturday by Frank Sheldon of Watervliet. His first will, written by himself, left all to his nieces and nephews, and the local church, but shortly before his death he made a notarial will which left most of his property to the universities mentioned.

SENTENCE DAY AT TORONTO

Toronto, Oct. 17.—Judge Denton on Saturday passed sentence on nearly half a hundred unfortunates, who had come before him in the Sessions' Court.

Several cases had to do with crimes against girls and women. James Murphy, was sentenced to 18 months for having, with another man, "by guile and trickery," lured two girls to a stable and attempted an assault. His ill-health saved him from the lash. John Jackson got six months for offending against a little girl whom he took to a picture show, and Carmone Montone, for an offence against his sister, 18 months. Wm. MISSING HAGUE DELEGATE FOUND

Ottawa, Oct. 17.—A cable to the Department of Marine and Fisheries from Hutchinson, superintendent of the exhibition branch, announces that Robert Venning, superintendent of fisheries, who has been missing for six weeks, has been located in Brussels. Mr. Venning was found in a hotel at Brussels, Belgium, suffering from amnesia, or loss of memory. He has been taken charge of by Mr. Hutchinson, and it is expected that he will be able to leave for Ottawa shortly, accompanied by one of the members of the staff of the Canadian exhibit at Brussels.

Mr. Venning was one of the members of the Canadian delegation to The Hague, in connection with the fisheries arbitration. He is one of the best posted men in the Canadian public service on international law, especially in its application to fisheries questions, and his advice was continually sought by counsel on the Canadian side.

FATHERS ARE SUEING OFFICIALS

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 17.—The Town of Springhill is now threatened with more litigation, issuing out of the recent school children's strike. To restore peace at that time D. Matteson, chairman of the police commission, and other town officials, used their persuasive powers to prevent the children of strikebreakers from attending schools. Now two of these children are entering action in the name of their fathers, as next friends, for damages for being prevented from attending the schools. Mellish and McInnes of Halifax have issued writs against Matteson and two officials.

THE EVENING POST

Galt will have a new paper, the Galt Evening Post. It will, so J. P. Jaffray says, uphold the best traditions of the party. The Galt Reporter is being thrown on the market. Long live the Post. DIFFERENCE OF OPINION

We are often apt to make much ado about the Spaniard and his bull fight, but its the man and the bull for it with the chances on the man. What of us with our automobile races, its the man and death for it, with the chances on DEATH. Scores have been slaughtered in automobile races, hundreds have been killed in automobile speeding. But this is sport. Men thrown into the air on the ends of the horn of a bull. THIS IS HORRIBLE. Men pitched in the air to come down mangled and dead. This is fascinating sport. This is enlightened America. Yonder is unenlightened Spain. Is it a difference of opinion, or what?

MONDAY MORNING

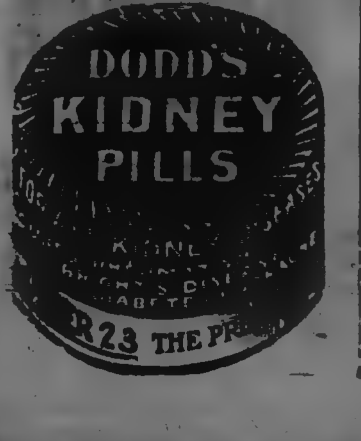
Have you ever observed that Sunday's rest seems to give a new and a malign activity to His Nibs the Devil, on Monday morning? During the doxology we transmuted our weekly swears into Sabbath prayers, and even that chronic grumbler, the old gentleman (who so dislikes "long sermons," and "wonders why we're paying so high for such short ones!") has parted, with mutual good will from the next door neighbor whom he walked home with, although he detests the same. But, "it is the holy Sabbath day," he says to himself, and forgives everybody everything.—Prowler in the Ottawa Free Press.

We have for a long time heard that BLUE MONDAY comes after Sunday, but we never knew the reason why. Here is the reason as plain as the nose on your face—ITS THE DEVIL. But we can see no special difference between Sunday and Monday, or Monday and Tuesday. All days are sacred, as our friendships should be sacred. Sunday is a day to rest, to go to church, to walk in the open, and what a Sunday yesterday was. He must have been a grouch indeed whose nature didn't respond to the clear blue sky, the radiance and joy of nature. And today is Monday, it cannot be blue Monday to any one whose liver, lungs are correct and whose heart rings true. There is no blue Monday, but there's the same old devil to chase us as crawled on his belly through Eden in the days of the long ago.

HAMILTON SCORES AGAIN

An automobile factory is soon to be added to the list of Hamilton industries. Last year Canadians paid American manufacturers over $2,000,000 for automobiles, not to mention the money paid to British and French makers. There is no good reason why Canadian capital and Canadian workmen should not supply a large part of this demand, and the Hamilton factory will demonstrate that fact.—Herald.

Billy Mullins, the publicity man, is making good over in Hamilton. This is the third industry Hamilton has landed. Publicity Commissioner Macdonald, Guelph, has secured two industries for Guelph. McCormack, Welland's hot air artist and hypnotist has brought in a round half dozen. These places have something to offer, low power rate, or cheap taxes, or transportation facilities. Have we got these things? If not, why not? Our Publicity Commissioner cannot perform miracles.



NEVER MIND THE PEOPLE

There is not far from Edmonton, Alberta, an undeveloped water-power. The civic authorities announced their intention to develop this water-power for the purpose of supplying the city with electric service, and made formal application to the federal government for the necessary authority. A day or two ago they went there to take possession, but found a large placard notifying all mankind that particular water-power had been pre-empted by certain private individuals, and that trespassers had been kept off. The private individuals are said to be some enterprising American capitalists. Now what should the Edmonton authorities do? Would it not be better for them to allow the water-power to be developed by those American capitalists and arrange with them to supply the city with electric power at a profitable rate? Think of all the expense and the risk that the city would incur by embarking in such a "socialistic" enterprise as the development of electric energy at its own door in order that it might have that energy at cost! This is what the enemies of public ownership would say. Is it sensible.—Herald Hamilton.

Why certainly it's sensible. In the words of the old American railway magnate, THE PUBLIC BE DAMNED. We are too slow in this country. We hang on to our money too tightly. We cannot see opportunity. We are afraid we will lose a dollar. We wake usually from our trance to find that we are too late. Let the American capital control the water-power near Edmonton give them the profits never mind the people.

AN OPINION

W. F. McLean, the irrepressible and irresponsible, occasionally in his indiscriminate hitting-out lands an effective blow. He is a curious mixture of the practical and impractical, this man, and the pity of it is that his influence for civic and national betterment should be, as it so often is, made valueless and without effect because of the mistrust with which the people regard him and his schemes generally, owing to the weaknesses he so frequently manifests as a public man and through his personal organ, the Toronto World.

This little thrust is from the Hamilton Spectator. The Hamilton Spectator is a Cataract Power Company organ, and Billy McLean has made the Cataract Power Company sit up and take notice on several occasions. He is certainly irrepressible, but is not irresponsible. He makes mistakes. Anyone who does things makes mistakes. But that mistrust of the people—it must be the Cataract Power people, Hamilton. W. F. McLean, M. P., manages to be elected.

WHO SAYS CANADA IS DEFENCELESS ?

The Toronto Ladies' Canadian Rifle Club, organized a year ago by Miss Catherine Merritt, held its first shoot of the season with real service rifles at the Long Branch ranges.—Toronto Star.

This is a return to the days of the Amazon. The Star pictures the ladies lying on their stomachs taking a bead on the bull's eye. Ladies, congratulations. You will never go to battle, but as a recreation it's away ahead of gossip and scandal and pink teas, and champagne. Your cheeks will take fresh glow, your appetites become more normal, and you'd find that in rifle shooting is a fascination that grips you and grips you strong. But didn't the guns kick pretty hard? A shooting match just closed in Peterborough, when Harold Smith won a turkey. You, ladies, will win more than that, you will win the admiration of your husband and sweetheart. But, say, can you cook a turkey and make the dressing?

PROMISES

After the election of 1908 the Toronto News published a long series of actual quotations from the election addresses of Liberal candidates, and from Liberal newspapers, in which the Public Works bribe was openly used. In Ontario alone the showing was as follows—

Western Ontario—Wholesale bribes offered in 22 seats out of 40, or 55 per cent.

Central Ontario—15 out of 25, or 52 per cent.

Eastern Ontario—9 out of 15, or 60 per cent.

Northern Ontario—5 out of 6, or 88 per cent.

All Ontario—49 out of 86, or 56 per cent.

Bear in mind that the foregoing figures take no account of promises made in speeches, or in the canvass; they refer only to published and open statements.

In some cases these appeals were wonderfully brazen; sometimes so strangely perverted as to be positively funny. For example, the Collingwood Bulletin spoke of "the impure ethics of politics," those ethics being that Opposition constituencies must get no public works. The Morrisburg Leader urged its readers to be independent enough—to be bribed. The Port Hope Guide blandly adjured the people of its town to "cut politics out." The Pembroke Observer, discussing the issue in Pontiac, a Quebec constituency across the Ottawa river, coolly said of Mr. Brabazon, the Conservative candidate, "When the time comes that his party holds the reins of power, no better man could represent the people of Pontiac."

In a singularly large number of cases threats were made that if the constituency did not vote Liberal it would be penalized for that express reason. This particular roll-call of dishonor is—

West Huron—Robert Holmes, the Liberal candidate, in his newspaper, the Clinton New Era. (After the election.)

Lincoln—The St. Catharines Star-Journal. (After the election.)

North Simcoe—The Collingwood Bulletin. (After the election.)

Hamilton—The Times. (After the election.)

North Grey—The Meaford Monitor. (Before the election.)

Durham—The Port Hope Guide. (Before the election.)

Dundas—Mr. W. B. Lawson, the Liberal candidate. (Before the election.)

These appeals were not merely local and sporadic affairs, but constituted an integral portion of the Government campaign, deliberately encouraged by the central organization. For example, both in North Bruce and in East Algoma articles appeared, which except for the candidates' name were absolutely identical; these contained particularly explicit advice to electors to vote for the side which could procure money-spending. Again, articles of this sort appeared in East Algoma and Wentworth, which were identical except for the names of the ridings.

Thus Mr. Macdonald when he tried to bully the people of Lethbridge was simply playing the usual Liberal game. If the people of Lethbridge resent it; if decent Liberals are disgusted, it is useless to blame Mr. Macdonald, the responsibility lies with the managements of the Liberal party.

A DOSE OF CALOMEL

That a good dose of calomel is as good for a tree as for a man who is ill is a curious doctrine worked out by William Morrison, station agent at Lincoln, Del., who says results prove his assertion.

Morrison has a large plum tree in front of his house which is supposed to be about 25 years old. For years the tree has borne few plums, never more than one or two quarts.

A believer in Calomel for the ills of men, Morrison determined to try his remedy on the trees and last fall bored a hole in the tree, inserted a spoonful of the medicine and then plugged the hole up tight.

The result has been wonderful, for the tree, that hardly bore enough plums to give it a name, has several hundred quarts ripening on its limbs.

So pleased is Morrison with the effects of his treatment that he will now begin a regular course of medicine to revive the aged tree. He will also write a careful account of the action of the medicine on the tree and publish it in farm magazines.

Only one doubt bothers Morrison. He is wondering what the action of the plum will be on the people who eat them.

SIDE LIGHTS

MAN.

(Chicago Daily News.)

Yesterday one biplane flying through the sky had all men eyeing every cloud and breathless trying To make out the winged thing.
While its engine's far-off purring set the city's pulses stirring o'er the thing that was occuring
Over mere man on the wing;
But to-day we're scarcely turning askward when we hear the churning of the wheels or smell the burning.
Of the quarts of gasolene
On the flyers going o'er us; really, they somewhat bore us, their swift throbbing makes a chorus;
They fly over every scene.

What but yesterday were wonders
now are commonplace; man blunders onward, playing with the thunders,
Harnessing the lightning's flash,
Cleaving through the cobalt spaces with the rushing storm he races over snow-capped peaks he chases,
Where the avalanches crash.
Through high silence is pealing through the night his way he's feeling, over battleships he's stealing,
Practicing for future war:
Always upward, onward faring, always some new danger daring, looking in death's face uncaring
Finding what he's looking for.

Yes, his steel-walled bark he urges underneath the oceans surges while the night wind sings the dirges
Of the sea kings known of yore;
Yes, he charts the comet's courses, seeks for knowledge at its sources, harnesses all nature's forces—
Has them wait before his door;
Puts his foot into the stirrup, starts the lightning with a chirrup, and the while his engines purr up
Scans his map, oh, wondrous man!
Nature's forces cannot faze you, depths of seas nor skies can daze you, can fool you nor amaze you
But—a little woman can!

The Real Bargains Go to Those Who Read the Ads

Ninety-nine per cent. of the real bargains in the stores go to those who read the store advertisements.

The other one per cent. go to those who casually drop on the bargains in the rush of shopping.

If you can't afford to be one of the "one-chance-in a hundred" people, read the store ads. and learn of the bargains straightway.

And as 99 per cent. of the bargain getters are ad. readers, so 99 per cent. of the real bargain givers are advertisers. When you read all the advertised bargains, you know about all the bargains in town that are really worth while.

A Gentleman From Mississippi

By THOMAS A. WISE

Novelized From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THOMAS A. WISE

"But why do you think most of the congressmen and senators will vote for it?"

The southerner took off his hat, leaned back and gazed across the lobby thoughtfully.

"Seems to me the benefit to the south and country would be sufficient reason, Mr. Haines," he finally replied.

The newspaper man's brain worked rapidly. Going over the entire conversation with Langdon and what he had seen of him, he was certain that the Mississippian believed what he said—that, moreover, the belief was deeply rooted. His long newspaper training had educated Haines in the ways of men, their actions and mental processes—what naturally to expect from a given set of circumstances. He felt a growing regard, an affection, for this unassuming old man before him, who did not know and probably would be slow to understand the hypocrisy, the cunning trickery of lawmakers who unmake laws.

"Sufficient reason for you, senator," Haines added. "You have not been in politics very long, have you?" he queried dryly.

A wry smile wrinkled the Mississippian's face.

"Been in long enough to learn some unpleasant things I didn't know before." He remembered Martin Sanders.

"Will you allow me to tell you a few more?" asked Haines.

Langdon inclined his head in acquiescence. "Reckon I'd better know the worst and get through with it."

"Well, then, senator, somebody from Nebraska will vote for what you want in the way of the naval base because he'll think then you'll help him demand money to dredge some muddy creek that he has an interest in.

"Somebody in Pennsylvania will vote for it because he owes a grudge and wants to hurt the Philadelphia ship people.

"You'll get the Democrats because it's for the south, but if your bill was for the west coast they might fight it tooth and nail, even with the Japanese fleet cruising dangerously near.

"And the Republicans may vote for it because they see a chance to claim glory and perhaps break the solid south in the next presidential campaign. You catch the idea?"

"What!" exclaimed the astounded Langdon.

"Well, who in hades will vote for it because it's for the good of the United States?" he gasped.

"I believe you will, senator," replied Haines, with ready confidence.

CHAPTER VIII.

HOW SENATOR LANGDON GETS A SECRETARY.

LANGDON leaned over and seized the arm of his interviewer.

"See here, young man, why aren't you in politics?" he said.

"Too busy, senator," replied Haines. "Besides, I like the newspaper game."

"Game?" queried Langdon.

"Oh, I use the word in a general sense, senator," replied Haines. "Pretty much everything is a 'game'—society, politics, newspaper work, business of every sort. Men and women make 'moves' to meet the moves of other men and women. Why, even in religion, the way some people play a"—

The speaker was interrupted by the appearance of Hope Georgia, who was searching for her father.

"Stay here and listen to what a hard task your old father has got," said the Mississippian to his daughter, whom he presented to Haines with a picturesque flourish reminiscent of the pride and chivalry of the old south. "He has the idea that those New Yorkers who read his paper would actually like to know something about me."

Hope Georgia stole many glances at the reporter as he talked with her father. He made a deep impression on her young mind. She had spent almost all her life on the plantation, her father providing her with a private tutor instead of sending her to boarding school, where her elder sister had been educated. Owing to the death of her mother the planter had desired to keep Hope Georgia at home for companionship. This good looking, clean cut, well built young man who was taking so big and so active a part of the world's work brought to her the atmosphere that her spirit craved. He made one an impression of ability, of earnestness of sincerity, and she was glad that her father approved of him.

Hope Georgia, by the same token, did not escape the attention of the interviewer. Her appealing charm of face and figure was accentuated by her dainty dress and a fleeting suggestion of naivete in poise and expression when she was amused. His first glance revealed to Haines that her eyes were gray, the gray that people say indicates the possessor to have those priceless qualities—the qualities that make the sweetest women true, that make the maiden's eyes in truth the windows of her soul, the qualities that make women womanly.

She sat close to her father, her hand in his, listening intently to the unfolding of a story of what to her was a mysterious world—the man's world, the strong man's world—which many a woman would give her all to enter and play a part therein.

"What else have you against a political career, Mr. Haines?" went on the senator, taking up their conversation.

"Well, my age for one thing. I haven't any gray hairs."

Langdon waved this objection aside. "I might arrange to pool ages with you. Sometimes I think we want young men in politics, like you."

The reporter shook his head.

"Old in age and young in politics, like you, Senator Langdon," he replied. "Politics I sometimes think is pure hypocrisy and sometimes something worse. A man gets disgusted with the trickery and dishonesty and corruption."

"Then," drawled Langdon, "the thing to do is to jump in and stop it! I read in the newspapers a great deal about corruption. The gentlemen in national politics whom I have had the honor of knowing—Senator Moseley, an intimate friend of thirty years; my present colleague, Senator Stevens, and others—have been as honest as the day is long."

"But the days do get short in November, when congress meets, don't they?" laughed Haines, rising. "I'm afraid I've taken too much of your time, and I seem to have talked a lot."

Langdon was amused.

"Does look like I'd been interviewing you. I reckon each one of us has got a pretty good notion of what the other man's like. I wanted it that way, and I like you, Mr. Haines. I've got a proposition to make to you. They tell me I'll need a secretary. Now, I think I need just such a young man as you. I don't know just exactly what the work would be or what the financial arrangements should be, but I think you and I would make a pretty good team. I wish you'd come." He turned to his daughter, with a smile. "What do you think of that, Hope Georgia? Isn't your dad right?"

Smiling her approval, the young girl squeezed her father's hand in her enthusiasm.

"I think it's a splendid idea, dad; just great! Won't you come, Mr. Haines? We—eh—I—I know my father would like to have you."

"Won't you come, Mr. Haines?"

As he stood before his two new found friends—for such Haines now considered the Mississippian and his daughter—he could not suppress feelings of surprise tinged with uncertainty. He had, like other newspaper men, received offers of employment from politicians who desired to increase their influence with the press. Sometimes the salary offered had been large, the work so light that the reporter could "earn" the money and yet retain his newspaper position, a scantily disguised species of bribery, which had wrecked the careers of several promising young reporters well known to Haines, young men who had been thus led into "selling their columns" by unscrupulous machine dictators.

Haines knew that the Mississippian had no ulterior purpose to serve in his offer, yet he must have time to think over the proposal.

"I thank you, senator," he finally said. "I appreciate the opportunity, coming from you, but I've never thought of giving up the newspaper profession. It's a fascinating career, one that I am too fond of to leave."

Langdon started to reply, when a delightfully modulated southern voice interrupted:

"Father, I've been out with Mrs. Spangler to look for some other rooms. I don't like this hotel, and I found some that I do like."

Haines turned to see a handsomely gowned young woman who had the stamp of a patrician's daughter in her bearing and her countenance—a brunette, with delicate features, though determination shone in her eyes and appeared in the self contained poise of her head. She was the imperious type of beauty and suggested to Haines the dry point etchings of Paul Helleu. He instinctively conceived her to be intensely ambitious, and of this Haines was soon to have unexpected evidence. Gazing at her with a sense of a growing admiration, Haines gave an involuntary start as Senator Langdon spoke:

"My daughter, Miss Carolina Langdon, Mr. Haines," said the senator.

Carolina was interested.

"Are you the newspaper man who is interviewing father? I hope you'll do a nice one. We want him to be a successful and popular senator. We'd like to help him if we could."

The correspondent bowed.

"I should say you certainly would help him to be a popular senator," he declared emphatically, failing to notice that Hope Georgia was somewhat annoyed at the enthusiasm displayed over her elder sister. In fact, Hope Georgia was suffering a partial if not total eclipse.

"I'm leaving it to Mr. Haines to put down the things I ought to say," broke in the senator. "He knows."

"Yes, he knows everything about Washington, Carolina," exclaimed Hope Georgia spiritedly.

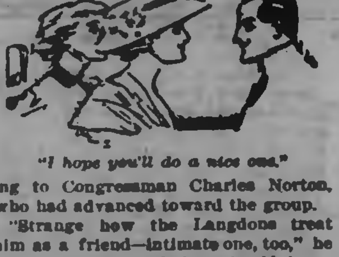
The older girl spoke eagerly.

"I wish you'd interview me, Mr. Haines. Ask me how I like Washington. I feel as though I must tell some one just how much I do like it! It is too wonderful!"

"I'd like mighty well to interview you, Miss Langdon," enthusiastically exclaimed Haines.

"I hope you will some time, Mr. Haines," remarked Carolina as she said goodby.

Watching her as she turned away, Haines saw her extend a warm greeting to Congressman Charles Norton, who had advanced toward the group.



"I hope you'll do a nice one."

"Strange how the Langdons treat him as a friend—intimate one, too," he thought. "What if they should learn of Norton's questionable operations at the capitol; of his connection with two unsavory 'deals,' one of which resulted in an amendment of the pure food law so that manufacturers of a valueless 'consumption cure' could continue to mislead the victims of the 'white plague;' Norton, who had uttered an epigram now celebrated in the taprooms of Washington, 'The paths of glory lead but to the graft.'"

"Miss Langdon is very beautiful and attractive, sir," said Haines, resuming with the senator.

"Yes," drawled the Mississippian. "Girls in the south generally are."

"Well, I must be going. I'll think about your secretaryship, Senator Langdon. Perhaps I can find some one."

"Wish you'd think about it for yourself," observed the senator, while Hope Georgia again nodded approval. "It would be a hard job. There are so many matters of political detail about which I am sadly inexperienced that really most of the work would fall on the secretary."

Bud Haines paused. Again he thought over Langdon's offer. Its genuineness appealed to him. Suddenly there dawned on him an idea of just what it might mean to be associated with this honest old citizen who had asked for his help—who needed it, as Haines knew only too well. He would be the senator's guide and confidant—his adviser in big matters. Why, he would practically be United States senator himself. He knew the "inside" as few others in Washington. Here was a chance to match his wit against that of Peabody, the boss of the senate; a chance to spoil some of the dishonest schemes of those who were adroitly "playing the game." He could bother, too, the intriguing members of the "third house," as the lobbyists are called. He could direct a lightning bolt into the camp of Andy Corrigan, who claimed the honor of being "speaker of the third house." These thoughts crowded into his mind. Then, too, he would become practically a member of the Langdon family and have association with the two charming daughters—with Carolina Langdon.

"It would be a great chance," he murmured half aloud; "next thing to being a senator."

The old Mississippian heard the young man's words.

"I reckon it would," he drawled in agreement.

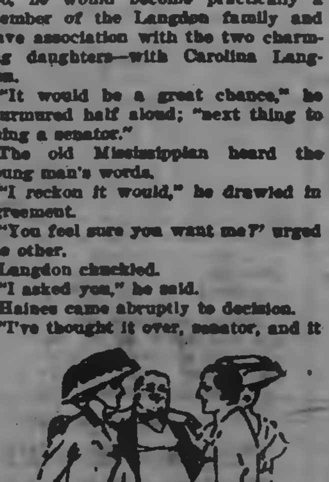
"You feel sure you want me?" urged the other.

Langdon chuckled.

"I asked you," he said.

Haines came abruptly to decision.

"I've thought it over, senator, and it seems to me it will be a great chance in every way. I'll accept. We'll fix it up tomorrow, and I'll try to make you a good secretary."



"It will be a great chance in every way. I'll accept."

Langdon held forth his hand.

"And I'll try to make you a good senator, my boy. Fix up nothing tomorrow. Your duties begin tonight. You are to come to dinner with me and my daughters."

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

Have Eyes Tested at Intervals

Whenever you feel uneasy in your spectacles, don't hesitate to call and see us. We are always glad to help you.

CONSCIENCE

The Inquiry Office of the Human Soul — Address by Rev. C. Carpenter

A large number of men attended the Princess Theatre yesterday afternoon. The Rev. C. Carpenter took for his subject, "The Inquiry Office."

He opened his subject by remarking that there had come to everyone at some time a parting of the ways, when directions had been wanted as to the course of right living. The "inquiry office" applied to was a man's own conscience.

Conscience has the power of answering questions with limitations, and the first action of an awakened conscience is to show the vast possibilities of life, and the necessity of the light of the Spirit of God.

In other words, conscience is the finger-post of God, and although conscience cannot exist without intellect as without intellect there is no manhood, yet intellect is not the source of conscience. Neither is morality the source. Morality and religion are not synonymous terms.

Religion is the union of man with God, and conscience is an entirely spiritual attribute.

He instanced Adam and Eve as two persons, intellectual and moral, and so long as they remained perfectly innocent no such thing as conscience was essential as a guide, but immediately sin took possession of them conscience awakes, and they seek to hide themselves from God. It is the God-given finger post which brings a man back to the influence of his Maker, and stands in its relation to Him as a man stands in relation to sin.

He went on to say that the word conscience was derived from come together and knowledge, and is a potentiality residing within a man, but unable to act without his will. It was purely personal to a living individual, and was guided and governed by the powers within a man. Only as a man realizes that he is a responsible being can he grasp the importance of keeping his conscience intact. If a man's conscience is pure his ideals will be high. Individuality, conscience and duty cannot be separated.

He appealed to his hearers to cultivate that God-given gift, and urged the importance of individual conscience to work upon the national conscience, that the spark of Divinity may result in a straight, clean, moral life for the individual, and thus raise the conscience of the nation to take a higher moral tone.

CHILDRENS' DAY WAS OBSERVED YESTERDAY

Children's Day was observed in all of the Anglican churches yesterday. A special children's service was held in St. John's church at 3 p.m., the children singing well, and listening to a good address by the rector, who exhorted all to take the utmost advantage of two gifts of God, the Bible and the church.

At the morning service the rector urged the congregation to see that the work in Sunday school was their special duty, and in the evening the Rev. Charles Carpenter pleaded for more sympathy in all our dealings with children. At both services excellent solos were sung by Mr. W. J. P. Way, of Toronto, who possesses a bass voice of fine calibre. The choir, numbering about forty-five voices, sang the services most impressively, a feature of the singing at night being Barnby's tune to 'Now the Day is Over.' The hymn, 'Eternal Father,' was sung also, several relatives of members of St. John's being on the sea this week.

Several offertories were taken up yesterday for All Saints' building fund.

SISTER CHURCH IS GENEROUS

Yesterday at St. John's was "All Saints' Day" in the sense that All Saints' church was uppermost in the minds of the congregation. In the morning Canon Davidson appealed on behalf of the building fund, and expressed feelings of fellowship with the rector and congregation, and interest in the great work undertaken. He appealed to all members of the congregation to contribute in the special envelopes placed in the pews. The church wardens of All Saints' church were present and assisted the St. John's wardens in taking up the offertory, their presence being much appreciated as appropriate to the occasion. In the evening, in addition to special envelopes, the plate collection was given to All Saints' fund. handsome electric candelabra used in the chancel of St. John's has been presented on behalf of the congregation.

"THE WINNING MISS"

"The Winning Miss" proved to be just as winning as the advance notices said she was and theatre-goers who were at the Grand in goodly numbers last night were greatly pleased with her and her fine company.

This is one musical play that came out of the west, and made good.

The comedy part is in the hands of Max Bloom. He has not the reputation in this city of several other near-comedians, but he is really funny and a hard worker.

The supporting company is excellent.

Miss Loraine Lester, the winning miss, is a most attractive little lady, as graceful and as winsome as the most critical could desire, and she both sang and danced well. She is as fragile as a summer girl's engagement, but she made a big hit last evening. The chorus was large, well trained and musical, and the girls above the average in looks. They could dance, too, with more than ordinary grace.—Toronto World.

While working on a building in Vancouver, B.C., James Lewis slipped and fell to the ground. He died with a fractured skull.

A MONEY TAKING STORE WINDOW

In connection with a two-column cut published in 'Hardware and Metal' that magazine says in its current issue—

An attractive window of sporting goods arranged by H. J. Hanwell, for the Kingan Hardware Co., Peterborough, a fortnight ago, is shown in the accompanying picture.

The ground or base of window was covered with hay, while the background was the window curtain, covered up here and there with branches of cedar, giving it a rustic appearance, kites, eagles, ducks and squirrels were posed in natural positions on the right of the window, and the centre was a pyramid of boxes of shells by various makers, Dominion Cartridge Co., U. M. C. and Winchester, the poster of the U. M. C. being displayed across the window. Guns and rifles were placed in positions where onlookers could see them, the price being placed on each one displayed. On the corner of the window was a lighted sign supplied by E. C. Atkins & Co., to advertise their saws.

The window caused a lot of comment, and was the means of selling a lot of goods.

COMPANY HELD ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the share-Limited, was held at the company's holders of the William Hamilton Co., office on Saturday afternoon and was largely attended. The operations of the company during the year were discussed and favorably commented on and the utmost confidence and satisfaction was expressed by those present. The statement of profit and loss showed that the earnings of the company for the past year were sufficient to pay an eight per cent dividend on the preference stock, and to carry forward a substantial balance to the credit of profit and loss.

The report was adopted, the tenderer, Mr. T. F. Matthews, congratulating the directors and officials on the favorable showing.

Taking up the election of officers, all were re-elected. The board will be Mr A. McFarlane, president; Mr. Geo. G. Gladman and Mr. W. H. Collier, 1st and 2nd vice-presidents, and Messrs. J. C. Smith, D. Spence, L. A. Potvin and C. R. Cameron directors.

During the year the company has filled important contracts for the Peterborough Water Commission, the city of Hull, Que., the Simcoe Railway and Power Co., of Midland, and many others. It has now 155 employees and a very large amount of orders on hand.

It is a gratifying thing to find that the company is successful and promises to be of large importance in the industrial life of the city.

The auditors report was read by Mr. W. R. Morris, C.A., and he was re-appointed auditor for the ensuing year.

Annual Thank Offering

The annual thank offering meeting of the W.F.M.S. of St. Andrew's church will be held on Tuesday, 18th inst., at 3.30 o'clock. The meeting will be addressed by Mrs. Fee, who has spent a number of years in China. All the ladies of the congregation are urged to be present.

DEPARTING TEACHER HONORED

Mrs. Gurney's efforts as a Sunday school teacher have been appreciated at Murray St. Church. This was shown yesterday by her class. A presentation, accompanied by an address was made to her by the members, in which the hope was expressed that she would always entertain pleasant memories of her association with the class. Mrs. Gurney, although surprised, replied in a few suitable words.

The address was as follows—

Peterborough, Oct. 9. 1910.

Dear Mrs. Gurney,—It is with deep and sincere regret that we learn of your early departure from our midst, and we ask you to accept these few words as a small token of our esteem.

Your place will be almost impossible to fill, as you have been, as it were, a real pillar of our beloved church.

During the years you have been our teacher, it has always been a source of great pleasure for us to come to Sabbath school, knowing that thereby we could rely on hearing, in such an entertaining way, the dear old Bible teachings, fully and ably explained, and we always looked forward to this pleasure from Sunday to Sunday.

We trust that God will bless you in your new home, and also give you wisdom to take up a new sphere of labor in His vineyard.

Should you visit our city in the near future we would be pleased to have you visit our class.

We hope you will accept this small present as a practical expression of our deepest feeling of love and friendship we have for you.

Your Affectionate Class.

CHIMES FUND

Further generous gifts can be reported to-day, for the Chimes Fund, showing continued and increasing interest in it. Seventy girls of the C. G. E. lamp department, sent in some $12, through Miss Lulu Wallace. The letter carriers of the city of their own idea subscribed in a body, raising $2.50. A second handsome contribution was received from the employees of the Quaker Oats Co., through Mr. F. L. Peat, aggregating $13.25, making a splendid total for the men of this company. Extra sums were also received per Mr. J. Murphy and from the girls of the factory. Mr. W. G. Cox, of Toronto, sent a kind donation. The list to-day stands at $4,941.72.

Thanks In Advance

So much interest was displayed in the "Where they Are and what they are Doing" column which appeared in the Review on Saturday that it has been decided to make this column a feature of our Saturday issues. If any of your family or friends have left the city, write or telephone us, giving us their present occupation and address and any little incident that may be of interest in connection with them, and we will be glad to use it in connection with the other items collected by our reporters.

DISORDERLY YOUNG MAN PARTED WITH $8.35

Further evidence was heard at the police court this morning, in regard to the trouble on the afternoon of Sunday, October 9, between John Richardson and a quartette of Ashburnham youths, and Magistrate Dumble decided that the young fellow who struck the blow was the cause of the whole disturbance.

His Worship imposed a fine of $5 with $3.35 costs, the same to be paid forthwith. This fine was for the disorderly conduct.

Other charges of loitering on and obstructing the public highway were not proceeded with.

The complainant, Richardson, claimed that on the Sunday afternoon, while he was on the way to his home one of four young men standing on the corner called him names, and when he made objection to this he was struck twice on the face.

ONLY ONE BLOW.

The defence claimed that the only words directed toward Richardson, as he passed were "Is that the navy?" He then crossed the street and endeavored to retaliate with his fists. He, however, received the only blow.

Asked by Mr. Kerr, who appeared for Mr. Richardson, as to the necessity of striking the blow, the two witnesses this morning were inclined to believe that the force of the blow might have been lessened, and further, that the blow need not have figured in the trouble at all.

RASPBERRIES IN OCTOBER

Berries in October—rich, ripe, red raspberries. A healthy sample of this luscious berry was brought into the Review office Saturday by Mr. G. A. Newberry, No. 5 dam.

Mr. Newberry says he picked a pint of the berries, and there are lots more.

The bushes are on the bank of the canal and hang downward. Mr. Newberry thinks the protection afforded the berries by the foliage being overhead is responsible for their disregard of the cold weather.

THE MOST IMPRESSIVE CEREMONY OF ANY YET HELD WERE THOSE THAT WERE HELD YESTERDAY IN PARK ST. BAPTIST CHURCH; SAM LUTTRELL'S GREAT APPEAL

That the interest in the evangelistic meetings, being held at the Park Street Baptist Church, are still holding the attention of the public, was manifested by the large and appreciated audiences that greeted Dr. Sam. Luttrell.

In the morning the doctor took for his text II Corinthians 5: 1—the subject being Home, and the tears flowed unbidden down the cheeks of all present as in tender times, and with his own face stained with tears, Dr. Luttrell took them back to the old home, and recalled the hallowed influences of "Home Sweet Home" and the mother who made the home sweet, by her prayers and patient attention and interest in her wayward boy.

Oh yes! many a mother in Peterborough is singing to herself day in and day out, "Where is my wandering boy to-night, the boy of my tenderest care; the boy that was once my joy and light, the child of my love and prayer."

But our homes are broken up here, Death divides us, distance separates us, but thank God, those of us who believe in Jesus, have an eternal home in heaven that can never be dissolved.

In the afternoon, the auditorium of the church, was again comfortably filled with men, who listened to a very manly appeal from Dr. Luttrell upon the subject "The Man You Can't Down." He took for the foundation of his remarks, "I can do all things through Christ who strengthens me." If a man stood off, and repeated the first five words—alone—he was a liar. "I can do all things." that is a lie. Any drunkard knows that. Resolutions broken, pledges forfeited, sold cures galore, cures, cures, cures I know all about them. I know that man who stands up and says, I can take a drink and let it alone. I see men do the first, but not the latter. Why don't they leave it alone? They can't! They can't! Drink holds them in its relentless grip, and they have no power in their aim. Will power gone, character wasted, mothers fond hopes lost.

But there is a man who has taken Jesus Christ as his Saviour and friend and he can stand upon a sea of booze and say, without touching a drop, "I can do all things through Christ, who strengthens me." You can't down a man like that, all the devils in hell can't down that man.

The male quartette of the George Street Methodist Church rendered two suitable selections that were much appreciated by all present.

In the evening the church was taxed to its utmost capacity. A most impressive message was delivered upon the crucifixion of Christ.

Several decided for Christ, and a number followed their Lord down into the baptismal waters. During the sermon Miss Ethel Hill, assisted by her brothers, Percy and Harry, sang sweetly and effectively "Christ Will Hold You Fast."

Meeting to-night at 8 p.m.

Tuesday evening will be the last night of this most profitable mission.

Dr. Sam. Luttrell will give the story of his life, and tell how grace stooped to rescue him from a drunkard's grave. A free will offering will be taken to defray the expenses of the mission. All invited.

NOTED IRISH LECTURER AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH

In the auditorium of Murray St. Baptist Church to-night, Rev. Mr. Boyd, of Ireland, will speak on Irish Baptist Missions.

Mr. Boyd recently addressed meetings in three Montreal churches, and on each occasion the churches could not accommodate all who desired to hear him. With such an interesting lecturer to speak here to-night no doubt a large number will grasp the opportunity of hearing him.

AROUND AND ABOUT

Satisfactory results have attended the removal of the false work at the new Smith street bridge and Sunday visitors obtained a good idea of what the structure will look like when completed. An inspection from a northern point makes a fine impression.

Meanwhile the granolithic wall at Inverlea Park shows signs of further destruction and the comments heard are not complimentary.

Workmen are engaged in tearing down what was recently the premises of the Colonial Weaving Company at Auburn and it is understood the preliminary work in connection with the new power dam will be proceeded with this week.

Contractors are not losing much time these days or at least are endeavoring not to do so. There remains much outside work to be completed, and there is no lack of employment. Some contractors are finding difficulty in securing enough help.

The Normal school and its lawns certainly presents a pleasing sight. When summer comes around again this property will eclipse anything in the city, and that's taking Central Park and its magnificent buildings into consideration too.

It is no trouble now to find the offices of the chief of police, the publicity commissioner, the medical health offices or the assessors. An attractive sign at the foot of the stairs west of the clerk's office, gives the necessary information and the rest is a dream.

A fair miss tripped along Hunter street Saturday evening with a large in fact an enormous paper box. No doubt the contents was a hat, but a blind man suddenly receiving his sight, might be pardoned were he to guess, and he probably would, that the box contained the costumes of a musical comedy company and that the miss was carrying the load on a bet.

PETERBOROUGH HARDWARE NEWS

HARDWARE AND METAL

Peterboro, Oct. 10—Last Saturday was the busiest day in Peterboro for some time. Nearly every farmer coming in had on his wanted list an order for glass and putty. Painting has not been so brisk as in other falls, the high price of oil and turpentine holding it back, everyone waiting for the long deferred drop in price of that necessity, and stores are buying sparingly practically from hand to mouth.

All dealers report a busy time in hunting goods. Shot guns and rifles are selling freely. This being the first season for partridge for some years, everybody who has a gun is waiting for Oct. 15, partridge being very plentiful in the surrounding country. Ammunition is moving well.

The Kingan Hardware Co. this week has a novel display of Jap-a-lac. Their north window, the floor of which required some renovating, their window trimmer hit on the novel idea of at first beautifying that sore spot, and at the same time advertising one of the many uses of Jap-a-lac. A portion of the floor had been left in its pristine condition, the portion next being given a coat of ground color and crack filler, the next a coat of graining color, and showing the Jap-a-lac graining tool with which it was grained, the final portion showing the finished floor. It has been the means of many sales. Neat show cards explain on each portion the process that portion has undergone. The various posters and window trims issued by the Glidden Varnish Co. have been effectively used in the display.

The Best Stove Company and Higgins Hardware Company report a busy season in heaters and stoves. Their tinsmiths and furnace hands are all working overtime.

Adam Hall & Son have decided to relinquish their retail store, and during the past week have been disposing of their stock of tin and graniteware, stoves and heaters, by means of a sale and report a rushing business. They intend to keep only to their line of steam and hot water fitting and plumbing, and to go more largely into manufacturing their lines of ranges built for hotels and lumbering concerns. They have erected a foundry alongside the Grand Trunk tracks, where they will employ about 40 moulders and machinists.

Mr. Forsythe, the mechanical superintendent of the Lundy Shovel & Tool Company, has resigned his position. The company has secured two experts in shovel manufacturing from the old country. The same firm has applied to the city council for a franchise to lay pipe on the streets of the city, with a view to supplying natural gas.

Andrew Robinson, lately head salesman with Adam Hall, has accepted a position with the James Robertson Co., of Toronto.

W. O. LaBelle of the Kingan Hardware Co., is confined to his house with sickness, and all his friends will be pleased to soon see him around again.

The Peterboro Hardware Co's new wholesale warehouse is nearing completion.

Another lot of that wide Swiss Embroidery for Tuesday. S. H. Knox & Co.

LINDSAY "CONS" TAKEN BACK

Conductors Thomas Ringland and Fred Purvis, of Lindsay, received good news this morning from Grand Trunk headquarters, namely, that they are to report for service and report for duty at once. Conductor Haskill and the various other men who have been off duty since the strike, received like notices, and all will return to work at their old and regular positions.

It is stated that 27 strike-breakers were let go at Toronto yesterday, and their positions filled with the old employees.—Lindsay Post.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind :—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

GOOD SCORES

Were Made in Shooting Competition at Yeotes' Gallery—C. Smith Hits the Highest Notch, Making a Mark of 30—Shooting Continued This Week.

There was lively competition in the shooting contest at Yeotes' shooting gallery last week, and close arguments for the prizes resulted right up to the conclusion of the tourney on Saturday night at 10 o'clock. The contest opened last Monday. There were three styles of shooting—rest, offhand and fly shooting—and the prizes were a turkey for the rest shooting and a pair of geese for each of the other two classes. The highest score possible was 36, and the nearest approach to this was made by Harold Smith, who scored 30 in the rest shooting. C. Smith won the offhand with 27, and E. Simmons the fly-shooting with 26.

The tournament will be continued this week, and Mr. Yeotes says he will offer more tempting prizes than he did last week.

The scores in the competition were;

GOSSIP OF THE ROPED ARENA

An old-time fighter was found dead in Paterson, N.J., a few days ago, having been asphyxiated by gas. He was Tom Bate, at one time lightweight champion of England, and and held the championship four years. In 1888 he fought Pete Bannigan for the title. In the 22nd round the police interfered and the fight was declared a draw. This so displeased Bate that he left England, and came to this country.

Philadelphia Jack O'Brien is one of the thriftiest fighters in the profession. Jack owns a world of real estate in Philadelphia and has a big bunch of coin crowded into several of the Philadelphia banks. He is now building a structure in Philadelphia, 100 feet wide and 200 feet long, seating 6,000 people, to be used for boxing purposes. The location is on Market street, in one of the busiest spots in in town. The hall will be the largest of its kind in Philadelphia and Jack will rent it out whenever the occasion demands for conventions and other big gatherings. It is understood that a wealthy Philadelphia man is backing O'Brien in the enterprise.

New Orleans is ambitious to become the centre of the pugilistic world once more. It was planned to hold bouts of long duration in the vicinity of the city. The first may be between Al. Kaufman and Bill Lang, to be staged some time during November. The present idea is to build the long engagements at a spot across the river from the city proper, where opposition might arise on the part of the municipal authorities would not be felt. Within the city 10 and 15-round bouts are held almost every week.

Pal Moore, the crack little Philadelphia light-weight, and his championship aspirations have been receiving a consistent bumping of late. The Quaker scrapper, who has been touted as a comer of nothing less than world's championship qualities, has evidently fallen short at a fearful gait, cleaning up everything last winter and early in the spring, but since the game has been in swing this fall he had failed to develop anything savoring of the sensational. His two latest bouts have been with Owen Moran, the crafty English 133-pounder, and the Quaker City boy has been obliged to take second honors on both occasions.

Ad Wolgast seems to have about as hard luck as any champion in recent years. It begins to look as though the champion was all through, for with an arm such as he is suffering with at present it is hardly probable that he will be in trim for a long time to come. He fractured his left early last winter in a fight at Milwaukee, but a long rest of about five months was apparently of no use. In his recent bout with Tommy McFarland he opened his break again, and now it is worse than at first. That means a long retirement from the ring, and it is safe to predict that Wolgast will not be seen in action much before next spring.

Jack Johnson, the champion fighter, has now turned his attention to automobile racing. The negro pugilistic wonder has got on a match with Barney Oldfield, the famous auto driver, to be run at Sheepshead Bay, October 20. Johnson is a good driver, but it is hardly probable that he will be able to defeat a racer of Oldfield's calibre. The negro is taking a big chance in entering the race, as he has theatrical contracts in sight that mount far up into the thousands. The Contest Board of the American Automobile Association gave Johnson a license as a driver, but later cancelled it. The race will be run, however, regardless of the board's action.

(Special To The Review.)

Philadelphia, Oct. 17.—Philadelphia is baseball mad to-day, and the great weather prevailing will set up a new record for an attendance at a world's series contest.

Manager Mack has announced that "Big Chief" Bender and Thomas will be the battery for the Athletics, and Manager Chance will send Overall to the mound and Johnny Kling will work the big mit.

Some big bets are recorded, and the two teams have an even break.

Scribe Park, Philadelphia, Oct. 17—2 p.m., Special—Both teams are working out, and the crowd at Scribe Park is excited to the highest notch.

Thousands are without the gates, and every point at which a sight of the battle can be obtained is taken up.

Nearby house holders are reaping a harvest, as big prices have been offered for places of vantage.

Scribe Park, Philadelphia, Oct. 17—The game has commenced and neither team scored in the first innings. The Athletics took two runs in the second and one in the third.

Scribe Park, Philadelphia, Oct. 17—The final score—

CANNIFF WON SENIOR AND PHELAN JUNIOR CUP

Competition for Howden-Eastwood Trophies Sees Honors Change Hands—Afternoon of Good Sport at Riverside

The Howden-Eastwood trophies rest with Stan Caniff of the Y. M. C. A. and Nagle Phelan, of the T.A.S. athletic club, as a result of the senior and junior competitions held at Riverside Park Saturday afternoon, Caniff taking senior honors with a total of 3.143 points, and Phelan the junior with 1,901 1-2 points.

Caniff's nearest competitor was Hy. Wood, the dethroned champion, with 2.744 points.

Walter Flowers and Phelan composed the field for the junior events and the former's points totalled 1,788.

Caniff won handily, doing particularly good work in the high jump and shot put. His performance in the high jump was probably the feature of the afternoon. Wood stopped at 4 ft. 9in. but the new champion kept right on and cleared 5ft .3in.

Flowers headed Phelan in all but the half mile run and then made a big mistake. In the first lap of the half mile walk, he dropped out and apparently, unknown to himself then, the junior cup slipped away from his grasp, for Phelan finished in 4.24 and gathered 502 points.

Had Flowers finished this event, even in five minutes, he would have taken 412 points, and this would have been accompanied by the cup.

Egbert Keeley took the honors last year.

The method of scoring was new in this city and is more satisfactory than the usual five, three and one method. By Saturday's system, which is used in the all round American competition, 1,000 points goes with the record time of any event. For instance, a runner doing 100 yards in record time would get 1,000 points and for slower time he would get a correspondingly lower number, but if he did not run in faster time than 14 3-5 secs., he would not score.

The one mile run was a procession, Willis jumping into the lead and increasing the distance until he gained a lap on Caniff as he finished.

There was some fun in the half-mile walk, and Smith, while he was first man, was disqualified for as the judges and a whole lot of the spectators claimed, running. Nagle Phelan gave the best exhibition of the real square heel and toe, junior and seniors, as in the previous events competing together. First place was given to McMartin.

STANLEY KETCHELL SHOT AND INJURIES WERE FATAL

Middleweight Champion Pugilist is Dead—Man Who Fired Shot During Quarrel, Captured—Woman in The Affair

Springfield, Mo., Oct. 16.—Stanley Ketchel, champion middleweight pugilist of the world, died here last night as the result of being early in the day shot by Walter A. Hurtz, a ranch hand. The shooting took place while Ketchel was at breakfast. Hurtz and Ketchel had had words the previous night and Hurtz retired in an ugly mood but little was thought of the matter. In the morning, as Ketchel was seated alone at the breakfast table, Hurtz entered the ranch house, and, pointing his rifle at the fighter, shouted, "Throw up your hands."

Ketchel was taken by surprise, but instead of complying, arose. His back was half turned toward his assailant when Hurtz, but a few feet away, fired. The bullet hit Ketchel below the right shoulder, ranged upwards, and entered the right lung. A moment later, when Charles Bailey, superintendent of the ranch, rushed in from another part of the building, Hurtz was just disappearing through the doorway.

"He shot me," said the prostrate fighter, as he feebly pointed in the direction taken by Hurtz. After relating the brief details Ketchel became unconscious.

Out in the wooded hills, east of here, Hurtz, Ketchel's slayer, heavily armed, is fleeing before a pack of bloodhounds and a posse of officers and citizens. Dickerson, the owner of the ranch, has placed a price of $5,000 on the capture of Hurts, dead or alive. The posse is armed with repeating rifles. Hurtz is believed to be a desperate man, and none intends to take any chances on asking him to surrender. He will be fired upon on sight.

Hurtz will battle for his life if he shoots at all, with the revolver of his victim. After shooting Ketchel, Hurtz rushed from the house into the yard. He then faltered a moment, turned and went back into the room where Ketchel lay upon the floor. Reaching into Ketchel's pocket he removed the pugilist's 38-calibre revolver and struck him over the head with it. Then he ran from the house.

Friends of the deceased fighter say he was robbed before or after he was shot. When he went to the Dickerson ranch he carried about $800 in cash with him. There was no money in his pockets when assistance first reached him after he had been shot.

LATER.

Ketchel's slayer has been captured.

LOCALS LOST BY SMALL SCORE

Junior Collegiates Played Fourth Team of Port Hope T.C.S—Score Was 1-0

A junior team from the local Collegiate Institute went to Port Hope Saturday, where they were defeated by the fourth team of Trinity College School by a 1—0 score, the College boys securing their tally on a rouge in the second half. In the first two periods of the play Port Hope had the wind and managed to keep the ball in their visitors' territory the greater part of the time, but could not connect for a score. The local students gave a good account of themselves and will endeavor to take the return game, which is being arranged to be played here next Saturday.

WOULDN'T LET MURPHY PLAY

But He Coached St. Mary's Who Won With a Score of 9-0

Connie Murphy did not play with St. Mary's, Saturday, at Toronto, because the management of Eaton's objected.

Murphy's name did not appear on the Saints' lineup, which was handed in before the contest, but he was allowed to act as coach.

St. Mary's scored a shut-out by the score of 9—0, taking all of their counters in the last two innings.

Bill Hawkins pitched and Harry Burridge worked at first for Eaton's. Downs twirled for the winners.

A DELIGHTFUL HAIR DRESSING THAT MAKES HAIR GROW

Favorite With Men and Women the Country Over

There is reason for the phenomenal sale of Parisian Sage in the Dominion since it was first introduced into Canada.

And the reason is plain to all. Parisian Sage does just what it is advertised to do.

Ask Wm. Madill about it. He will tell you that he rigidly guarantees is to cure dandruff, stop falling hair or itching scalp in two weeks, or money back.

There is no reason whatever why any man or woman should fail to take advantage of the above generous offer.

But one thing that has made Parisian Sage so famous is its peculiar power to turn the harsh, unattractive hair that many women possess into luxuriant and radiant hair in a short time. Women of refinement the country over are using it and it never disappoints. Read this letter:

"I procured Parisian Sage and found that it was a great hair tonic and cleanser. I have used other preparations, but Parisian Sage cleaned the salp, stopped all irritation, made my hair fluffy, silky, and left no trace of stickiness as some other hair tonics had." Mrs. Sarah Sanderhoff, 1103 N. Washington St., Owosso, Mich., June 22, 1909.

Sold by leading druggists everywhere, and in Peterborough by Wm. Madill, for 50 cents a large bottle. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package; mail orders filled, charges prepaid, by the Canadian makers, Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont.

"I find Parisian Sage a good hair remedy. My brother has also used Parisian Sage and says it is fine."—Yours sincerely, Julia Corbin, Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 29, 1909.

THE STOMACH.

Its Power to Resist Its Own Gastric Juices Is a Puzzle.

One of the greatest questions disturbing the minds of physiologists both past and present is that of the stomach's digesting powers. It is asked why the stomach does not digest itself. It is well known that gastric juices have the power to digest the tissue of which the stomach is made. One of the things actually manufactured by the body, secreted in the glands near the stomach and poured into it, is hydrochloric acid, a powerful agent that will eat up almost anything. Why it does not eat the stomach up is problematical.

It is known that a stomach from a dead animal or man can be digested by a living man. It has been found out also that when a man is killed accidentally and his stomach is in the process of digesting, if the body be kept warm, his whole stomach will be digested and possibly, too, adjacent organs, as liver, pancreas, etc. From this it was argued that the "principle of life" kept the process from going on in a living being. Subsequently, however, this was proved to be untrue. A living frog was put in an unconscious condition and his leg inserted through a small hole in a dog's stomach, the dog being alive and well. It was found that the frog's leg was wholly digested in the process, although living. So the last reason conceivable was proved incapable of explaining the phenomenon.

About the only conclusion left is that the stomach does gradually actually eat itself up, but that it is being constantly rebuilt. However, as this experiment is hard to perform and as no results have so far been announced in this direction, we are left in a state of absolute ignorance, and all we can do is to be devoutly thankful to Provi-

of its old settlers dies. The man who came into the wilderness with his Red River cart and saw the first bushel of wheat ground into flour—in a mortar, maybe—is a character that the East knows not of. The old settler still inhabits the West. The newcomer who was too young to vote—if there had been any place to vote—in the mid-seventies is probably a grandfather to-day. The grandchild of the first white boy born in Manitoba is alive in Winnipeg to-day. The Westerner knows how the death of the oldest inhabitant can be a real climacteric. After he is gone there remains no one who can remember a time when the town was not. And, after all, what town can say more than that?

VILLIERS WAS ANGRY.

Reminiscence of War Correspondent's Lecture Tour In Canada.

Frederick Villiers, the famous war correspondent, who has declared his intention of settling in the Canadian West, was on a lecturing tour through Canada some half-dozen years ago. Among the places in which Villiers was billed to speak was a Western Ontario city in which lectures are notoriously ill-attended. So much is this the case that the manager of the theatre where the Villiers' talk was to be given did not think it worth while to advertise his coming at all extensively.

Villiers came. The local newspapers recognized the bigness of the man, and gave him a couple of columns of space. These papers, however, did not appear until the evening of his lecture—too late to bring him an audience. When the distinguished visitor came on the platform, there were about one dozen and a half people in the badly-heated house. Most of them had come in on passes. The lecturer looked over his audience with some surprise, but began his talk without comment, and carried it through to the end without abbreviation, but also, it must be said, without marked enthusiasm.

The latter quality he reserved for a little extra speech which was not on the program. In it he delineated in concise, but cutting, terms the character of that particular theatre manager, who had neglected to advertise his coming. The audience, which had applauded feebly throughout the regular lecture, was moved to still more marked appreciation. The thirty-six hands beat as one, as Mr. Villiers continued to outline his opinion of the manager, who was squirming uncomfortably in the doorway. And as the audience dispersed, its members looked in vain for the usual form at the exit. The manager had fled. Mr. Villiers' "roast" is still remembered in that Ontario town as one of the most scathing ever delivered within its borders.

Malcolm Campbell, for thirty years clerk of the township of Fingal, has resigned.

Commission For Detroit.

Detroit, Oct. 15.—A plan is on foot to substitute the commission form of government for the present mayor, city council and boards.

As proposed, it will be a combination of the Des Moines and Boston plans, including the election of a mayor and nine aldermen at large. These ten men would perform the duties of the estimators and other boards, devoting all their time to the work and would receive large salaries. If the movement crystalizes, it will be submitted to the voters in 1912.

Kaiser's Advice to Students.

Berlin, Oct. 15.—In the course of a state banquet, concluding the celebration of the centenary of the University of Berlin, the Kaiser gave orders that a number of students, who had dine at a special table in the gallery, be presented to him. He engaged them in conversation, urging less drinking of alcoholic liquors, and adding that the students must devote more attention to outdoor sports.

SINGS ITS DEATH SONG.

A Peculiar Bird Found in the Jungles of South America.

There is a queer bird in the jungles of northern South America which is called the "pauji" by the natives, but is known to science as the galeated curassow. It is chiefly remarkable because it sings its own death song.

It does not really sing, but makes a deep humming noise which sounds very much like the Spanish words "El muerto esta aqui" (the corpse lies here).

"It is while uttering this lugubrious chant," said a South American traveler, "that the pauji usually meets its death, for the hunter can then easily track it to its retreat, and it falls a victim, as the Indians say, to its own death song."

If the pauji gets suspicious it immediately ceases humming, and that is a sure indication to the hunter that the bird has seen him or scents danger. In such a case the only thing for the sportsman to do is to remain perfectly still. The bird may become reassured after waiting awhile and again begin to call, "The corpse lies here." It can then be cautiously approached and killed.

If it is only wounded the pauji usually escapes, though it cannot fly much better than the ordinary domestic fowl. It is very fleet of foot and will outrun the hunter until it is lost in the dense undergrowth of the jungle.

In the mating season the male pauji is the most pugnacious of birds and will fight its own kind whenever it meets them. Often the fight ends in the annihilation of both combatants.

SALVE FOR HIS WOUND.

A Strenuous Scene That Was Not on the Bill of the Play.

Giovanni Grasso, a Sicilian actor of unusual dramatic energy, was playing in Florence in one of his fiercest parts, where he had to stab his enemy with a dagger. Suddenly, in the heat of his passion, Grasso let the weapon slip out of his hand. It alighted in the pit on a man's head, cutting it slightly.

An indignant member of the audience flung the knife back to the stage, where it was dexterously caught by Grasso. Raising it aloft in his hand and as if it were accursed, Grasso smashed it in two and then stamped upon it.

Then, with a swift bound, Grasso was in the pit beside the injured man. The next minute he had climbed back to the boards, with the victim in his arms.

After settling him in a chair Grasso threw himself on his knees and began a long entreaty for forgiveness. This was rapidly granted by the much embarrassed playgoer, who on his side begged to be allowed to return to his seat.

But this was not to be until Grasso, weeping copiously, had bestowed no fewer than fifty resounding kisses on the man's blushing cheeks.

The action was greeted with loud cheers, and after Grasso had gracefully bowed his thanks the play was resumed and successfully concluded.—London Express.

Perils of the Hair Cut.

"Ouch!" cried the barber and something besides. He stuck the end of his thumb in his mouth and began sucking it.

"Cut yourself?" asked the man in the chair.

"No; it's an ingrowing hair," replied the barber—"an ingrowing hair under my thumb nail."

The man in the chair laughed.

"Fact," said the barber. "It isn't an uncommon thing either. In giving a customer a hair cut a bit of hair often lodges under the finger nail, and if it isn't removed it is apt to fester and get sore. Sometimes we don't even know it's there until it begins to get in its fine work. It hurts like the dickens sometimes. If you don't believe me, ask any barber and he'll tell you the same thing."—New York Times.

A Gun Club's Treasure.

Thirteen million cartridge shells, the result of eleven years of shooting by the members of a gun club, have been gathered into a huge pile by one of the leading sporting organizations of England. Eleven years ago one of the members conceived the idea of having the members save all their shells and deposit them on the pile. The shell bank is now the club's most prized possession. If a single man were to shoot one cartridge a second day and night it would take him about twenty-five years to discharge 13,000,000. The club maintains a vigilant guard over its precious shell pile.

Filial Repartee.

Richard Brinsley Sheridan, who was always distressed for money, was one day hacking his face with a dull razor when he turned to his eldest son and said:

"Tom, if you open any more oysters with my razor I'll cut you off with a shilling."

"Very well, father," said Tom, "but where will you get the shilling?"

The Prize Holder.

"I understand you have a fine track team here," said the visitor to the man who was showing him over the college campus. "What individual holds most of the medals?"

"The town pawnbroker," answered his guide after due deliberation.—New York Journal.

He had committed suicide, apparently, on the day of the murders.

In order to make death by drowning certain, Restelli had attached to himself two pneumatic brass hammers, weighing 75 pounds, and then had handcuffed his wrists together.

Forest Fires Raging.

Fort William, Oct. 15.—While it is not thought that any settlements are endangered the shores of the western half of Lake Superior are covered with smoke from forest fires.

Lake captains arriving yesterday say that the pall of smoke hanging over the lake is more menacing to shipping than an ordinary fog. Horns on both the north and south shores have steadily sounded warnings for the past twenty-four hours.

Wreck on Lake Nepigon.

Port Arthur, Oct. 15.—One of the two steamers operated by Revillon Bros. on Lake Nepigon ran on the rocks of Shakespere Island and is likely a total loss, with cargo consisting of six hundred bags of cement, 30 tons of hay and several tons of camp supplies. The loss will seriously interfere with taking supplies into railway construction camps for the winter.

PREACHED FAREWELL SERMON

Canon Davidson preached the final sermon in the present All Saints' Church last night. He was given a special invitation to do so by the rector and congregation, he being rector of the parish when the church was built, and also being identified with the work at that time. The church was then a mission hall in connection with St. John's church.

His text was taken from Ezra, third chapter, last three verses, which described the scene when the corner stone of the second temple was laid, when voices of joy and thanksgiving were mingled.

This brought us to one great national characteristic. We do not give sufficient expression to our feelings to make life interesting. We sometimes smother the feelings we have.

We cultivate the heads of our children and their working powers without a corresponding culture of their heart on five days of the week. It is most important, then, that our efforts on Sunday be devoted to the culture of the heart, and higher feelings and aspirations. To this end proper expression should be encouraged. Men and women should not be ashamed of tears and other evidences of expressions of heart-broken sorrow or grief. The inward feelings should be brought but stimulated and cultivated.

As we look backward we cannot but have feelings of sorrow; as we look forward we are filled with hope and joy. Looking backward over the past we see successive instances of the upbuilding of All Saints' church. In its inception it had sprung up through the enterprising efforts of a small band of men and women, under the late rector, Rev. J. R. Beck. In 1889, when the speaker had taken charge of the work the attendance at the little Sunday school was about twenty-five in round numbers, and a tiny congregation gathered each evening. The services were first read by devoted laymen, who were soon replaced by clergymen.

The work grew. The little roughcast house on Dalhousie street, was soon outgrown, and was lately demolished. The working staff of clergy, including Mr. Davidson and Mr. Henrick, was then increased by the arrival of Mr. Loucks, who, in three years as lay reader, had contributed largely to the molding of the work.

The district was hence an integral part of St. John's parish. In 1891 Canon Davidson's father was present on the occasion of the opening of the present church.

Nipped Netters

Capt. Carson, Peterborough, in command of the Government fishery patrol steamer, "Naiad," made a big haul in Lake Simcoe a short distance from Beaverton on Saturday morning, when he arrested two men and captured fifteen hundred yards of net, which they had been using. Capt. Carson also seized their boats and a large quantity of salmon and white fish, which it is said had been illegally caught by them.

TORONTO PAPERS ENTHUSIASTIC

In Their Endorsation of "A Winning Miss" Will Appear At the Grand To-night

"The Winning Miss" Company arrived in town to-day at noon from Toronto, where it played last week.

"The Winning Miss" is a brilliant musical comedy, headed by Max Bloom, whose efforts are spoken of by newspaper critics in most enthusiastic terms.

The Toronto papers said the show was an unusually bright and entertaining one, and pronounced the music quite as winning as the miss—or misses, for there are fifty in the company.

The music is by Wm. Frederick Peters, who wrote the tuneful score of "The Mayor of Tokio," and other popular operas.

TO DEVELOP THEIR WIND AND ALSO THEIR LEGS GIRLS HOLD A PAPER CHASE MUCH FUN ON SATURDAY GIRLS RUN IN SWEATERS

The girls of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute enjoyed themselves Saturday evening by indulging in a paper chase. About forty or fifty were out and made a run of about a couple of miles. On their return to the school light refreshments were served. These chases may be a weekly event from now on, weather permitting.

With tired bodies, sparkling eyes and rosy cheeks, between thirty and forty girls romped home on Saturday after a jolly paper chase. The girls belonged to the progressive Collegiate Institute. They left the building about 2.30 in the afternoon. The hares got off with a good lead, and away went the bunch of hounds, or girls (no offence meant. A lively run of a couple of miles soon revealed lack of condition on the part of a goodly number of the maidens, and the bunch were strung out in irregular array. Labored breathing and heavy feet were easily noticeable, but the majority of the runners stayed with the game. The scent was easily followed, that of the paper.

About four o'clock the first of the stragglers appeared, making for the school. Soon all who could navigate began to totter it, tired, but triumphant.

In the laboratory of the school stimulants and refreshments were waiting for the runners. So ended the first girls' paper chase of the season. There will probably be more to follow.

REAUME RESENTS THE ACCUSATION

Minister of Public Works Forwarded to Prelate Mr. Maisonville's Denial That He Wrote Detroit Free Press Article.

Toronto. Oct. 18.—Hon. J. O. Reaume, Minister of Public Works, in reply to Bishop Fallon's statement, in which the bishop said that four months ago he had drawn the Minister's attention to the journalistic activities of his recent secretary, and had received no acknowledgment, yesterday issued the following statement:

"I had no knowledge or suspicion of the person guilty of giving out Mr. Hanna's letter until the morning of the 15th instant, when my secretary confessed—first to me and then repeated his confession to one of my colleagues and myself—that he was the guilty person.

"I am sure Bishop Fallon would not intentionally do me an injustice, but he seems to have forgotten that I did investigate the authorship of the article in The Detroit Free Press, and that I sent him the letter of my secretary denying it, together with a letter of H. E. Willmot of The World, who declared he was the writer of it, and that he had written and forwarded the article for publication without reference to Maisonville.

"I feel that those who know me will accept my statement."

The Premier, Sir James Whitney, having reference to a display story in last night's Star, headed "Is Hanna Deeper In It Than Bishop Declares!—Fallon's Belief In Him Does Not Quiet All Comment on Provincial Secretary's Conduct—Knew Maisonville Leaked and Conferred With Him—Didn't Impugn His Honor," issued the following statement:

HON. DR. REAUME.

"My attention has just been drawn to an article on the first page of The Toronto Star of to-day. The Provincial Government and the people of Ontario have had several opportunities within the past year or two of judging as to the standard of ethics which governs the action of The Star newspaper. Neither fair play, truthfulness, nor manliness have any part in those motives, as may easily be shown.

"Forty-eight hours have hardly elapsed since a reporter of this newspaper boasted to an acquaintance on a railway train that 'of course we know perfectly well who gave out the letter, but we are going to show that his object is to assist Bourassa and Monk in the Province of Quebec.' This is only a fragment of the rhodamontade indulged in by this reporter, who evidently just received his instructions in morality from the editorial sanctum.

"I may possibly have more to say on this subject later on, and perhaps The Star reporter will let the public into the secret of how he prospered in his mission."

Hon. W. J. Hanna would not be interviewed. He was in conference with Sir James Whitney several times during the day, as was also Dr. Reaume, and as no statement was forthcoming it is assumed that the Premier was satisfied with the Provincial Secretary's explanation of his connection with the whole affair.

Comment of French Press.

Montreal, Oct. 18.—Mr. Bourassa's paper contains a very faithful translation of Bishop Fallon's statement, but the reply is deferred till to-day.

La Patrie says that before this there might have been some doubt as to the bishop's position on French teaching, but now there is no possible doubt as to his lordship's hostility, as he takes his place amongst the most inveterate enemies of the French tongue and the right of "our compatriots in the sister province."

"La Presse says that Bishop Fallon is proud of the hostility of certain newspapers in the Province of Quebec, but is he just as proud to have The Orange Sentinel on his side?

Calls For Resignation.

Ottawa, Oct. 18.—The Free Press (Lib.) in the course of an editorial re the Fallon statement says:

"Dr. Reaume must have had knowledge for a year past that his private secretary was giving to the public all kinds of confidential information, more or less dangerous, and yet he did absolutely nothing to stop such a disreputable practice. Is it going too far to assume, under the circumstances, that Maisonville acted with the full knowledge and approval of his chief?

"Our French-Canadian friends should be heartily sick and tired of Dr. Reaume. Last winter he dodged the French-Canadian congress that was held in Ottawa, and sent down his colleagues, Hon. Adam Beck and Hon. Frank Cochrane, in his place. There were then deep mutterings of disgust at his conduct, and these must now break out into a universal demand for his resignation. From any and every point of view it is evident that Sir James Whitney must extend his authority to Minister of Public Works Reaume, and insist on his resignation."

COOMBES DENIES RESIGNATION

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Press representatives yesterday saw Commissioner Coombes, head of the Salvation Army in Canada, relative to the C. A. P. despatch concerning himself. He stated that the statement that he had resigned is incorrect.

As an evidence of this he is now engaged in arranging a tour to the coast with Col. Lamb of international headquarters, England, who has just arrived in this country on his annual visit in the interests of immigration and colonization. His going is made the more necessary by the recent resignation of Col. Howell to take up a position with the C. N. R.

It is, however, true that the commissioner has suffered a breakdown in health, and will not be able to conduct public meetings for some time to come, although it is hoped by all his friends that he will soon be himself again.

THE BAPTIST CONVENTION

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Over 500 delegates are expected in the city to-day to attend the twenty-second annual convention of the Baptist churches of Ontario and Quebec, which will be held in the Bloor street Baptist Church, commencing this evening at 7.45 and continuing until Monday evening next.

The convention represents over 450 churches and has over 50,000 members on its list. It is expected that all the reports submitted will be of a very optimistic portent of the successful year just drawn to a close. This evening the retiring president, Rev. A. A. Cameron, D.D., will deliver an address, and the report of the nominating committee with the officers for the ensuing year will be voted upon.

Rockefeller's Gift.

Cleveland, O., Oct. 18.—Announcement was made Sunday of a conditional gift of $250,000 by J. D. Rockefeller to the medical department of Western Reserve University. The gift is made conditional on the raising of $750,000 more by the university. H. L. Hanna, well-known as a trotting horse owner and enthusiast, has pledged $250,000 of the remainder of the proposed million dollar fund.

DOCTOR MARRIED THREE TIMES

Toronto, Oct. 18.—Acquitted on one charge of bigamy yesterday, Dr. Herbert Sheppard, an elderly man, laid the way open for a second charge by admitting a third marriage.

He testified that in 1869 he married Margaret Saunders in Barrie. In 1883 while living in Michigan, on his return from a trip to Quebec, he found a note from his wife saying that she had left him, he didn't know why, taking the six children. In 1887 he secured a divorce. In 1891 he settled in Eden Mills, Ont., and married Miss Edith Tisdale.

"This is, indeed, news to the crown," said Crown Attorney Baird.

"She lived with me until I lost all my property, and when I returned home after being in Toronto on a business trip I found that she had left with a strange man," went on Sheppard.

Then he married Mrs. Lucy Moore.

Owing to the first divorce, Judge Denton dismissed the original charge.

AVOIDING THE WORKSHOP

London, Ont., Oct. 18.—The royal commission on technical education held sessions here yesterday, and, in addition to visiting local factories heard evidence from employes, superintendents and employers.

On all hands it was pointed out that more should be done to encourage young men to learn trades. As it is now, their education is with the idea of avoiding the workshop.

The establishment of a technical school in this city was mentioned by several of the witnesses, and the fine building erected by the Ontario Government as a hygienic institute, but never used, was mentioned as a suitable place.

Married the Girl.

Kingston, Oct. 18.—On his promise of marriage, the charge of seduction against William Bird, aged 23, Kingston, preferred by Cora Hayes, aged 17, Ardendale, was withdrawn in the Police Court. After a ring and license had been secured the knot was tied in Mayor Couper's office at the City Hall, by Rev. T. W. Savony, before Chief of Police Bailey, Mayor Couper, City Clrek Dr. Sands and Constable Arniel.

CUBA IS DEVASTATED BY CYCLONE LASTING FIVE DAYS

Greatest Disaster in History of the Republic Causes Loss That is Estimated at Many Millions of Dollars—Thousands of Peasants Homeless.

Havana, Oct. 18.—The Island of Cuba has probably sustained the greatest material disaster in all her history in the practically continuous cyclone, which began with light rains on Thursday morning, turning into torrential floods and devastating hurricanes and continuing until last evening. The western half of the island suffered more severely than the eastern.

The first cyclone, of which there was some warning, had hardly abated on Sunday night, when suddenly the wind, which up to then had been southeast, changed to southwest, and with renewed fury the cyclonic blasts swept over Pinar del Rio, Matanzas and Havana provinces, completing the destruction wrought by the first storm.

Even now there are some fears of another cyclone, on account of rumors of the approach of a third storm, reported to be forming south of Jamaica. At 9 o'clock last night the rain was still falling in frequent heavy gusts, but the wind had abated considerably, and the sea was falling.

It is impossible to estimate, even roughly, the amount of the damage done, which doubtless will aggregate many millions of dollars. Besides, the great destruction to sugar and tobacco plantations, many thousands of peasants in the three western provinces have been rendered homeless and destitute by the loss of their homes and the food crops, especially plantations and corn.

It now seems probable that the republic may be compelled to request international aid for the relief of these sufferers, whose condition is most deplorable.

Few fatalities, up to the present, have been reported. Three men were drowned in the harbor, but no deaths from the storm occurred in the city. It is probable, however, that the casualty list in the interior will be large.

JULIA WARD HOWE DEAD

Famous Women's Worker Passes Away Aged 91.

Newport, R.I., Oct. 18.—Mrs. Julia Ward Howe, authoress of "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," died yesterday from pneumonia, aged 91.

Mrs. Howe's name will live as that of one of the most generous and brilliant women the world has ever known. Before the civil war she and her husband worked for emancipation. After seeing her efforts crowned with success she became interested in woman's suffrage, prison reform and the cause of peace. She was born in New York on May 27, 1819, and was christened Julia Ward. In 1843 she married Dr. Samuel G. Howe, the eminent philanthropist.

In Boston Mrs. Howe was affectionately known as the "Queen of Clubs," because so many clubs owed their existence to her active efforts.

The battle hymn was composed one night in Washington in 1862, after seeing the camp fires of the Union army. The first and last verses read:

Mine eyes have seen the glory of the coming of the Lord;
He hath loosed the fateful lightning of His terrible swift sword;
His truth is marching on.

In the beauty of the lilies Christ was born across the sea,
With a glory in His bosom that trans-figures you and me;
As He died to make men holy, let us die to make men free,
While God is marching on.

In 1868 she became leader of the woman suffrage movement, and in 1904 was awarded the degree of LL.D. by Taft's College.

BOARDING-HOUSE AMENITIES

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 18.—Two boarders at the home of Mrs. Brady, North street, had an altercation in which one threw a lighted lamp at the other and set fire to the house. The blaze was put out before serious damage was done. The boarder struck at pulled a revolver, but it was knocked out of his hand.

Jones Ryan, Raglan road, knocked over a lamp in reaching for his overcoat, and his home had a narrow escape from destruction.

A ROAST FOR MONTREAL

London, Oct. 18.—Henry Vivian, who has been addressing town-planning meetings in Canada, writing on the need of action in Montreal, says that the population of the town grows at the rate of 30,000 to 40,000 per year, who dump themselves down practically as they like. The result is a hideous jumble.

Mr. Vivian does not think anything quite so bad exists in England as the worst districts of Montreal.

A CASE OF WITCHCRAFT

Berlin, Ont., Oct. 18.—In an action brought by Christine Metzger of St. Jacobs against Abram Brubasher of Heidelberg, the former claims damages for alleged false and malicious charges that the plaintiff had put certain drugs in food to be eaten by Mrs. Daniel Brubasher, in order to obtain evil influence over her; also charging the defendant with having used words in the German language insinuating that the plaintiff had been practicing the crime of witchcraft upon the said Lizzie Brubasher, ascribing the latter's illness to this cause.

Damages of $500 and costs are claimed for anguish of mind caused by being shunned by former associates and having her reputation injured.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Six persons were killed in election riots in Guadeloupe.

G. H. Gibson was killed and two other men hurt in an automobile accident near Ashcroft, B.C.

George Bowsher, Pere Marquette brakeman, was found by the track at Victoria with his head severed from his body.

J. L. Marier's automobile garage, Guy street, Montreal, was burned last evening, six machines being destroyed, entailing a loss of $30,000.

John McLellan was sentenced at Galt to four years' imprisonment, and his father was arrested on a charge of perjury in connection with the case.

The great French railroad strike was formally called off last night. This was decided at a meeting of the strike committee of the National Railroaders' Union.

Pending an investigation of his accounts by a special auditor, Fred Knowlson, town clerk and treasurer of Lindsay, has, on the advise of G. H. Hopkins, K.C., tendered his resignation.

The Niobe, the flagship of the new Canadian navy, will arrive at Halifax on Friday. A cable from the Niobe yesterday said she is off Cape Race, encountering heavy weather from the west.

The British freight steamer Port Marnock is reported ashore off Cape Frio, South America. Twelve of the crew were drowned. The Port Marnock said from San Lorenso, Argentine, on Oct. 5, for Leith, Scotland.

After more than 36 hours' deliberation a jury at Greensburg, Pa., returned a verdict finding eighteen deputy sheriffs guilty of voluntary manslaughter. They are accused of killing Paul Reno, a miner, in a strike riot last May.

ROCKEFELLER'S GENEROSITY

New York, Oct. 18.—John D. Rockefellow yesterday afternoon celebrated the opening of the new hospital attached to the Rockefeler Institute for medical research in this city with an additional gift of $3,820,000. This benefaction increases the income bearing endowment of the institution to $8,240,000.

The occasion was further signalized by placing the institution's property absolutely in the hands of the trustees, establishing it, in the future, as an independent foundation. Its initial board of trustees comprises John D. Rockefeller, jr., Frederick T. Gates, W. H. Welsh, Starr J. Murphy, and Dr. Simon Flexner.

ITALIAN PLACED UNDER ARREST

Hagersville, Oct. 18.—Sam Ponessa, an Italian quarryman of this place, was placed under arrest here Sunday, and removed to the county jail at Cayuga, pending an investigation into the death of his eight-months-old child early on Saturday morning.

It is alleged that during Friday night the baby disturbed Ponessa's sleep by its crying and it is said he whipped it so severely that death resulted shortly after.

Coroner Dr. McDonald has empanelled a jury, which yesterday met and viewed the body of the child, then postponed the inquest, until Wednesday.

To Bridge the Ottawa.

Port Arthur, Oct. 18.—Stewart & Hewitson, this city, have been awarded the contract for the construction for a steel and concrete bridge over the Ottawa River at Mattawa. The bridge will be 2,700 feet long, and some piers 50 feet high. The total cost will probably run over $300,000.

Joe Downey Broke Collar-Bone.

Guelph, Oct. 18.—Joseph Downey, ex-M.P.P., superintendent of Orillia Asylum, is recovering from the effects of a fall in getting off a train at the Union Station at Toronto a few evenings ago. In throwing out his arm to save himself his collar-bone was broken.

DOWN WENT WELLMAN TO THE TOP OF THE SEA FISHED UP BY STEAMER IS THIS STORY TRUE ?

(Special to The Review.)

New York, Oct. 18.—The Royal Mail steam packet reports that the steamship Trent of that line has rescued Walter Wellman at sea. No further details have been received.

New York, Oct. 18.—The appliances of modern science, which did so much to make the airship journey of Walter Wellman and Melvin Vaniman and their associates in the America possible, failed all day yesterday to bring the vessel into touch with wireless telegraph stations anywhere along the North Atlantic coast line. The absence of definite information, while it caused great anxiety among the thousands of well-wishers of the expedition, was not unexpected by Mr Wellman, who stated just before leaving Atlantic City that he would be between the northern and southern steamship lanes on Monday and Tuesday, and would probably be too far from either to communicate with ships, and too far from land to reach the coastwise stations.

When next he is heard from, according to his expectations on starting his perilous journey, the messages will be relayed ashore from steamships along the northern lane, which he expected to reach between latitude 48 and 50 and about longitude 40.

Careful estimates made by Weather Bureau officials in Washington, and by associates of Mr. Wellman who remained in Atlantic City, placed his probable position at midnight about 300 miles out from Atlantic City, blown eastward on westerly winds in about the latitude of Sable Island, but too far out at sea to be in touch with the Sable Island station.

Every transatlantic liner both eastward and westward bound tried to reach Walter Wellman's dirigible balloon, the America, by wireless yesterday, but without success, so far as the various steamship agents and the Marconi Company were able to ascertain. The North German Lloyd liner Kronprinz Wilhelm, from Bremen, was 523 miles east of Sandy Hook at noon at the end of a day's run of 543 miles, and it was pointed out at the North German Lloyd office yesterday that the liner must have passed the airship America some time Sunday night or early yesterday morning. It was stated that Capt. Nierich knows that the Wellman airship is on the way to Europe, and is on the lookout for it, but, although the New York office received several wireless messages from him, Capt. Nierich did not mention the airship.

THREE-CENT FARES FOR WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Oct. 18.—The failure of the Street Railway Co. to lay down tracks in Elmwood, in the northeastern section of the city, requested by the municipal authorities a year ago, may lead to the establishment of a municipal service within a couple of years.

It is suggested that new lines be operated by the city, in opposition to the company lines, on the basis of three-cent fares. This will be made possible by the introduction of electrical energy from the city's big plant at Point Du Blois, now under course of construction.

The city is entitled, by its agreement with the company, to give permission to competing concerns to construct and operate lines where the present company declines to do so. In this case it could give permission to itself.

Roy Leaves Penitentiary.

Montreal, Oct. 18.—Ex-President Roy of the defunct St. John's Bank left the penitentiary yesterday, after serving two years. His health is completely broken down.

Fifty-Six Bodies Recovered.

Starkville, Colo., Oct. 18.—All of the fifty-six bodies of miners entombed in the mine of the Colorado Fuel & Iron Co. by an explosion Oct. 8, have been recovered.

BURGLARS GET AWAY WITH $1,500

Morrisburg, Oct. 18.—Vene Robinson, a successful drover of Chesterville, was robbed of $1,500 on Sunday night. Robinson is in the habit of buying hogs at Morrisburg and, in order to get an early start Monday morning, drew $1,500 from the bank on Saturday and placed the money between the mattress and his bed. During Sunday night he was disturbed by a noise, but woke up too late, his money was missing and the robbers had escaped. The thieves were well prepared to defend themselves, as a large piece of tubing was left behind, evidently to be used should Robinson wake up during the search for the money.

WILL INSPECT UPPER SCUGOG

Mr. J. H. McClellan, superintendent Trent Valley Canal, and the Port Perry Council, are going to inspect the waters of Lake Scugog to-morrow in Mr. John McCrea's launch, to see what steps will be necessary to make navigation safe and satisfactory. The water is very low at present, and the channel weedy.—Lindsay Post.

PUBLIC PAVING MEETING IS CANCELLED

In response to a query from the Review, Mayor Morrow said that the public meeting that was to have been held to discuss street paving will not take place. In view of the petitions against the paving, it was thought that it would not be opportune to hold the meeting this year.

A CARELESS SPORTSMAN

St. Catharines, Oct. 18.—Mrs. Geoffrey Pepen, a young French-Canadian woman residing on West Chester avenue, is in the General Marine Hospital as the result of being shot in the shoulder by a stray bullet from the revolver of George Williams, a young man 20 years of age, who was practicing shooting while walking along the tracks of the Niagara, St. Catharines & Toronto Railway. Mrs. Pepen was sweeping off her front verandah when she was struck.

The woman's condition, while serious, is not expected to prove fatal if blood-poisoning can be prevented. Chief Greene, when notified of the shooting, soon learned that it had been done by Williams, who was entirely unaware of the result of his act.

Take Refuge In Spain.

Madrid, Oct. 18.—It is estimated that 5,000 members of the Portuguese religious orders, expelled from their own country, have taken refuge in Spain, where they are now being distributed among the convents and monasteries in the various parts of the country.

The Money Was Scarce.

Constantinople, Oct. 18.—The Turkish Government is facing a financial crisis. Three members of the Cabinet resigned yesterday, because of complications over the army budget.

$1,000 From Tag Day.

Kingston, Oct. 18.—The sum of $1,000 was realized for the General Hospital as the result of tag-day.

WERE THROWN ON BARB WIRE FENCE

Brantford, Oct. 18.—Beatrice and Mabel Jennings, daughters of a prominent Burford road farmer, were seriously hurt by being thrown from their conveyance, when their horse took fright at an auto. Both girls were thrown on a barb wire fence and dragged for some distance. They sustained terrible cuts to face, arms, neck and limbs.

Britain May Purchase Airship.

London, Oct. 18.—The airship Clement Bayard is to-day safely stowed away in a garage, erected at a cost of $25,000. The War Office experiments are to be made with the dirigible. The first of these will take place Wednesday or Thursday. If the trials prove successful the vessel may be purchased for the British nation and kept in England.

A Memorial Fountain.

St. Thomas, Oct. 18.—A drinking fountain, erected to the memory of the late Jabel Robinson, M.P., has been taken over from the contractor by his heirs. The fountain, which is an ornate and useful one, bears in front a handsome bronze tablet, bearing the inscription: "In memory of Jabel Robinson 1831-1907."

Drives Out Foreign Papers.

New York, Oct. 18.—Enquiry yesterday among importers of all but printed papers, revealed a condition wherein the new Payne-Aldrich tariff on such papers has placed the consumer at the mercy of the domestic manufacturer. Foreign papers, with few exceptions, are practically driven out of the market.

UNION LABEL

BACHELORS ARE MARKED MEN

It was once the custom in Korea that a man was not allowed to attain to the dignity of trousers until he married. The bachelor was forced to wear skirts as one who possessed no definite position in society. Moreover, the law prohibited marriage unless the man was able to support a wife in the station to which she was used, so that the skirt also served as an index of income.—Indianapolis News.

In Sartor Resartus we have the picture of a great banquet, in which the king in his kingly garments, the prince in his princely robes, the dukes, admirals and lesser fry were enjoying the hilarity of the occasion. When suddenly, at a stroke of the clock, all the clothes vanished and the king stood stark, stripped and like all the rest. He was no longer a king, but a naked man. Clothes are much, a little tape, a garter, an adornment on the breast, and a title to the name, and the world bows and scrapes, but strip off the clothes and we are all one.

We have long shed our skirts for trousers, as far as the matrimonial side goes, but we have on two skirts, two petticoats, a corset and two blouses, when it comes to an index of our financial affairs.

WAR DECLARED

War has been declared by the Medical Health Department of Toronto against the lowly though dangerous and very busy, house-fly.

"We must begin a campaign to exterminate the housefly, one of the greatest menaces to public health and one of the greatest disseminators of disease," said Dr. Charles J. Hastings, Medical Health Officer, last night to the Globe.

"It is very important that the public should be educated regarding the dangers arising from the breeding of flies, and also with respect to preventive measures," he continued. "Such diseases as typhoid, scarlet fever, diphtheria and tuberculosis are readily spread by flies. They carry the germs of these diseases from excretion in the sick room and from the expectorations in the case of tuberculosis to food, where they readily develop. Milk is one of the greatest culture mediums for such germs, but all foods which are not to be submitted to heat before being eaten convey the menace."—Globe, Toronto.

But in Peterborough the fly is under the protection of the Board of Health. It is a family pet.

IF OUR NEIGHBORS WANT RECIPROCITY LET THEM LOWER THEIR TARIFF

If our neighbors really want Reciprocity with Canada, or rather if they want real Reciprocity with Canada, let them lower their tariffs against our products to the average level of our tariffs against theirs.

For such Reciprocity Canada has already done her part; the next move is for the United States to meet the Canadian Tariff Reciprocally.

Until that is done, any and all talk about any other Reciprocity or Reciprocity agreement is entirely absurd and out of the question.

This view of the case is already recognized by leading men in the United States, and some would even go further and make the Untied States tariff lower than the Canadian on some lines, even to the extent of complete abolition.

The Republicans and the Democrats of Massachusetts now line up for a fight, have both declared themselves in favor of Reciprocity with Canada; but it is the Democrats who recognize that the United States have a large measure of Reciprocity entirely in their own hands, that the Congress can bring it about without any negotiations or agreement with Canada.

They have declared: "We again insist upon the free possible trade relations with Canada as one of the economic necessities of our people. But if it is too late, then while favoring an honest effort on the part of the Federal Administration, however belated, to negotiate a genuine treaty of Reciprocity, we demand in the interests of our own people, and regardless of the possibility of securing reductions of Canadian duties upon the products of the soil and the fisheries of Canada, which increase the cost of the food supply of our own people, and upon the product of of her forests and mines, which increase the cost of the raw materials of our great industries and of the homes of our people."

There is both sense and justice in this view of the matter.

For the present the matter of free trade between the two countries is entirely in the hands of the Washington Congress; Canada has nothing to do with it, and nothing to say about it.

That is the view of the people of Canada, and that should be the Canadian Government; and until such time as the United States have reduced their tariff to the Canadian Government should not entertain any proposal for tariff negotiation.

While the United States maintain a tariff at least 40 per cent, higher than ours, and in many cases entirely prohibitive.—Halifax Herald.

THE COLLECTION PLATE

The church collection plate, to my own (vulgary mind, is but one degree less undignified than the ragged hat of the itinerant organ-grinder at the street place. There's something repellent to good taste in having a plate thrust under your nose when the Sabbath service is half over, as if to say, "You've had your money's worth, now cough up!"

I always feel a hesitation about putting in ten cents when I observe my millionaire pew neighbor haughtily waft a long green from his wallet (opened noisily and closed with a click), and I grow more ashamed still when, my "two bit" rolling about hilariously perches airily above the long-green, as if to mortify my poverty! Then there's the poor devil on the other side, who is forced to refrain from upsetting the plate, owing to the time and the place, who grows red and redder when he can make no answer, no accompanying jingle to the plate's unspoken, but nevertheless shouting demand "give!" — The Prowler in Ottawa Free Press

This is not a good steer. We believe in the collection plate, and believe in it most thoroughly. But it's a wonder that God Almighty doesn't stretch forth His finger and suddenly strike dead some of the miserable men for their miserable offerings. They will blow $10 on booze and cigars, $25 for clothes and $25 more for an overcoat. Then comes Sunday and they will have the gall to sneak on a nickel for the Lord, the Lord Almighty, who holds this earth in His hands. And the Lord lets them live on. They will march up to the front and pull off their gloves and lay their cane under the seat, and pull out a plugged dime and offer it to the Lord; a store wouldn't take it, the bartender couldn't be fooled with it. This mutt hands it to the collection plate. Isn't that awful, Mabel?

US HUMANS

Where human beings are gathered together in numbers criticism forms an alarmingly large part of the general conversation.—Sunday American.

Why is this? Simply because the human family are, as a general thing, travelling around with their eyes shut and their ears closed.

"That fellow is always loafing," says the gentleman who sits back in his chair and puffs a cigarette. "He doesn't get any place because he is so lazy. He actually leaves his work unattended to so that he can smoke cigarettes."

"Look at the other chap there," says the desk mate with the elaborately brushed hair and the beautiful red necktie, "always thinking about his clothes. Never comes into the office without slicking his hair and flicking the dust off his shoes. I should think he'd begin to wake up after a while. Everybody is laughing at him."

"Then there's that flirtatious chap," simpers a clerk to the stenographer. "He's made love to every girl in the office. He's such a sap they all give him the laugh, of course, but he never will get wise." With which remark he dresses his own feathers and looks soulfully into the eyes of the stenographer, blissfully ignorant of the fact that secretly she is laughing at him.

None of us are perfect. We look around us and see not the great law of Nature; we take no joy in this glorious fall. Oh that dollar, that dollar. That is our ambition. Why do the leaves fall? How do they breathe? What makes the bird go south? Where does the swallow winter? Why do the cows come up the lane at eventime? What makes the drone bee necessary? Why is it that when the days grow longer the cold grows stronger? What causes bees to swarm? Why is it that the tide rises? People don't care a rap about these things.

It's that other woman, that other man they are interested in. Does he succeed. He is crooked. Does he fail. He is weak minded. Is she handsome? There's nothing to her but looks. Is she ugly? She is a wise one.

SUPPOSE WE EXAMINE OURSELVES BEFORE WE THROW STONES.

IS HE THE MAN ?

For the next three weeks the eyes of ninety millions of Americans will be focussed on the State of New York, and the eyes of the people of New York will be focussed upon the personality of Mr. Theodore Roosevelt, ex-President of the United States, now "boss" of the Republican party, and, in the estimation of nearly everybody, a candidate for another term in the presidency at the election to be held two years hence.—Montreal Herald.

Is Roosevelt the man? Napoleon flitted across the world's horizon, a man of destiny. He used men as one would use wheat. They died, they fertilized the fields with blood, that he might reap honor, power and glory. Has another Napoleon, a Napoleon of the new world risen? Napoleon of old used bullets. Will Roosevelt use ballots? The world is watching him. A splendid egotist, he has supreme confidence in himself. So had Napoleon. So has any man who achieves.

"A blusterer."

"A braying ass."

These are a few pet names that his opponents give him.

As well dry the Otonabee with a tea spoon as stop Roosevelt with abuse. "England opposes me, I am getting stout, and if all the nations of the earth were to coalesce against me I would have a ridiculous paunch."

Napoleon said this once.

Roosevelt thrives best in opposition. He would die if there were no lions to hunt.

GO IT GIRLS

We are in full accord with the young ladies at the Collegiate Institute running as hares and hounds in a paper chase. We are glad to know that ladies at the gym in the Y.W.C.A. don bloomers and go through drills and exercises.

There's nothing like it. Suppose when in the days of to-morrow. Miss A. marries Miss B. and Mr. B. should get saucy. Miss A. then Mrs. B., could swing on him and he would pull in his horns. It makes a girl more self reliant when she knows that inside of that pretty blouse is something more than a fine arm and underneath those petticoats are limbs that will not easily tire. A sound mind and a sound body in it. Keep up the good work.

CONGRATULATIONS

To All Saints' church and Rev. H. R. Trumpour, congratulations. A new church should ever be welcomed in a community. Churches stand for God and good. Men are married in churches, are buried from churches, are christened or baptized in churches. There are no big heads from hours spent in churches. Take ten men who never go to church and ten who do go, and the ten who go will rank higher morally, mentally, to say nothing of spiritually and financially, than those who never darken a church door.

SIDE LIGHTS

THE SEVEN DAYS.

Gervais Dore.

The seven days of hope are gone!
Their splendor sped, their fervor spent:
The faithful, gathered from afar,
The potentates and primates proud
Now melt into the thoughtless crowd
Where vain contentions clank and jar
The veil of sanctuary is rent;
The seven days of hope are gone!

Here stands the summit of our need
A message which shall fit the day—
A kindly, strong and sane appeal,
The sting of grief and sin to heal;
A joy to cheer us in the fray
And draw us closer, creed to creed!

Mayhap a simple faith is right
Which knows no complex decalogue
An humble yearning after truth,
Tho springing from a mind uncouth,
Has often set the world agog.
And brought us nearer to the light—

And yet, the narrow path expands
If we be brethren in the way;
Our differences seem harsh and wide
Our fellow frailties hard to bide,
But He who formed us for to-day,
Will lead us, as His will demands!

No new religion would we see,
But added strength to live our own!
More faith in God for all we plan,
The love of Christ 'twixt man and man,
Till charity has overthrown
Intolerance and made us free!

Which learning cannot well supply,
A dignity of soul and thought
A fellowship, which never is bought
Yet brings the truth of God more nigh
This is the good we strive to keep!

The seven days are sere and dead!
For Ah! The fly still spoils the myrrh;
Unbridled zeal still boasts in vain;
Weak envy fans the flame of hate,
And malice burns insatiate;
We lose more than we seek to gain!
Our days are as the days that were;
The seven days are sere and dead!

CHAPTER IX.

A NEW KIND OF POLITICAL PARTNERSHIP.

THE combination of the forces of Langdon and Haines did not find much favor among the powers that are—at the capital. Senator Peabody peremptorily demanded an explanation from Stevens as to how he had allowed "his senator" to engage as his secretary "this inquisitive man Haines, a reporter who didn't know his place."

"Here we've put Langdon on naval affairs because we knew he didn't understand what's going on, and you, Stevens, supposed to be the finished product of the political mill, you fall asleep and let him take up a man whom nobody can control, one who knows the inside workings of Washington and who will take par-tic-u-lar pleasure in teaching your fellow Mississippian far too much for our good."

Stevens' reply, to effect that probably Haines would consent to be "taken care of" if judiciously approached, was derided by the observant Peabody. "A young reformer grows fat on notoriety," he laughed, "and think what a scandal he would have for his newspaper if we took a chance on disclosing our hand to him. No, no, Stevens; we must have him watched and try to discredit him in some way. Perhaps we can make Langdon believe that his secretary is dishonest."

Congressman Norton was another man who was dismayed at the formation of the firm of Langdon and Haina. Young Randolph, too, could not forget the defeat and humiliation he had previously suffered at Haines' hands and grew more bitter as the reporter's influence over his father grew stronger. But Haines' most effective enemy had arisen in the person he would be the last to suspect, one whom he unceasingly admired, one whose very words he had come to cherish. And possibly it was not all her own fault that Carolina Langdon had enlisted her services, subtle and quite overwhelming (owing to Haines' fervent worship of her) against the secretary. Perhaps the social system of which she had become a part in Washington had something to do with the craving to become a leader in that fascinating world whose dazzling variety and infinite diversion seemed to fill her soul with all that it yearned for. Love she had, for she had now promised to wed Congressman Norton. She loved him fondly; she had confessed to him, and gradually she came to work desperately against Haines, who, she had been convinced by Norton and Randolph, would prove a stumbling block to them, to her father, to herself in her career at the capital, if his influence over the senator should be permitted to exist or to increase. And so on the surface Carolina Langdon was most amiable to the secretary, encouraged him in his attentions to her, led him surely into her power, Norton having prevailed on her to keep the knowledge of their engagement secret from every one, even her father.

The days and nights became filled with important work for Senator Langdon and his secretary. Together they went over the important measures, outlined what appeared to be the best course of procedure and carried it into effect as far as possible. Langdon became a prominent figure in the senate, owing to his consistent support of measures that fitted in with the public policy, or what should be the public policy, of the nation. He had learned that the only practicable way to outwit or to cope with the members of the dominating machine, made up, he was surprised to see, of members of both the parties—the only two in Washington—was to oppose what the machine wanted with enough power to force it to grant him what he believed the public ought to have. He was described by some of the hidebound "insiders" on Capitol hill as "the only brainy man who had fought the machine in thirty years."

At the home he had later established in Washington as preferable to the international hotel were frequently seen a small coterie of senators and congressmen who had become known to the sarcastic party bosses in both houses of congress as the "Langdon crowd," which crowd was admitted to be somewhat of a factor when it finally prevailed on the president to take over 11,000 postmasters from the appointment class and put them under the control of the civil service commission, resulting in the necessity of a competitive examination for these postmasters instead of their securing positions through political favoritism.

Those who did not know Langdon intimately suggested that "this fellow ought to be 'taken care of.' What in God's name does he want? A committee chairmanship? An ambassadorship for some Mississippi charcoal burner? A couple of federal judgeships for his friends? Well, whatever it is, give it to him and get him in with the rest of us!"

Again it was Peabody who had the deciding say.

"There's only one thing worse than a young reformer, and that's an old one," he laughed bitterly at a secret conclave at his apartment in the luxurious Louis Napoleon hotel. "The young one thinks he is going to live and wants our future profits for himself. The old one thinks he's going to die, and he's sore at leaving so much graft behind him."

Heads and hearts thinking and throbbing together, Langdon and his secretary, Haines, plodded along. They had learned to lean on each other, the young gaining inspiration from the old, the old gaining strength from the young. They loved each other, and, more than any love, they trusted one another. And Hope Georgia watched it all and rejoiced, for she believed with all the accrued erudition of eighteen years of innocent girlhood that Mr. Bud Haines was quite the finest specimen of young manhood this world had ever produced. How could he have happened! She was sure that she had never met his equal, not even in that memorable week she had spent in Jackson.

The passing weeks taught Haines that he was deeply in love with Carolina, and, though he had endeavored to keep the knowledge of this from her, her woman's intuition had told her his secret, and she stifled the momentary regrets that flitted into her mind, because she was now in "the game" herself, the Washington game, that ensnares the woman as well as the man and makes her a slave to its fancy. No one but herself and Norton knew how deeply she had "plunged" on a certain possible turn of the political cards. She must not, she could not, lose if life itself were to remain of value to her, and on her sway over this secretary she was told it all depended.

A subject that for some unexplainable reason frequently lodged in Haines' mind was that of the apparent assiduity with which Mrs. Spangler cultivated Senator Langdon's friendship. For several years she had occupied a high social position at the capital, he well knew, but various indefinite, intangible rumors he had heard, he could not state exactly where, had made him regret her growing intimacy with the girls and with the senator. They had met her through letters of introduction of the most trustworthy and assuring character from people of highest social rank in Virginia, where the Langdons had many friends, but even so, Haines realized, people who write introductory letters are sometimes thoughtless in considering all the circumstances of the parties they introduce, and residents of Virginia who had not been in the capital for years might be forgiven for not knowing of all the more recent developments in the lives of those they knew in Washington. While not wishing to have the senator know of his intention, the secretary determined to investigate Mrs. Spangler and her present mode of life at his first opportunity, hoping the while that his quest would reveal her to be what the Langdons considered her—a widow of wealth, fashion and reserve who resided at the capital because the memories of her late husband, a former congressman of high standing, were associated with it.

"It's a trick," said Haines.

Calling at the Langdons' house one evening in February to receive directions regarding important work for the next day, Haines was somewhat puzzled at the peculiar smile on the senator's face. Answering the secretary's look of inquiry, the Mississippian said:

"I've been told that I can name the new holder of a five thousand dollar a year position in the department of commerce and labor and that if I have no one in particular from my state to name—that—that you would be a good man for the job. First I was glad for your sake, my boy, for if you wanted it you could have the position. But on thinking it over it seemed there might be something behind it not showing on the surface."

"It's a trick," said Haines. "Who made the offer?"

"Senator Stevens."

"I might have known," hotly responded the secretary. "There's a crowd that wants you and me separated. Thought this bait too much for me to resist, did they?" Then he paused, rubbing his fingers through his hair in a perplexed manner. "Strange, isn't it, senator, that a man of your party is offered this desirable piece of patronage, entirely unsolicited on your part, from the administration of another, a different political party? Especially when that other party has so many hungry would be 'tax eaters' clamoring to enter the 'land of milk and honey.' I think Stevens deliberately"—

"There, there, Bud," broke in Langdon, "you mustn't say anything against Senator Stevens to me. True, he associates with some folks I don't approve of, but that doesn't necessarily mean anything wrong, and I myself have always found him thoroughly honest."

"Yes," muttered the secretary, following the senator into the library, "you've always found him honest because you think everybody's honest—but Stevens is just the doctor who will cure you of this ailment, this chronic trustfulness."

Haines laughed softly. "When Peabody's little Stevie gets through hacking at the prostrate body of political purity his two handed sword of political corruption will need new edges."

"Better see Senator Langdon."

Thus far neither the senator nor his secretary had suspicion of any questionable deal in regard to the gulf naval base. The rush of other events, particularly the fight over the reduction of the tariff, had pushed this project temporarily into the background so far as they were concerned, though the "boss of the senate" and his satellites had been losing no time in perfecting their plans regarding the choice of Altacoola as the site.

Peabody and Stevens had ingeniously exploited Langdon at every possible opportunity in relation to the naval base. Asked about new developments in the committee on naval affairs, the ready answer was: "Better see Senator Langdon. He knows all about the naval base; has the matter in full charge. I really know little about it."

So by hiding behind the unsuspecting old hero of Crawfordsville they diverted from themselves any possible suspicion and placed Langdon where he would have to bear the brunt of the great scandal that would, they well knew, come out at some future time—after their foul conspiracy against the nation had been consummated, after the fruits of their betrayal had been secured.

And what senator would fear himself?

What, after all, the schemers concluded, is the little matter of an investigation among senators to guilty senators who, deeply versed in the law, have destroyed every compromising document that could be admissible as evidence?

Why, the senate would appoint an investigating committee and investigate itself, would it not, when the ridiculous scandal came?

And what senator would fear himself, or for himself, as he investigated himself, when the blame had already been put publicly on some one else, some simple minded old soul who could go back to his cotton fields in Mississippi and forget all about it, strong in his innocence, even though shorn of reputation, and desire to live?

CHAPTER X.

WHEN SENATORS DISAGREE.

THE wiseacres of Washington had sightly predicted that the site of the hundred million dollar gulf naval base would be decided on in March after the excitement and gayety attending the presidential inauguration had subsided.

On the morning of the day before this action of the committee on naval affairs was to be taken Secretary Haines sat at his desk in Senator Langdon's committee room in the capitol. Richard Cullen, the favorite associate of Haines in his journalistic days, out earlier than usual on his daily round of the departments for news for his Chicago paper, had strolled in and attempted a few of his characteristic cynicisms. Haines usually found them entertaining, but these were directed at Senator Langdon.

"Now, let me tell you something, Dick," the secretary answered firmly. "Don't you work off all your dyspeptic ideas in this neighborhood. My senator is a great man. They can't appreciate him up here because he's honest—crystal clear. I used to think I knew what a decent citizen, a real man, ought to be, but he's taught me some new things. He'll teach them all something before he gets through."

Cullen hung one leg over Haines' desk.

"You're a nice, quiet, gentlemanly little optimist, and I like you, old fellow," retorted Cullen. "But don't deceive yourself too much. Your Senator Langdon is personally one of the best ever. But he was born a mark, and a mark he'll be to the end of time.

"You're a nice little optimist."

"He looks good now. Sure, I like his speeches, and all that, but just wait. When some of those old foxes in the senate want to put his head in the bag and tie it down, they won't have any trouble at all."

Smiling, Haines looked up at his cynical friend.

"The bag 'll have to go over my head, too," he said with a nod.

"Well, I don't know that Peabody 'd have to strain himself very much or get such an awful big bag to drop you both in, if it comes right down to that, old chap. You're making a mistake. You're as bad as your old man. You're a beautiful pair of optimists, and you a good newspaper man, too—it's a shame!"

After momentary hesitation Cullen continued, thoroughly serious.

"Bud, my old friend," he said in low tone, glancing quickly about, "there's one thing that you've got to put a stop to. It's hurting you."

The secretary's face showed his bewilderment.

"What do you mean?" he snapped abruptly. "Out with it!"

TUMOR OF YEARS GROWTH

Removed by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Winnipeg, Man.—"Eleven years ago I went to the Victoria Hospital, Montreal, suffering with a growth in the uterus. The doctors said it was a tumor, and could not be removed, as it would cause instant death. They found that other organs were affected and said I could not live more than six months in the condition I was in. After I came home I saw your advertisement in the paper and commenced taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took it constantly for two years, and still take it at times, and both my husband and myself claim that it was the means of saving my life. I highly recommend it to suffering women."—Mrs. ORILLA BRADLEY, 284 Johnson Ave., Winnipeg, Manitoba.

One of the greatest triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the conquering of woman's dread enemy—tumor. If you have mysterious pains, inflammation, ulceration or displacement, don't wait for time to confirm your fears and go through the horrors of a hospital operation, but try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills.

HOW MANY REALIZE THE MARVELLOUS VALUE OF FRUIT IN CURING MANY DISEASES ?

Wonderful Success of "Fruit-a-tives", —The Famous Fruit Medicine

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet matter, and only 1% of an intensely bitter substance. Careful experiments show that it is this bitter principle, which is the active or medicinal material of fruit juice.

Under certain conditions, the bitter principle can be made to replace or transform some of the sweet atoms in the juice, thus making a new compound which is much more active medicinally than the ordinary juice.

Many fruits were analyzed and it was found that the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes gave the best results. These fruit juices, having been made more active by the secret process of changing the sweet principle into the bitter, are combined with tonics and antiseptics and made into tablets. These tablets are the famous fruit medicine—"Fruit-a-tives"—known in every part of Canada for their wonderful curative qualities in diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys and Skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit juices. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50 or trial size, 25c.

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

Have Eyes Tested at Intervals

Whenever you feel uneasy in your spectacles, don't hesitate to call and see us. We are always glad to help you.

BIG NEWSPAPER MAKES DEPARTURE

And Sends It's Staff Artist to Draw Sketches of Popular Musical Show

When "The Alaskan" appeared in Montreal at His Majesty's last week the Montreal Star liked the show so well that it dispatched its artist to take sketches of the play. As a result "The Alaskan" had the singular honor of occupying a generous section of the paper in striking drawings of characters and situations from this celebrated musical comedy.

The score of "The Alaskan" was written by Harry Girard, a gifted comic opera baritone and an artist who is well known to Peterborough theatregoers. He and his talented wife Agnes Cain Brown, were at the Grand a couple of seasons ago in the charming productions of "San Toy" and "Florodora."

NOTICE

There will not be any Show in the Grand Opera House to-night, but to-morrow night. (Wednesday) that Funny Play will be presented "The Naked Truth", by Henry E. Dixey. HENRY E. DIXEY

The Popular American Comedian Appears Here

Unusual interest attaches to the appearance at the Grand next Wednesday, October 19th, of Henry E. Dixey, the popular American comedian. Mr. Dixey has not appeared in Canada for several seasons, confining his work to the New York stage and the principal cities of the east.

The older theatre-goers will recall Mr. Dixey's work when he was the principal comedian in the Gilbert and Sullivan comic operas, and later with the Augustine Daly Company. The popular American fun-maker will be seen here in George Paston's and W. B. Maxwell's three-act farcial comedy "The Naked Truth," at present the laughter rage of London, where Charles Hawtrey has been appearing as "Bunny" Darrell for over seven months, beginning at Wyndham's Theatre, and at present at the Prince of Wales'. The comedy concerns the predicament in which Bernard Darrell (Mr. Dixey) finds himself, when under the influence of a peculiar ring he is compelled to tell the truth under any and all circumstances, greatly to the displeasure of many of his best friends. His truthfulness nearly costs him the hand of his fiancee, and the friendship of his business associates

Mr. Wm. A. Brady, under whose direction Mr. Dixey is starring this season, has surrounded the comedian with one of the most representative comedy companies ever sent from New York city. The complete cast includes Miss Marie Nordstrom, Miss Ruth Shepley, Miss Isabel West, Miss Dorothy Davies, Miss Lillian Dix, Miss Blanche Bryant, Miss Marie Pert, and the Messrs. Herbert Standing, Spottiswoode Aitken, Kenneth Davenport, Frederick Roberts, George Ives and Thomas W. Slater.

"A WINNING MISS"

These two principals in the "The Winning Miss," which appeared at the Grand last night, were not the only ones that scintillated, however, for they were given fine support by a cast of principals of real ability and a chorus that was good looking and carried out their intricate and original manoeuvres, with a snap and precision that won them immediate favor. Max Bloom, like the usual comic opera comedian, gets entangled in a skein of complications involved enough to sift away his identity. Bloom is clever in the part and stirred up peals of laughter every minute or so. Many of his lines were quite original and his methods were very funny.

Miss Lester was winsome as "The Winning Miss," and has a good voice. J. E. Coglen as Capt. Mike McGinty, the bibulous sailor, who was always coaxing a drink and telling of the "Nancy Lee," contributed a generous share of the comedy and received warm applause for his roller skate dancing. Percy Chapman was nimble and bright as Billy Brown, the College Boy. Clarence Backous as John Speed, an amateur artist, and Thos. J. Grady, as Horatio Dunn, secretary of the Country Club, took their parts with considerable finish.

Many of the songs were tuneful and the augmented orchestra added much to the effectiveness of their rendition.

MOTOR CYCLE AND AUTO IN MIXUP

Accident at Noon Damaged Machine Owned by D. Florence, But Rider Jumped Off and Escaped Injury.

A serious collision occurred at twelve o'clock to-day, at the corner of George and Hunter streets. The corner was rather congested with people, coming from work, and D. Florence, speeding along on his motor-cycle, crashed into an auto, driven by Dr. Halliday. Eye witnesses thought sure he must be seriously hurt.

Florence, who is the owner of a motor-cycle, was going out Hunter street east and Dr. Halliday in his auto was rounding the corner of George street going in the same direction. In endeavoring to avoid some people, Florence on his cycle struck the car squarely in the middle. With great presence of mind and agility, he was able to hop off the vehicle just before the impact. The machine itself went right under the car. Dr. Halliday brought his car quickly to a stop, the motor cycle was lifted out, and was found to have sustained considerable damage.

The handles were completely broken off, the tires and spokes also being twisted and Mr. Florence did not know whether the mechanism of the machine had been injured or not.

No blame can be attached to the owner of the car, as he was in noway responsible for the accident.

THE INTERESTING STORY OF OLD IRELAND TOLD

To an audience, which though not large, yet was highly appreciative, Rev. J. H. Boyd, Irish Baptist missionary, spoke last night in Murray street Baptist church. The attendance was rather disappointing, as in other places, the speaker addressed crowded houses. The reverend gentleman is an earnest and devout native of Ireland patriotic to the core, and has an excellent command of language, which he uses to advantage in telling his hearers the story of the religious growth and evangelization of Ireland.

Mr. Boyd, in beginning, thanked the audience for the cordial welcome they had extended to him, and he was glad of the opportunity to come to Peterborough to tell the story of the progress of mission work in the old land, the land of the Emerald Isle.

"Ireland," he said, "was the most difficult country in the world in which to preach the gospel. Ireland is a Roman Catholic country, and has given the best of her sons and daughters for the propagation of Catholicism. Again, Ireland has been looked upon as the base of lawlessness, and the personification of ignorance and superstition. But she was not always in that condition. Once she enjoyed a Christian religion of her own. Few people know her history, and she did not always acknowledge the Church of Rome.

She has had schools and churches and colleges in which she educated her sons when there were no colleges in England.

Ireland has sent out men of the cross to the highlands of Scotland to tell the gospel, and at one time as many as seven thousand students from all over the world were gathered in Irish colleges to learn from Irish professors.

At this point Rev. Mr. Boyd told the story of the thirteen missionary preachers, who crossed the Irish sea, and landed on the coast of Wales, founded a church and named it Bangor. Going on further they preached the truth in England, crossed over and carried the gospel to all the countries of Europe. Such fame and love did the leader of this devoted band attain, that he is now known as a saint and his remains rest in a quiet Swiss canton.

Ireland dates its era of Catholicism from the time when Henry of inglorious fame got permission from the Pope to invade Ireland. Ireland was invaded. Henry with his army overran it putting the people to the sword and compelling the survivors to accept Catholicism. In 1173 a Papal yoke was put upon them, and a tax levied on all Irish families for the use of the Pope. Seven hundred years have come and gone since then, and the tax has been faithfully paid. The amount of the income, though it was not known by the speaker, "for," said he, the Pope never issues a balance sheet. The people are looking forward to the time when they can free themselves from this unjust debt.

In 1873 Oliver Cromwell appeared on the scene. So far as England is concerned, the spirit of Cromwell is not dead yet in England, but only sleeping, and needs very little to arouse it. More than two hundred and fifty years have come and gone since that famous leader marched through the streets of Waterford. It was as a result of his depradations that the first Baptist colony sprang up and has existed and flourished in Ireland. To-day it is alive and well, stronger financially and spiritually than it has been for the last one hundred years.

Some years ago the Baptist missionaries in England rallied to the support of their church in Ireland. A society was formed in London for its propagation, and since that time down to the present day, Baptist missions have flourished. But it is no easy matter to preach the gospel in Ireland. The people are opposed to religion in some parts, and it is difficult to reach them.

The Bible is also rarely seen in Ireland. The priests do not allow them to see it. Not one Roman Catholic in ten possessed a copy of it. There is all sorts of Roman Catholic literature, but rarely a copy of the Bible. One man never heard of it.

Rev. Mr. Boyd's lecture was extremely interesting, and it is a matter of regret that more people were not present to hear him.

He will be greatly missed here. He was actively associated with church work in Peterborough and was librarian of the Mark street Sunday school. Mr. Gamble's friends will wish him every success in his new field of endeavor.

ATHLETICS IN FRONT

At the end of the seventh innings of to-day's game between the Athletics and Cubs, when the Mackmen scored six runs, the score stood 9-2 for the American League Champions.

Final score 9—3 in favor of Athletics.

Batteries; Brown and Kling, Coombs and Thomas.

WHO IS CHAMPION

Chicago, Oct. 18.—The death of Stanley Ketchel, the pugilist, at Springfield, Mo., Saturday has precipated the middleweight championship situation into more or less of a muddle.

Four claimants to the title stand out prominently, and of these three had faced the former champion in the ring, while the fourth would have had the opportunity before long had not Ketchel died.

This last is Eddie McGoorty, of Oshkosh, Wis. The others are former champion Billy Papke, of Keewanee, Ill., now in Australia; Frank Klaus, of Pittsburg, and Hugo Kelly, of Chicago.

SHEEHY PLAYED BRILLIANT GAME

In its own report of the Varsity-Ottawa College rugby fixture of Saturday the Free Press say of Dick Sheehy, who held down left half for Ottawa;—

Sheehy played a great game until he was knocked cold in the last quarter. He never fumbled and kicked splendidly. In fact the manner in which he ran back and handled Gall's punts, was a feature of the game. He was badly injured within ten minutes of full time and had to be replaced by Percy Mulligan, who had little chance to show his mettle.

RUGBY

The local Collegiate first team is arranging for a game here with the Jarvis street Collegiate fourteen of Toronto, for Thanksgiving Day.

Ola Nertineas, a Norwegian, was killed by a falling tree near Port Neville, B.C.

SPORTING COMMENT

The October number of the Athletic World has arrived at this office, and contains forty pages filled with bright articles and illustrations on sports. The Athletic World is forging ahead. Each month sees improvement. The Boy Scout, the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association's swimming and diving championship, athletic day at the Canadian National Exhibition, the National lacrosse team, British Columbia and Pacific Coast sport, in which is illustrated Queen's Park, New Westminster, B.C., where the first Minto Cup struggle of 1910 took place, are featured, and the issue further contains a corrected list of Canadian amateur records.

The local Collegiates are endeavoring to land Jarvis St. Collegiate, of Toronto, for a game here on Thanksgiving Day.

The Mackmen won a decisive victory over Chance's champions in the first game of the World's series. Big Chief Bender lived up to his reputation, and apparently did not have to work overtime to do so. Johnny Kling, for the defeated ones, had his eye on the middle station, and, like Bender, produced the goods when in scales.

The "something doing" feeling is growing at the Y.M.C.A. "gym" The youngsters and the older ones have a splendid leader in Mr. J. J. Thompson, and he is backed up by a broad-minded secretary—that means a whole lot in dealing with young fellows.

GOLF

At the golf links yesterday afternoon Mr. Sam Ray defeated Mr. H. D. Burnett, and is now called upon to meet Mr. C. Hill for the championship of the gold club. The game will be played on Friday or Saturday. Mr. Ray has held this championship for four years, winning the honors twice in succession. It will be interesting to watch the work of the old veteran against his younger opponent.

ATHLETICS WIN FIRST.

"Cubs" Go Down to Defeat Before Chief Bender.

Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 18.—Chief Bender's wonderful pitching and the offensive work of Frank Baker won for the Athletics over the Chicago Cubs in the opening game of the world series of 1910. It was a phenomenal game and when it is considered that the Chicago players passed first base for eight innings, it can be recorded as one of the greatest games in a big series ever played. This goes to show what bang-up ball the Athletics played. Orvis Overall did not seem to have his usual break on his curve ball, or else the Mack men were in a hitting mood.

I cannot forget the work of Baker. He led the attack in the second inning with a two-base hit into the left field crowd. Davis cleverly sacrificed, putting Baker on third, with one man down. With the strong hitting, Murphy up, to decide whether the Athletics should forge to the front, he responded with a stringing single to left between third and short, and there was a roar from the stand. This did not satisfy the Mackmen. Murphy stole on the much-touted Kling and Barry's out advanced him to third. Thomas cleverly worked the pitcher for a pass after having two strikes called.

The Cubs, having in mind a pitcher's weakness at bat, thought Bender would be easy, but the chief is always a good sticker, unlike most other twirlers, and he contributed a beautiful single, too hot for Zimmerman to handle. It came to Heine on a high, hard bound, and caromed off his hands into centre field, giving the Athletics a two-run lead.

Bender then continued his airtight pitching, using his wonderful curves and his "smoke ball," which is a high fast one along the shoulders, making the Cubs look helpless.

Goldwin Smith In Canada

Collier's Weekly is publishing Goldwin Smith's own story of his life in Canada. There is a preface which says that his political and personal recollections he had planned to put into more extended form, but the opportunity was denied him. "My craving for domesticity sent me to Canada," is the frank confession of the late sage of the Grange. The following are extracts from the first article;

"With the politics of Canada, otherwise than a looker-on and critic, I did not meddle. They were the politics of party when the cause of party had ceased to exist, as it did after governor-generalship of Lord Elgin. In my time there was absolutely no political issue of any moment, nothing but a struggle for place carried on by intrigue and corruption, extending unfortunately to legislation and appointments. To carry through parliament a bill forcing Roman Catholic schools on two provinces of the Northwest, the Roman Catholic Prime Minister raised the sessional indemnities of both Houses of Parliament, created a number of pensions, and granted a salary to the leader of the opposition. To serve a political purpose one who had not practised law for 20 years was made chief justice. Of legal patronage generally party use was made, injurious to the independence both of bench and bar. "Graft" was the slang name for corruption among the people who complained truly but helplessly that everything was full of it. At a farmers' picnic, I drew a farmer aside and asked him what was the difference in principle between his party and the other. He was long in answering, but at last he replied; "We say the other fellows are corrupt." The world will not go on in this way forever.

"Lord Durham's postulate that the French of Quebec must be anglicized to complete the work or political fusion had not been fulfilled in 1873. The French were French still, socially and politically as well as in language, and politicians were and still are as much as ever compelled to court them. Jesuitism, which European morality even in Catholic kingdoms had spewed out a century before, was recognized by government and reinstated in its emoluments and its power of killing truth.

"What is the destiny of Quebec? Durham took it for granted that Quebec must be absorbed in British Canada. Instead of being absorbed, Quebec dominates by the help of venal support in the other provinces. Her quasi nationality has now a powerful and chivalrous champion in Bourassa. But the end must come. The English provinces and the United States, to which the workmen of Quebec go, will have their influence. The people of Quebec, the peasantry especially, are pious and devoted to the priesthood, who have hitherto been their leaders and masters. But papalism cannot reign forever, and when it loses its hold, Quebec's nationality will fail.

"The separation of the provinces, among which there was little interchange of population, the course of migration being to the States, was a serious political evil. I do not know at this moment what are the politics or who are the political leaders of the provinces on the Atlantic or of those on the Pacific coast. The interests and connections of those provinces must in part be nearly as much American as Canadian, the American tariff notwithstanding."

CITIZENS WHO HAVE NO LIBERTY

The writer happened to be in Homestead, Pennsylvania, one Sunday morning in July and on the car to Pittsburg sat down with a workman from the Carnegie mills, who was covered from head to foot with the oil and grime of the shop. He was asked if there had been any reduction of Sunday work since the order has been issued.

"Reduction be——!" he ejaculated explosively. "Why, I haven't had a Sunday off in five years." Then he suddenly became very serious, and looking fearfully around the car (steel workers have learned by bitter experience that the spies of the corporation are everywhere), bent down—he was over six feet—and whispered in my ear, "This morning I skipped off without saying a word to the boss. I don't know what'll happen, and I have a wife and five kids at home. But I think I might have at least one half-Sunday in five years don't you?"—This last an almost pathetic appeal.

Here was an American citizen who had been working twelve hours a day, seven days (eighty-four hours) a week for five consecutive years. He was a laborer in the blast furnace, and the Steel Trust paid him, for this endless toil sixteen and a half cents an hour. He wanted to spend the rest of that Sunday with his wife and children, but there was very little doubt in my mind that when he returned to work on Monday morning he would be promptly discharged for quitting work without permission on the "day of rest."

In the latter part of January, 1910, a machinist in shop No. 4, of the Bethlehem Steel Company (the great rival of the Steel Trust) at South Bethlehem, Pennsylvania, remained away from his job on Saturday in order to avoid the possibility of being ordered to work on the following Sunday. He was not, mind you, a seven day man, but one who formerly worked ten hours and twenty-five minutes from Monday to Friday, and five hours and twenty minutes on Saturday. But he, in common with other workmen of that shop, had been frequently made to work overtime and Sundays, and it was feared that these encroachments might ultimately result in the longest hours, i.e., twelve hours seven days a week, being made the uniform ones for the entire plant. —From "Seven-Day Slaves of Steel" in Technical World Magazine for November.

Fresh Air in Winter

In winter, it is hard to get fresh air in certain rooms. Some rooms in a house are usually colder than others, and if you open the windows it is hard again to heat the room properly.

If you keep the windows closed you don't get fresh air; if you keep them open you cannot quickly reheat the room. The solves the difficulty. You can leave the windows in a room open all day in winter, and when you close them apply a match to a Perfection Oil Heater and heat the room to any temperature you desire in a few minutes.

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in japan or nickel. It burns for nine hours. It has a cool handle and a damper top. It has an automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be quickly cleaned. An indicator always shows amount of oil in the font.

The filler-cap does not need to be screwed down. It is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for rewicking. The Perfection Oil Heater is strong, durable, well made, built for service, yet light and ornamental.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Trading Slow on British Markets—New York and Buffalo Steady.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 17.—John Rogers & Co. cable to-day that the demand was small in the Birkenhead market, and as a result trade was slow, but owing to supplies being short, prices were well maintained, and Saturday's quotations were unaltered. States steers sold from 13¼c to 14c; Canadians, 12¾c to 13½c, and ranchers, 11½c to 12½c per lb.

Toronto Live Stock.

TORONTO, Oct. 17.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 117 carloads, consisting of 2308 cattle, 85 hogs, 713 sheep and lambs, 210 calves and 7 horses.

Exporters.

Sheep and Lambs.

There was an active market for sheep and lambs at strong prices. Sheep, ewes, sold from $4.75 to $5 per cwt.; lambs, at $6 to $6.30.

Hogs.

Mr. Harris reports prices lower at $8.35 for selects, fed and watered, at the market, and $7.90 to drovers for hogs, f.o.b., cars, at country points.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 17.—(Special.)—At the Montreal Stock Yards West End Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 15 were 2850 cattle, 3000 sheep and lambs, 2300 hogs and 210 calves. The supply on the market this morning consisted of 1000 cattle, 1650 sheep and lambs, 1300 hogs and 150 calves.

Sellers failed to establish any advance in prices. Holders of a few strictly choice Ontario steers asked as high as 6¼c per pound for them in the early part of the day, for which they were bid 6c, and this figure was accepted for them later, but the bulk of the trading was done at the following prices: Choice steers, 5½c to 5¾c; good, 5c to 5¼c; fairly good, 4½c to 4¾c; fair, 4c to 4¼c, and common, 3½c to 3¾c per pound.

The undertone to the market for lambs was stronger, and prices, as compared with those of a week ago, show an advance of ¼c per pound. Sales of Upper Canada lambs were made at 6c to 6⅛c, and Quebec stock at 5½c to 5¾c per lb. The market for sheep was steady, under a fair demand, and sales were made at 3¾c to 4c per lb. Calves are becoming very scarce, and prices higher. Sales of milk-fed stock were made at 5½c to 6c per lb.

A weaker feeling developed in the market for hogs this morning, and prices declined 15c to 25c per 100 lbs., as compared with those realized last Wednesday. Sales of selected lots were made at $8.50 to $8.65 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Election In Doubt.

Melbourne, Oct. 18.—The result of the New South Wales elections is doubtful. Up to the present the Laborites have a majority of two and they may gain a seat on second ballots. The resignation of the Premier is certain.

Malcolm Campbell, for thirty years clerk of the township of Fingal, has resigned.

BOYS WHO ARE ILL NOT LAZY

Once upon a time—and it's not so far in the past but what you, dear reader, more than likely were one of those who subscribed to the theory—children were summarily divided into good and bad, stupid and clever. Now science, having looked into the matter, has come to the conclusion that children should be divided into the sick or the well, the hungry or the fed, the weak or the strong. Sounds queer to you who still advocate the spare-the-rod-and-spoil-the-child idea along with other superstitions beloved of your grandparents—doesn't it? But it's a fact that there is a wonderful relation between mind and body, stomach and brain, whether you "take any stock in all this modern nonsense about children" or not. Both in this country and Europe certain men and women who think have been making investigation with results which ought to revolutionize child education. One fact they discovered—and proved—is that there is no such thing as a "lazy" child. The normal child is interested, alert, bright minded, full of waking curiosities about the world into which he has come and endowed with an almost unquenchable physical vivacity. What then is the matter with the little inert, stupid, dull eyed creatures forever at the bottom of the class who never put a question or seem to pass a given point?

The matter is that they are ill. Some of them are hungry, and it is as hopeless to expect a child to study well when he needs food as it would be to expect a fire that needs fuel to burn well. The hunger may be due to an actual lack of food or it may be that the teeth are in such poor condition that the child cannot chew and therefore does not digest. Or it may be that the food offered to it at home is entirely unsuited to its needs.

Some of the children cannot hear well and some cannot see. They do not complain because they do not know what is the matter. They accept constant rebuke and defeat with the dumb mystification of ignorance. Many of them have never drawn one natural breath since their birth owing to the presence of enlarged tonsils and adenoids.

These children can never compete with their fellows until all these hindrances have been removed. Some recent investigations made by a French physician show that among well-nourished children only 13 per cent. have physical defects, while among the poorly nourished over 60 per cent. suffer from these defects.

This question of feeding is being met in many cities both here and abroad by the supplying of a substantial luncheon either free or at a nominal cost.—Utica Globe.

The carriage factory of Arthur S. Filmore at Athol, N.S., was destroyed by fire, with $35,000 loss.

CRIPPEN IS BEFORE THE CADI COURT ROOM CROWDED TO CAPACITY PLEADED NOT GUILTY, WAS VERY NERVOUS, LORD ALVERSTON PRESIDES

Special to the Review.

London, Oct. 18.—Dr. H. H. Crippen was arraigned to-day on the charge of murdering his wife, formerly Belle Elmore. The small court room was crammed almost to suffocation and hundreds of persons were unable to gain admission. Lord Alverstone, Lord Chief Justice of England, presided. Crippen, on the charge against him being read, pleaded not guilty. He was very elaborately dressed and although apparently somewhat nervous on being arraigned, he seemed to gain confidence as the case progressed. Miss Leneve, who is charged with being an accessory after the fact, and whose trial will follow Crippen's, was not in court. R. D. Muir, K.C., who with T. Humphreys and Ingleby Oddie, appeared for the Crown, delivered the opening address outlining the Crown's case.

STUDENTS OF NORMAL SCHOOL ENTERTAINED LAST NIGHT IT WAS A FINE EVENING AND SO WAS THE PROGRAM

The hand of welcome and goodfellowship was extended to the students of the Peterborough Normal School last evening in George street Sunday school room by the Epworth League. The welcome took the form of a reception, and a most enjoyable social evening was spent by all. Over two hundred and fifty were in attendance. An excellent program was run off and refreshments served. The students will not easily forget the kindness which prompted the gathering, and are very grateful to the members of the League for their thoughtfulness.

The programme was varied and amusing. Dialogues and social contests were indulged in, which served to get one on grounds of acquaintance. It was impossible for a person to feel stiff and not at home last night.

Rev. Mr. Couch gave an address of welcome to the students, after which the following program was given.

Solo—Mr. Fred Myles.

Dialogue—Seven boys and seven girls, entitled, "Why we Never Married."

This number caused great mirth.

Guessing contest, the gathering grouping themselves in several little knots, arranged so as to give the name of some vegetable.

Refreshments of cake and coffee served afterwards were greatly enjoyed.

Miss Lizzie Smith acted as accompanist for the evening.

The affair broke up about ten o'clock.

ANOTHER GYPSY OUTFIT ARRIVES

Party of Twenty Located at Downers Corners - Lots of Children—The Women Smoke and the Mother of the Camp Washed Dishes - Popular Music.

The gypsies are here again. Not Stephen George, Gypsy Queen and Co., but a brand new outfit.

The camping grounds are in a field adjoining the G.T.R. track at Downer's Corners, and typical gypsy life is in evidence everywhere. The camp numbers twenty people, seven horses and one dog. Five large tents are used as cooking, sleeping and eating apartments, each being furnished with a small stove, couches, etc.

KIDS AND MORE KIDS.

Evidently these gypsies do not believe in race suicide. At all events there are lots of children and of all ages. There was the tiny infant and the older brothers and sisters, one of which strutted around with a long black pipe in his mouth, and he handled it like a veteran. As to complexions, there is every color of the rainbow, and these are augmented by a jet black—as to whether the latter is natural is another question.

THE WOMEN.

Not unlike the illustrous Gypsy Queen is one of the "ladies" in the party. She has the same happy expression. Her teeth are not such a glittering mass of gold, but she is taller and has a more stately appearance. The necklace of coins and beads, too, are there.

The mother of the camp is a dream, but not altogether a pleasant one. She looks to be at least one hundred years of age. When the Review reporter arrived on the scene this morning she was giving one of the party a calling, and what she got away with would fill Walter Wellman's balloon.

She and her husband are the oldest members of the camp, and to-day will celebrate either a birthday or a wedding anniversary. A feast is being prepared for the occasion. The lady who peeps into the future, when asked by the reporter which event was to be celebrated, was unable to say which one, and apparently she or the others were not losing any sleep over the affair. Mother gypsy, after she had completed her oration, sat down at the front of her tent and calmly began to wash the dishes. This is a fact. They do wash the platters, but the demonstration furnished in this instance was not flattering.

THE PIPE OF PEACE.

Do the women smoke? Why of course, and one noble looking daughter got her ears boxed for not giving up the pipe, which she had been puffing contentedly, to her mother when requested to.

Music is supplied with a violin, with which several of the men displayed proficiency of various grades. "Put on Your Old, Grey Bonnet," "Kiss of Spring," and "It Looks Like a Big Night To-night" were among the selections handed out to the reporter this morning.

The fortune teller of the outfit said that she came from Rome, Italy, and that the party had, until recently, been traveling in the United States. There is no leader, and each household looks out for itself.

When the reporter mentioned the name of Stephen George one of the men became interested, but disclaimed any relation.

THE PAST AND FUTURE.

"Let me tell your fortune," suggested the unveiler of mysteries, and the quarter being forthcoming, the lady began. "You will live long and die a natural death," she said, after a look at the lines. "You have had trouble, but at present is no danger, and everything looks bright for you. You will be in the west in another year, and will meet with success, but beware of a dark complexioned person who stands in your way."

It was in alluding to affairs in which the gentle sex was mentioned that the warning was given.

As to the length of their stay here, none of the party could say.

"WILL SUPPORT DR. REAUME" THAT'S WHAT THE COUNCIL OF NORTH TILBURY SAID, THEY ARE ALL FRENCH CANADIANS

Special to the Review.

Tilbury, Ont., Oct. 18.—The Council of Tilbury, North township, all but one of the members of which are French-Canadian Liberals, passed a resolution at a meeting held yesterday pledging Dr Reaume that as a protest against Bishop Fallon's attack on him they would re-elect him at the next election by three hundred majority. There is a movement to provide a French seat for H. C. R. Maisonville, Hon Dr. Reaume's dismissed secretary.

AN AUTUMN BRIDE

MATCHETT—SPEER

A very pretty wedding took place this afternoon at the residence of Mr. John Speer, 173 Hunter street, east, when his youngest sister, Miss Mary Speer, was united in marriage to Mr. Stanley Matchett, of 384 Mark street.

The bride entered the drawing room which was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and ferns, carrying a sheaf of chrysanthemums, leaning on the arm of her brother, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Retta Gaskins, niece of the bride.

The bride and groom were unattended. Miss Wilhemine Gaskins, niece of the bride, acted as flower girl, and carried a basket of daisies. She was prettily attired in white point de esprite. The bride's gown was white silk crepe de chene with applique trimmings.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. C. H. Coon, pastor of Mark St. Methodist church.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful and costly presents from Toronto, Hamilton, Fort William, Detroit, Saskatoon and other friends, testifying to the high esteem in which she was held.

The Ladies Aid and W. M. Society of Mark St. gave her a beautiful parlor chair. She also received a silver chafing dish from League and choir, of which she has been organist for a number of years. She also received a set of silver fruit knives from her Sunday school class.

The bride and groom received a number of cheques, amongst them being a handsome one from Messrs. George and Harry Webber.

The groom's gift to the bride was a beautiful pearl brooch, and to the flower girl a pearl ring.

Mr. Earl Speney, Toronto, nephew of the bride, played during the congratulations.

The bride's going away suit was a golden brown and blue wide wale serge.

The newly married couple left on the 4.38 train for Toronto, Hamilton and Niagara Falls. On their return they will reside at 384 Mark street, East City.

A TRUTH THAT IS STRANGER THAN ANY FICTION WILL BE HEARD TO-NIGHT IN PARK ST. BAPTIST CHURCH---SAM LUTTRELL TO TELL HIS LIFE STORY--- THE END OF A SUCCESSFUL MEETING

The public are again reminded, and most cordially invited to hear Dr. Sam Luttrell, of Denver, Colorado, who for the last two weeks has been conducting a successful evangelistic in Park street Baptist church, tell the story of his life, and miraculous rescue from a drunkard's grave. A free will offering will be taken.

Last night quite a number gave themselves over into the hands of God. To the man who is down and out, by drink, the doctor's life story will come as an evangel of hope. Come and hear him, my reader.

AN EVANGELIST OF MANY EXPERIENCES

Rev. J. Bennett Anderson took the services at St. Luke's church last Sunday, in order to enable the Rural Dean, Dr. Langfeldt, to inspect the Mission Parish of Young's Point, Warsaw, Hall's Glen and Buckhorn and to prepare the way for an appointment of an incumbent of that field. Dr. Langfeldt travelled fifty-two miles on Sunday to attend to his work. Mr. Anderson officiated most acceptably at the services of St. Luke's.

Rev. Mr. Anderson was some time ago appointed diocesan evangelist of a district in Toronto. He is a clergyman who has had a wide and varied experience. He was interested in the movement which resulted in the release from prison in England of Mrs. Maybrick, who was accused of poisoning her husband.

During the great dock laborers' strike in Liverpool, where Mr. Anderson was then stationed, and where he held meetings among, and gained the confidence of the dock men, a meeting, the big meeting, attended, attended by over twenty thousand men, was held. This meeting was to be addressed by some of the leading men of England. Rev. Mr. Anderson, as a religious worker among, and friend of, the dockmen, was included among the speakers.

Mr. Anderson was in Australia in

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind :—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

WELLMAN AIRSHIP COMES TO GRIEF OFF ATLANTIC CITY

Dirigible Balloon America is Picked up and all Are Saved by Royal Mail Steamer Trent—Great Machine is Abandoned.

New York, Oct. 19.—Man's first attempt to cross any ocean in an airship has failed, but Walter Wellman, five companion, and a kitten, who essayed the voyage, are safe.

The airship, the giant America, is a battered aerial derelict, abandoned at sea, perhaps still in the air, perhaps sunk beneath the waves, with her costly equipment.

Picked up by the steamship Trent early yesterday morning off the North Carolina coast, Wellman and his fellow air navigators are due in New York at noon to-day. They left their craft only because she was in distress and blown so far from the lane of transatlantic steamship travel that a continuation of the voyage with the British Isles as the objective was hopeless.

So, summoning aid by wireless, the difficult and dramatic transfer to the Trent was accomplished. Having been spoken by wireless, presumably in the vicinity of Nantucket at 12.45 p.m. on Sunday, it was a surprise then when the news came that the America had encountered the Trent homeward bound from Bermuda, in a longitude and latitude nearly 400 miles southward and only 250 miles northwest of Bermuda.

Thrilling indeed must have been the experience of the America's commander and crew as they were thus swept out of their course.

Capt. Down of the Trent flashed first news of the rescue in a message to The New York Times, which, with The Chicago Record-Herald and The London Daily Telegraph, contributed $35,000 for the purpose of the expedition.

The First Narrative.

The first story of the rescue sent by wireless from the steamer Trent to the Associated Press, reads:

"At 4.30 a.m. to-day the steamship Trent sighted the airship America, and wireless communication was immediately established. Irwin, the operator on the airship, informed Ginsburg, the operator on the Trent, that the airship America's crew wished to abandon the balloon. Wireless communication was kept up from this time on between the airship and the steamer.

"Daylight was rapidly approaching, and the Trent was requested to follow the America, which was then drifting at the rate of 12 knots an hour.

"After a council held on the airship, it was decided that the best means of rescue was to launch the lifeboat. But this was such a hazardous undertaking that much time elapsed before the manoeuvre was executed, as the tail of the airship, consisting of tanks of gasoline and wooden blocks, threatened to capsize the lifeboat, as it was dropped from the balloon into the water.

"The danger was at last overcome, and the operation was carried out with success. In the operation the trailer struck Wireless Operator Irwin and Louis Loud, the engineer, and also knocked a small hole in the side of the lifeboat. The airship, immediately on being released of its weight of the crew and boat, shot skyward as the boat shot downward.

"A moderate sea was running at the time, and after some slight difficulty the crew were taken on board, together with the lifeboat, at 7.30 a.m. All the members of the crew are well after a thrilling experience.

"Wireless telegraph has distinguished itself by showing great assistance in accomplishing the work of rescue. The Morse lamp signaling also took a great part in the communication between Jack Irwin and officers of the steamer Trent, giving the signals which led to the rescue.

"The crew was picked up in latitude 35.43 north, longitude 62.18 west, where the America was abandoned. Wellman said that the airship had been blown far out of her course, and that it was inadvisable to proceed."

Britishers Wire Good Wishes.

London, Oct. 19.—On all sides here the warmest wishes are expressed that the Wellman transatlantic expedition will be crowned with success, and the Lord Mayor of London, Sir John Knill, has voiced the sentiments of all citizens of the metropolis in the following message despatched by wireless telegraphy soon after midday Monday:

"Mansion House, London. To the Wellman Airship America: Lord Mayor of London sends you greeting, and heartily wishes you success in your plucky enterprise."

Almost immediately afterward Lord Burnham of The Daily Telegraph sent the following:

"Wellman, Airship America. Greetings. All earnestly hope your pluck and patience will pull you through."

In the course of the day several other wireless messages were despatched, among others from the Senior Admiral of the Fleet, Lord John Hay, Admiral Sir Edmund Fremantle, and Sir Clements Markham, ex-president of the Royal Geographic Society.

PARENTS TO BLAME

Hon. J. O. Reaume Says Fault is Not With the Schools.

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 19.—Hon. J. O. Reaume, Ontario's Minister of Public Works, who looms large in the public eye as the result of the Fallon controversy over bilingual schools in this county, arrived in Windsor from Toronto at a late hour Monday night, to attend the wedding of his niece, Miss Evelyn Bourke, which was solemnized yesterday morning. Dr. Reaume gave out a statement, in which he says:

"I had no knowledge or suspicion of how Mr. Hanna's letter was given but till the morning of the 15th. As to the children lacking education, it is not the fault of the schools; it is more the fault of the parents who take their children from school at an early age, making it impossible for them to get the opportunity of higher education.

"English is placed before anything else in the instruction of the French-speaking pupils, and there is now little French taught in the schools of the county. When we get an efficient French-English teacher we do so, otherwise we engage English teachers. That the trouble in the separate schools of the county has been lack of discipline due to frequent changes in the teaching staff is the opinion entertained in other quarters."

Seat for Maisonville.

Tilbury, Oct. 19.—At a meeting of the Tilbury North Township Council Monday, the members, all French-Canadian Liberals but one, pledged Dr. Reaume that they would give him a majority of three hundred at the next election, as a protest against Bishop Fallon's attack on him. The township is largely Liberal.

The French are greatly worked up, and a safe French seat is promised to Maisonville, the dismissed secretary of Hon. Dr. Reaume.

Endorses Fallon.

Windsor, Oct. 19.—E. P. Gavin, principal of the Windsor Collegiate Institute and a resident of Windsor for over twenty years, has signified his endorsement of the main charges made by Bishop Fallon against the schools of North Essex.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 19.—Count Tolstoi experienced a series of fainting spells yesterday and was unconscious for several hours. Last evening the author was said to be in a somewhat improved condition.

FEDERENKO WILL BE EXTRADITED

Winnipeg, Oct. 19.—Chief Justice Mathers yesterday afternoon granted an extradition warrant to representatives of the Czar, that Swava Federenko might be taken back to Russian territory, to stand his trial for murder. The defence claimed that Federenko was a political refuge, and that the Russian Government was anxious to get hold of him to answer for conspiracy against the Czar. The chief justice held that the mere fact that Federenko had shot down one soldier did not constitute him a revolutionist, and on these grounds ordered the extradition. H. F. Hagel, K.C., states that he will at once apply for habeas corpus, and failing this, will take the case to Privy Council in England, if necessary.

The case has attracted considerable interest amongst political refugees in this country, and lawyers and members of the Douma now residing in New York and Chicago attended the trial.

HIGH PRICES DUE PARASITIC DISEASE

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—That the present cause of the alarming high price of turkeys is directly due to a parasite disease, which is carrying off large flocks of birds, in all parts of the country, is a statement made by Dr. Charles Higgins, Dominion biologist. If stringent precautions are not taken at once to combat the disease intelligently, the price of the fowl will soar still higher, as the inroads of the disease will spread and continue to deplete the supply in all the provinces.

Blackhead, as the disease is commonly known, has been found in all the provinces of the Dominion by Dr. Higgins, he having observed cases where whole flocks of turkeys have been carried off by the parasite. A simple remedy for the disease is to starve the bird for 48 hours, and then let it drink from a mixture composed of a teaspoonful of muriatic acid to a quart of water.

THE BRUTE GETS TWENTY YEARS

Parry Sound, Oct. 19.—The sitting of the sessions yesterday was taken up with a case under the Charlton Act. The prisoner, James Lavaigne, alias John Roy, was found guilty, and forthwith sentenced by Justice Clute to twenty years' imprisonment, with two administrations of the lash, of ten each.

Owing to the absence of a material witness for the crown in the Young murder case, the court was adjourned until to-day. In the event of the missing witness not being secured by that time, the trial will be laid over, probably to a special sitting of the court.

MONTGOMERY FOUND GUILTY MANSLAUGHTER IS VERDICT

New Liskeard Hotelman Convicted on Charged of Kicking Shanty Cook to Death While Ejecting Him From the Bar.

North Bay, Oct. 19.—William R. Montgomery, charged with manslaughter, came before Judge Teetzel yesterday, he being defended by T. C. Robinette, K. C., of Toronto, and A. N. Morgan of New Liskeard. Montgomery is proprietor of the Windsor Hotel at New Liskeard, and the charge arose out of the death of Elmer Kline, shanty cook, which is alleged to have resulted from the effect of kicks administered by Montgomery in ejecting Kline from the hotel, July 1, 1909. The prosecution was conducted by Mr. Blackstock.

M. L. Fitzpatrick of New Liskeard swore to witnessing Montgomery forcibly eject Kline from the hotel, and kicking him several times. Kline appeared to be under the influence of liquor. Richard Peeler also swore to the assault, but thought Kline was sober.

Medical evidence showed that Kline had died from rupture of the uretha, probably caused by injury.

Montgomery swore that Kline was put out of his hotel, June 30, and that he did not see him on July 1, and did not kick anyone. Kline had been a nuisance about the bar, and he had forbidden the bartender to serve him liquor. He had visited Kline at the hospital, because he had been a guest at the hotel.

Anothy Palmer, manager of the Windsor Hotel, swore to visiting Kline at the hospital in consequence of stories circulated that he had been injured at the hotel, and the sick man though very weak, had nodded his head in acquiescence to a question as to his being hurt at the fair grounds. He did not see Kline in the hotel July 1, and no one was kicked out that day.

James Doonan swore that Kline was injured July 1 by jumping on a sharp-pointed post, being unable to speak for twenty minutes, and Dr. Stallwood and Evans swore that Kline's condition could have resulted from injury received that way. Dr. Evans did not think that the injury could have been inflicted by a kick, unless the foot was long and narrow and curved upward to a point.

The jury, after being out for two hours, returned a verdict of guilty of manslaughter, with a strong recommendation to mercy. Mr. Robinette moved for suspended sentence, on the ground of no intent to injure, and the good character of the accused. Mr. Blackstock concurred in the appeal for leniency, and Judge Teetzel promised to consider the plea on Thursday, when evidences of character will be produced.

SCHOOL TEACHER ASSAULTED GIRLS

Gretna, Oct. 19.—Saturday Abram Packan, a school teacher in the Mennonite Village of Grunthal, was convicted of indecently assaulting four school children under the age of fourteen, and fined $100 or six months in jail. Monday Peter H. Giesbrecht, a Mennonite school teacher, in a German school here, was arrested, charged with offences against seven girls, for a period extending over two years.

Fractured His Collar-Bone.

Elgin, Man., Oct. 19.—While on a scaffolding inspecting a new verandah, James Argue, provincial member for Avondale, fell six feet, owing to the tilting of a board. He suffered a fractured collar-bone.

CHAS. H. TUPPER DENIES THE STORY

Montreal, Oct. 19.—"The newspapers must have been affected by the comet," was the reply yesterday by Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper, who was reported as being in consultation at the Windsor with Sir Wilfrid Laurier, with a view to the entry of Sir Hibbert into the Liberal party.

In the first place, Sir Wilfrid Laurier is attending the Liberal nomination in Drummond and Arthabaska, and secondly, he has never met Sir Hibbert Tupper since coming east, so the story of the meeting at the Windsor is made out of whole cloth. In conclusion, Sir Charles Hibbert Tupper said that the day he and Sir Wilfrid are seen working together the end of the world may be looked for.

COMPETITION FOR SUBSIDY

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—Andrew Allan of the Allan Steamship Line, had a conference with Sir Richard Cartwright yesterday, regarding the Atlantic mail subsidy contract with the Government, expiring 18 months hence. Some time ago the Allan TLine submitted a proposition for a 11- knot service, the subsidy asked being upwards of a million dollars.

The announcement that the Empresses of the Canadian Pacific are going to the Pacific is taken to mean that the company will place faster vessels on the Atlantic, and will be competitors. The White Star, Dominion, and Canadian Northern will also endeavor to secure the subsidy.

SCHOOL HAD RIGHT TO MONEY

Lindsay, Oct. 19.—Judge Harding has given judgment in an interesting case, viz., in the action of the school trustees of the Township of Stanhope against the Township of Stanhope. The usual school grant had been retained by the township authorities because the township claimed that the school had not been kept open long enough in the school section (the teacher having been sick) to warrant the municipality in giving them their grant. His honor held that the money had been raised for the school section and was their money, and the township had no right whatever in withholding the money.

Presentation to Hamar Greenwood.

London, Oct. 19.—The York Liberal Association has presented an illuminated address and dressing case to Hamar Greenwood, who, in expressing thanks referring to the Imperial conference, believed Botha, Ward, Laurier and Fisher would speak in support of the Liberals, not the Tories.

There was not a colonial representative of the self-governing colonies who could be a Tory here without forswearing his native legislation and being a traitor to his country.

DAMAGE SUIT FOR $1,250,000

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—The big case for $1,250,000 damages between David Russell and James N. Greenshields, regarding a deal in Saskatchewan lands, may not be tried at Ottawa after all. The writ was issued here on the ground that, while both parties live in Montreal, the deals with the Government, Mackenzie & Mann, etc., were put through here, so that Ottawa is the proper place to try the big case. A motion has now been made by McCarthy, Osler, Hoskin & Harcourt of Toronto, to set aside this writ as being taken in the wrong province.

Dr. Canniff Dead.

Belleville, Oct. 19.—Dr. William Canniff, M.R.C.S., the well-known medical man and Canadian writer, died in this city yesterday afternoon. Deceased was 80 years of age. Dr. Canniff served in the Royal Artillery during the Crimean war, and was also for a time with the American army on the Potomas. As a writer he contributed to medical and other journals to the daily presses. He was a U. E. Loyalist, being the originator of the U. E. centennial celebration, held in Toronto in 1884.

ARMENIANS ACQUITTED

Brantford, Oct. 19.—Kopain & Magarain, the two Armenians held here pending the investigation into the death of Frank Simon, were acquitted in court yesterday. The coroner's jury Monday night brought in a verdict that the Armenians set upon Simon and companions, and they were merely defendings themselves. Simon's skull was fractured on the sidewalk, when struck down.

Grain Growers Not Representative,

London, Oct. 19.—Sir J. Laurence writes the press, enclosing a letter from Robert Meighen, who says the grain growers' association represents not over 25 per cent. of the farmers. There is no substantial demand for free trade in the northwest. He considers lowering the tariff would be bad for Canada, and says every nerve must be strained to keep trade under the flag.

DR. CRIPPEN IN COURT DRESSED LIKE A DANDY

Presiding Judge is Lord Alverstone of Alaska Boundary Fame—Case is Expected to Last a Week at Most—Court Room Crowded.

London, Oct. 19.—"I am not guilty."

Standing alone in the great prisoners' dock in Old Bailey, facing judge and court with cool assurance, Dr. H. H. Crippen yesterday entered a plea of not guilty to the charge of murdering his wife, Belle Elmore, the music hall singer, whose dismembered body is alleged to have been found buried in the cellar of their Hilldrop Crescent home.

The trial was immediately opened, and with despatch unknown in the American law courts. The defence exercised only three challenges from the first panel, the jury was quickly completed, and King's Counsel R. D. Muir opened the case for the crown.

The feature of the evidence was the admission of Bruce Miller, of Chicago, that he sometimes visited Mrs. Crippen in her husband's absence, wrote her love letters and had kissed her.

It is expected that Crippen will know his fate in less than one week. The court will be in session daily from 10.30 in the morning until five every evening.

The tiny room in which the Crippen trial is being held was jammed an hour before the court was called to order by those who had been so fortunate as to secure tickets of admission. In the court were numerous wigged and gowned barristers, who exercised their privilege and filled the court room, to the exclusion of nearly all others.

The sidewalks around Old Bailey were crowded for hours before the trial, and the judges, barristers, and witnesses had great difficulty in making their way into the court.

Lord Alverstone, Lord Chief Justice of England, who is presiding at the trial, entered with Sir John Knill, Lord Mayor of London, and together the dignitaries sat side by side on the bench. Lord Alverstone wearing his gown and great powdered wig, while at his side lay the terrible "black cap," which an English jurist must don before he may pronounce the death sentence. Crippen nervously gazed at the dread insignia.

The dapper little doctor wore a new black broadcloth frock coat, cut according to the latest style. His pearl-grey trousers were creased as though they had just come from the tailor, while his linen was immaculate. He even wore spats.

Muir, in opening for the crown, declared that the prosecution would show that Crippen and Miss Leneve had been intriguing for three years to be rid of Mrs. Crippen, and had done all in their power to bring about an estrangement and divorce, so that Miss Leneve might marry Crippen.

"His income was being absorbed," Muir continued, "in supporting a woman he did not love. We will show that on Jan. 13 last, three days before this crime is said to have been committed, Crippen was badly pinched for money.

"Gentlemen of the jury," continued the King's counsel, "the guilty conscience of Crippen exposed him. When Inspector Dow arrested him on board the Montrose, Crippen paled and exclaimed, 'I am not sorry that you caught me. This anxiety has been too much for me to bear.'"

For the purpose of knocking out the possible defence that Mrs. Crippen died a natural death, and that Crippen buried her body to prevent suspicion, Muir pointed out that death had been caused by injections of hyoscin, one of the deadliest and most subtle poisons known.

RURAL SCHOOLS WERE CRITICIZED

London, Oct. 19.—Before the Technical Education Commission yesterday Vice-Principal John Dearness of the London Normal School, strongly criticized the rural schools of Ontario, declaring that, not teaching boys from 14 to 18 to be able to work did not turn out the proper quality of men. School Inspector Edwards favored gradually increasing the compulsory school age from 14 to 16.

E. Leonard, of Leonard & Sons, boiler manufacturers, pointed out the educational value of moving pictures. The commission spent most of the day visiting educational institutions.

PREMIER OF N.S. TO RESIGN

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—A. K. MacLean, Attorney-General of Nova Scotia, who was formerly member of Parliament for Lunenburg, N.S., will very likely become Premier of Nova Scotia, in succession to Premier Murray, who, it is understood, will shortly resign to enter the Senate. The necessary vacancy has been created by the appointment of Senator MacGregor to the Lieutenant-Governorship of the province. Premier Murray had to have a leg amputated some time ago.

Mr. MacLean, while a member of the House of Commons, established a reputation as a fair and honorable Parliamentarian. He posesses much ability. When the Government had a hard task a few years ago to defend itself against the attacks of the Opposition regarding the notorious North Atlantic Trading Company transaction, Mr. MacLean was detailed to the defence. His speech on that occasion was infinitely superior to anything the members of the Government could utter on the subject.

Crippen's Banker Fails.

London, Eng., Oct. 19.—The Charing Cross Bank, with many branches in Great Britain, has suspended payment. Its advertised assets were over $8,000,000, and its deposits are estimated at $6,000,000.

Dr. Crippen, now awaiting trial for the murder of his wife, and the woman he is accused of killing, had a joint deposit of $3,000 in the bank.

A receiver for the bank has been appointed.

A Monster Deputation.

Winnipeg, Oct. 19.—The grain growers of the west have practically completed arrangments for the monster deputation which will go to Ottawa to lay before the Government their claims for a lowering of the tariff, reciprocity in farm products, and a removal of the duty on farm implements. It will be the largest deputation which has ever left the west, and will go about Dec. 1.

All Goes Into Paper.

Washington, Oct. 19.—More than four million cords of wood were used in the manufacture of pulp for paper-making in the United States in 1909, as shown by the annual report on the industry issued yesterday by the census bureau. The cost of the transformation of the wood of which there were 4,092,000 cords, was $34,478,000.

Complexion of Senate Has Changed.

Ottawa, Oct. 19.—The painting and re-decoration of the Senate chamber will be finished next week. The chamber was last painted twenty-five years ago, at the instance of Sir John A. Macdonald.

Coal Results

We sell the very best quality of hard coal, as good as we know how to buy.

¶ Are you getting results from the coal you are now using? Are you sure it is good? Are you burning it the right way?

¶ There is a deal of difference in how you handle the range or furnace. Our long experience tells us that fact and we are ready to advise any in doubt as to the best way to make the most of coal as fuel.

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 19, 1910.

TOO BAD

Too bad that we were not born today. We are growing old and will have left this earth before the conquests are complete. We would like to live to see the aerial express leave Peterborough for Toronto or Montreal. We would like to see the mysteries of electricity still further solved. Edison says that we are only on the outskirts of its possibilities. But we are growing old and must pass out and leave it all. Too bad isn't it!

KEEPING THEM OUT

It is natural to suppose that the talk of reciprocity with the United States should have the effect of not only holding in abeyance extensions to factories erected in Canada by United States firms, but also of causing the postponement of the invasion of other United States firms which have had agents in Canada spying out the land. It is, therefore, not in the least surprising to find recorded in the Toronto News the information that the representative of a big Chicago enterprise, who had been looking for a twelve-acre site for a Canadian branch, has returned home with the bargain he came to make unconcluded, because his principals deem it best to wait and find out what the Canadian tariff will read like when the coming reciprocity negotiations are completed. This is the same sort of thing that robbed Canada of nearly ten years of development while the Liberals went from one end of Canada to the other advocating commercial union and other fads which the United States manufacturers were promised would open up the Canadian markets to them as soon as the Liberal party came into power. When that party finally did find itself in a position to implement the politics it had preached, the United States manufacturers were surprised to note that the tariff wall between the two countries had not been greatly lowered. With both parties committed to the protection of Canadian industrial enterprises, United States firms have in the last thirteen years swarmed across the border, and no small degree of the industrial prosperity Canada has enjoyed in recent years may be traced to the employment afforded by their factories. It will be foolish for the manufacturers of the United States, who have an eye upon Canada, to imagine that there is any prospect of a reciprocity treaty being concluded between the two countries which will place the factory located in the United States on an even basis with the branch located in Canada so far as the Canadian market is concerned. The people of Canada would not stand for a tariff policy that would have that effect.—Montreal Gazette.

LIVING MIRACLES

Sam Luttrell has gone. Last night in the Park street Baptist church he told the story of his life. Luttrell is a reformed drunkard. He was a bum once. He is an evangelist now. What changed him, not the Gold Cure. Luttrell had tried that. The God Cure did it. Those who wish may scoff, but is it less a miracle to see a dead soul walk out into light and be a man among men, than to see the dead raised from the tomb. "Lazarus come forth." There are men once so sodden that they were not men, they were beasts, but somehow or other they got in touch with the Infinite and they were transformed, living miracles — new men. Begbie says they are "Twice Born Men."

THE LIQUOR LAW

Montreal, Oct. 17.—A hot attack upon the administration of the liquor law in Montreal was last night made by Secretary Roberts, of the Dominion Alliance, in a sermon at the First Baptist church.

Mr. Roberts declared emphatically that the laws were not forced and that Sunday night orgies occurred in saloons and hotels here, which were making a second Sodom and Gomorrah of this city.

We believe that the liquor law in Peterborough is well observed. Why? Because the hotel men know that the public will not stand for any nonsense. The man who drinks to excess is becoming pushed to the rear, and the man who, in his keenness to make money, sells liquor after hours, soon loses his friends and his license. As sure as the sun rises the day will come when there will be no bars in Ontario, when the Government will control the traffic and the inebriate will be sent to a place for medical treatment instead of to jail.

LOVE

Fond du Lac., Wis., Oct. 17.—"There is absolutely no truth in the report that my father met Miss Louisa Klinknecht through an advertisement in a matrimonial paper," declared Ald. Robert Haentze when shown a Philadelphia dispatch containing the news of the contemplated marriage of Ernest Haentze, sr., a florist of this city, 73 years old, and Miss Klinknecht, 23.

"My father met this girl," continued Ald. Haentze, "in the home of my brother Edward, in Philadelphia, where she is a servant. All the children are opposed to his marriage and are doing all in their power to prevent it. My sister, Mrs. Anthony Ferdinand, left for Philadelphia Saturday night.

"If father is married he doubtless will remain in Philadelphia. We have purchased his interests in the floral business here."

When is a person too old to love? When he becomes bald headed does love fly? When he becomes wrinkled and decrepid is cupid absent? No love never dies. It is sometimes not well expressed. It may be told by a glance of the eye, the pressure of the hand. There may never pass a word, but when two such souls meet they do not learn to love, they love instantly. "Better be an old man's darling than a young man's slave." Can you blame Miss Klinknecht?

GOOD WORK

Chief Thompson we believe you are making good and that with your force you are making Peterborough a brighter happier place to live in. A woman can go down town now at night without having a crowd of men gazing at her from every corner. That's the idea Chief, keep the crowd moving.

DARING MEN

Wellman and his crew were daring men, but the day will come when we will think no more of a trip across the ocean and lake on an aerial boat than we do to go on the train at this moment. The man who in his little craft in the year 1492, pointed for America was as daring as Wellman. Columbus succeeded. Wellman failed, but some one will yet triumph. "Gas through a pipe, absurd." This is what Sir Walter Scott said, but his house was afterwards lit with it. "To make aerial navigation possible from a commercial standpoint, absurd." That's what many a man says but, these scoffers will some day travel in the air like a bird.

EDISON'S OPINION

London, Oct. 17.—Thomas A. Edison, the foremost inventor of the age, in an interview the other day, denied the immorality of the soul; in fact, he isn't quite sure of the existence of such a thing, asserted that nature was the mother of us all, and that all that ever had been, is or can be, would sooner or later be explained along material lines. He declares that force or power we call will endures after death, but in this world, not in the next. The brain he regards but as a machine a mere phonograph cylinder, as it were. Says he:

"I cannot believe in the immortality of the soul.

"Heaven! Shall I, if I am good and earn reward, go to heaven when I die? No, no. I am not I—I am not an individual—I am an aggregate of cells; as, for instance, New York city, is an aggregate of individuals. Will New York City go to heaven?

"We are, as you know, made up each part of us is made up—of millions of cells. These cells are not absolutely independent any more than you, as an individual living in New York City, are independent; but each cell is an individual. You are a part of the city; each cell is a part of you.

"Why should you, a collection of cells, be immortal as a collection any more than New York City, a collection of individuals, should be immortal as a collection? Its citizens are continually dying, moving away and being replaced. Your cells are continually dying, moving away and being replaced."

We do not agree with this Edison for a single moment. A Voice tells the writer that he is immortal. Where the Voice speaks from he cannot say. A book called the Bible declares we are immortal. No tribe is so degraded but that there is some belief in immortality among them. The miracles performed daily tells us that there is an Unknown power. Edison is a marvel, but although he can make a phonograph he cannot make the life that speaks into a phonograph, although he can give as many marvelous inventions he cannot make a rose or perfume the flower. Until he can make the apple grow and the peach to bloom we prefer to take God's word for immortality against Edison's opinion.

Give me to sing no song sublime
With words of lofty sound,
With marching meter, rolling rhyme,
And diction all profound;
Give me to sing no epic grand,
No material verses wrought
To swell the war lust through the land
And shame each peaceful spot!

Give me to sing no prophecy,
No vision bright, which wings
Into that life which is to be
When Death his sickle swings;
Give me to sing no mysteries
Of glorious estate;
For I am not as one of these—
Nor noble, grand nor great!

Just let me in my daily life
Bear open heart and eye
To joy and sorrow, rest and strife,
Men show in passing by;
Just let me sing my whole life long,
With kindly, conscious mind,
Of simple things, a simple song
For simple humankind!

I wasted $100! then Zam-Buk cured me for $1.

If you are suffering from any form of skin disease or injury, read this!

Mr. Arthur Fairbank, of 547 Lansdowne Ave., Toronto, is the speaker, and he says: "A bad eruption on my forehead quickly spread until it covered my scalp with foul and painful sores. I went to a doctor, who treated me for it. Still the sores spread until almost the whole of my head was affected. As the doctor's treatment did me very little good, I left it off and tried various home remedies. I also tried taking various aperient medicines to try to cure the outbreak through the blood. Still it was in vain!

"Then I tried blood mixtures, but not one of them did me any good. I was by that time in a shocking condition, and as a last resource I went to a skin specialist. He treated me for a period and it cost me over $50, but the sores got no better. They would itch and burn at times until I was nearly mad. I must have spent over $100 on useless remedies, when one day a friend asked me why I had not tried Zam-Buk, and gave me a little. That little bit of Zam-Buk did me more good than all the long treatment I had had from doctors and specialists. I immediately sent for a supply of the balm and started right in to give it a proper trial. Very soon I began to see and feel a great difference in the sores, and I knew that at last I had got something that would cure me. Zam-Buk cured me at a trifling cost. If I had got it at first it would have saved me dollars, and hours and hours of pain."

For all forms of skin diseases, ulcers, abscesses, eczema, ringworm, blood-poisoning, etc., Zam-Buk is a sure cure. It also heals old wounds, cuts, burns, bruises, cold sores, chaps, and cures piles. A Gentleman From Mississippi

Novelized From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THOMAS A. WISE

"I mean," replied Cullen, "that rumors are going around that you are keeping Langdon away from the crowd of 'insiders' in the senate for your own purposes—that, in short, you plan to"—

"I understand," was the quick interruption. "I am accused of wanting to 'deliver' Senator Langdon, guarantee his vote, on some graft proposition, so that I can get the money and not be himself. Consequently I'm tipping him off on what measures are honest, so that he'll vote for them, until—until I'm offered my price, then influence him to vote for some big crooked scheme, telling him it is all right. He votes as I suggest, and I get the money!"

"That's what 'delivering a man' means in Washington," dryly answered the Chicago correspondent. "It means winning a man's confidence, his support, his vote, through friendship and then selling it for cash"—

"But you, Dick, you have"—

"Of course, old man, I have denied the truth of this. I knew you too well to doubt you. Still, the yarn is hurting you. Remember that western senator who was 'delivered' twice, both ways, on a graft bill?" he laughingly asked the secretary.

"Should say I did, Dick. That is the record for that game. It was a corporation measure. One railroad wanted it; another opposed it. The senator innocently told an eastern senator that he was going to vote for the bill. Then the easterner went to the railroad wanting the bill passed and got $7,000 on his absolute promise that he would get Senator X. to vote for it, who, of course, did vote for it."

"That concerns future senators."

"Yes," said Cullen, "and later, when Senator X. heard that Senator Z. had got money for his vote, he was wild. Then when another effort was made to pass the bill (which had been defeated) the 'delivered' senator said to Z. as he met him unexpectedly: 'You scoundrel, here's where I get square with you to some extent. Anyway, I'm going to vote against that bill this time and make a long speech against it too.' Senator Z. then hustled to the lobbyist of the railroad that wanted the bill killed and guaranteed him that for $10,000 he could get Senator X. to change his vote, to vote against the bill."

"And he got the money, too, both ways," added Haines as Cullen concluded, "and both railroads to this day think that X. received the money from Z."

"Of course," said Cullen, "but X. was to blame, though. He didn't know enough to keep to himself how he was going to vote. Any man that talks that way will be 'delivered.'"

"I know how to stop those rumors, for I'm sure it's Peabody's work, he thinking Langdon will bear the talk and mistrust me," began Haines, when in came Senator Langdon himself, his face beaming contentedly. Little did the junior senator from Mississippi realize that he was soon to face the severest trial, the most vital crisis, of his entire life.

Cullen responded to the senator's cheery greeting of "Mornin', everybody!"

"Senator," he asked Cullen, "my paper wants your opinion on the question of the election of senators by popular vote. Do you think the system of electing senators by vote of state legislatures should be abolished?"

The Mississippian cocked his head to one side.

"I reckon that's a question that concerns future senators and not those already elected," he chuckled.

Haines laughed at Cullen, who thrust his pad into his pocket and hurried away.

"It is today that I appear before the ways and means committee, isn't it?" Langdon queried of his secretary.

"Yes," said Haines, consulting his memorandum book. "At 11 o'clock you go before ways and means to put forward the needs of your state on the matter of the reduction of the tariff on aluminium hydrates. The people of Mississippi believe it has actually put back life into the exhausted cotton lands. In Virginia they hope to use it on the tobacco fields."

"Where does the pesky stuff come from?" asked the senator.

"From South America," coached the secretary. "The south is in a hurry for it, so the duty must come down. You'll have to bluff a bit, because Peabody and his crowd will try to make a kind of bargain—wanting you to keep up iron and steel duties. But you don't believe that iron and steel need help, you will tell them, don't you see, so that they will feel the necessity of giving you what you want for the south in order to gain your support for the iron and steel demands."

The office door opened and Senator Peabody appeared.

"Peabody," whispered the secretary.

Instantly the Mississippian had his cue. His back to Peabody, he rose, brought down his fist heavily upon the desk and expounded oratorically to Haines:

"What we can produce of aluminium hydrates, my boy, is problematical, but the south is in a hurry for it, and the duty must come down. It's got to come down, and I'm not going to do anything else until it does."

The secretary stretched across the desk.

"Excuse me, senator; Senator Peabody is here," he said loudly and surprisedly, as though he had just sighted the boss of the senate.

The Mississippian turned.

"Oh, good morning, senator. I was just talking with my secretary about that hydrate clause."

Peabody bowed slightly.

"Yes, I knew it was coming up," he said, "so I just dropped over. I'm not opposed to it or any southern measure, but it makes it more difficult for me when you southern people oppose certain Pittsburg interests that I have to take care of."

Langdon smiled.

"I've never been in Pittsburg, but they tell me it looks as if it could take care of itself."

The visitor shrugged his shoulders.

"That's true enough, but give and take is the rule in political matters, Langdon."

This remark brought a frown to Langdon's face.

"I don't like bargaining between gentlemen, Peabody. More important still, I don't believe American politics has to be run on that plan. Why can't we change a lot of things now that we are here?"

Langdon became so enthused that he paced up and down the room as he spoke.

"Peabody, you and Stevens and I," continued Langdon, "could get our friends together and right now start to make this great capital of our great country the place of the 'square deal,' the place where give and take, bargain and sale, are unknown. We could start a movement that would drive out all secret influences"—

The secretary noticed Peabody's involuntary start.

"The newspapers would help us," went on Langdon. "Public opinion would be with us, and both houses of congress would have to join in the work if we went out in front, led the way and showed them their plain duty. And I tell you, Senator Peabody, that the principles that gave birth to this country, the principles of truth, honesty, justice and independence, would rule in Washington"—

"If Washington cared anything about them, Langdon," interjected the Pennsylvanian.

"That's my point," cried the Mississippian—"let us teach Washington to care about them!"

"Langdon, Langdon," said Peabody patronizingly, "you've seized on a bigger task than you know. After you reform Washington you will have to go on and reform human nature, human instincts, every human being in the country, if you want to make politics this angelic thing you describe. It isn't politics, it's humanity, that's wrong," waving aside a protest from Langdon.

"Anyway your idea is not constitutional, Langdon," continued Peabody. "You want everybody to have a share in the national government. That wouldn't meet the theory of centralization woven into our political system by its founders. They intended that our government should be controlled by a limited number of representatives, so that authority can be fixed and responsibility ascertained."

"You distort my meaning!" cried Langdon. "And, senator, I would like to ask why so many high priced constitutional lawyers who enter congress spend so much time in placing the constitution of the United States between themselves and their duty, sir, between the people and their government, sir, between the nation and its destiny? I want to know if in your opinion the constitution was designed to throttle expression of the public will?"

"Of course not. That's the reason you and I, Langdon, and the others are elected to the senate," added Peabody, starting to leave. Then he halted. "By the way, senator," he said, "I'll do my best to arrange what you want regarding aluminium hydrates for the sake of the south, and I'll also stand with you for Altacoola for the naval base. Our committee is to make its report tomorrow."

Langdon observed the penetrating gaze that Peabody had fixed on him. It seemed to betray that the Pennsylvanian's apparently careless manner was assumed.

"H'm!" coughed Langdon, glancing at Haines. "I'm not absolutely committed to Altacoola until I'm sure it's the best place. I'll make up my mind today definitely, and I think it will be for Altacoola."

"My boy, the duty must come down."

The boss of the senate went out, glaring venomously at Haines, slamming the door.

A moment later a page boy brought in a card. "Colonel J. D. Telfer, Gulf City," read the senator.

"Bud," he remarked to the secretary, "I'm going to send my old acquaintance, Telfer, mayor of Gulf City, in here for you to talk to. He'll want to know about his town's chances for being chosen as the naval base. I must hurry away, as I have an appointment with my daughters and Mrs. Spangler before going before ways and means."

CHAPTER XI.

ON THE TRAIL OF THE "INSIDERS."

COLONEL J. D. TELFER (J. D. standing for Jefferson Davis, he explained proudly to Haines) proved a warm advocate of the doubtful merits of Gulf City as a hundred million dollar naval base. His flushed face grew redder, his long white hair became disordered, and he tugged at his white mustache continually as he waxed warmer in his efforts to impress the senator's secretary.

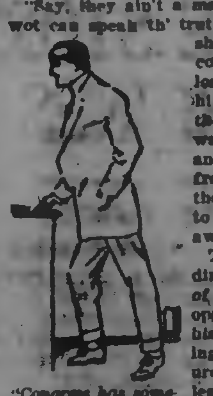
"I tell you, Mr. Haines, Gulf City, sah, leads all the south when it comes to choosin' ground fo' a naval base. Her vast expanse of crystal sea, her miles upon miles of silvah sands, sah, protected by a natural harbor and th' islands of Mississippi sound, make her th' only spot to be considered. She's God's own choice and the people's, too, for a naval base."

"But unfortunately congress also has something to say about choosing it," spoke Haines.

"To be shuah they do," said Gulf City's mayor, "but"—

"And there was a man here from Altacoola yesterday," again interrupted the secretary, "who said that Gulf City was fit only to be the state refuge for aged and indigent frogs."

"Say, they ain't a man in Altacoola wot can speak th' truth," indignantly shrieked the old colonel, almost losing control of himself, "because their heads is always a-buzzin' and a-hummin' from th' quinine they have to take to keep the fever away, sah."



"Congress has something to say"—

The mayor sat directly in front of Haines, at the opposite side of his desk. Regaining his composure, he suddenly leaned forward and half whispered to the secretary:

"Mah young friend, don't let Senator Langdon get switched away from Gulf City by them cheap skates from Altacoola. Now, if you'll get th' senator to vote fo' Gulf City we'll see—I'll see, sah, as an officer of th' Gulf City Lan' company—that you get taken ca-ah of."

Haines' eyes opened wide.

"Go on, colonel; go on with your offer," he said.

"Well, I'll see that a block of stock, sah—a big block—is set aside fo' Senator Langdon an' another fo' you too. We've made this ah-rangement elsewheah. We'll outbid Altacoola everah time. They're po' sports an' hate to give up."

"So Altacoola is bidding, too?" excitedly asked Haines.

"Why, of co'se it is. Ah yo' as blind as that o' ah yo' foolin' with me?" questioned Telfer suspiciously. "Seems to me yo' ought to know more about that end of it than a fellah clear from th' gulf."

To be continued.

In succession to the late Sir George Drummond, Louis Lavergne, M.P. for Drummond and Arthabaska, has been appointed to the Senate.

Specialist Could Not Remove Stone In The Bladder

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

JOLIETTE, P.Q.

"During August last, I went to Montreal to consult a specialist as I had been suffering terribly with Stone in the Bladder.

He decided to operate but said the stone was too large to remove and too hard to crush. I returned home and was recommended by a friend to try GIN PILLS.

They relieved the pain. I took two boxes and went back to the specialist. He said the stone was smaller but he could not remove it although he tried for two hours and a half. I returned home and continued to take GIN PILLS, and to my great surprise and joy, I passed the stone.

GIN PILLS are the best medicine in the world and because they did me so much good, I will recommend them all the rest of my life". 46

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE

CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

LIFE STORY OF THE MAN WHO SHINES AS DRUNKARD'S BEACON

EVANGELISTIC EPIGRAMS

"I BELIEVE THAT JUST AS TRULY AS PAUL WAS APPOINTED APOSTLE TO THE GENTILES, I HAVE BEEN APPOINTED APOSTLE TO THE DRUNKARD."

"I DARE THE MAN TO TRUST GOD AND EVER FALL."

"THERE ARE AS MANY OLD SINNERS IN THE CHURCH AS THERE ARE CHRISTIANS. EVERYWHERE I GO I RAISE MY VOICE AGAINST CHURCHIANITY INSTEAD OF CHRISTIANITY."

"WHEN I WAS A LITTLE BIT OF A FELLOW I NEARLY POISONED OTHER CHILDREN PLAYING DOCTOR. IT WAS IN ME."

"A GIRL WITH THE SWEETEST FACE IN THE WORLD CAME INTO MY LIFE. I WAS KNOCKED OUT IN THE FIRST ROUND.

"YOU CAN BUY A WOMAN, BUT YOU CAN'T BUY A WIFE. SHE'S ABOVE PRICE."

"MAN IS SUPPOSED TO BE THE STRONGER VESSEL. I'VE FOUND IT OUT EVERYWHERE I GO THAT WOMAN IS THE STRONGER VESSEL. REAL STRENGTH IS THE STRENGTH OF HEART."

"There are only two reasons why I tell this story—First, that God may be honored; second, that some poor fellow struggling and toiling in the meshes of sin may see a way out."

This is the way Dr. Sam Luttrell introduced the story of his life last night at the Park St. Baptist church. The address was the last one of a two weeks' series of evangelistic meetings at Park Street, and the church was packed.

Dr. Luttrell said he would have liked to have heard the story he was going to tell many years ago, and he was certain he would have accepted Christ long before he did.

WHAT HE WASN'T TOLD.

He had gone to church. He had gone to Sunday school. He had had Godly parents. But he never had heard that Christ not only had the power to save, but had power to take all desire for sin out of a man's life.

To join the church was not the only thing to do. All the influences of the church to-day weren't for good, the speaker was sorry to say. But nevertheless this was true.

A GRUELLING TASK.

To tell of one's own degradation to the depths of drunkenness is no easy task, and it wasn't easy for Sam Luttrell last night. He did it for a reason though. Money wasn't the reason. He has made and can make far more in the practise of medicine than in shining as the drunkard's beacon. But he wants to get the booze fighter and moral degenerate and respectable sinner. That's why he tells the story of his life. Anyone who would not be moved and impressed by it must be of adamant.

The evangelist said it drew from the very centre of vitality to tell that story, to recall his own disgrace before God and man. He liked evangelistic work, but the telling of that story brought back terrible scenes that were never to come into his life again.

GOOD START IN LIFE.

Dr. Luttrell said he didn't know of anyone who had started out in life under more favorable circumstances than he had. He had a father with a good position and plenty of money, and a mother as pure as the driven snow.

THE CHILD'S APPETITE.

When he was a child there was something that he wanted. He would buy candies, taste one, and then give them away to other children. They weren't what he wanted.

When twelve years of age the boy had his first drink of liquor. That was what he wanted.

There had always been a drunkard in the family. This was the skeleton in the closet.

USED TO COME HOME ON SPREES

The evangelist's father was superintendent on the G.T.R. The former, for that reason, used to have right of way on the road. Twenty-five years ago he used to come from Toronto to Peterborough and go on drunks with his uncle, who now lies in a nearby cemetery. He went to a drunkard's grave.

The doctor told of his parents sending him away to school, of his expulsion from academies, of his losing fifty-two positions, of his suffering wrecked nerves and delerium tremens, of a desperate but impossible battle against the hereditary disease of drunkenness, until he was converted. And that was less than a year ago at the Yonge Street Mission, Toronto. He broke his mother's heart, and his father's bank account.

AN INHERITED DISEASE.

Sam Luttrell believes in heredity. He spoke from the standpoint of the practical physician. He believes the taste for strong drink is inherited by the child or by the grandchild, just as surely as consumption is; or just as surely as the child has the parents' features. That was the case with him, and although he tried numerous cures, made many resolutions, fought the thirst with the strongest will power of a strong willed man, there was only one cure for him.

THE ONLY CURE.

Speaking of of strong willed, Dr. Luttrell says there are inveterate drunkards who have the strongest of wills, men of grit and backbone, fighting against an overpowering thirst that is a part of their nature.

There was only one cure for Sam Luttrell—that was the God cure.

MILITARY SMOKER IN ARMOURIES LAST NIGHT

Company C., of the 57th Regiment assembled last evening in the recreation room of the Armouries, and held a meeting combining business with pleasure.

The object of the meeting was to discuss plans and arrangements whereby the strength and efficiency of the company could be increased. Lieutenant Comstock, who is in command of the company, and Color-Sergeant Succe were present. The attendance was very large and the enthusiasm displayed last evening augurs favorably for the future success of this section of the Regiment.

The meeting took the form of a general smoker. Ice cream, cigars and other light refreshments were served during the evening.

As a result of the discussion it was decided to go in for sport also. Two baseball teams were formed, and three bowling teams. A club was also formed and a constitution drawn up. They will have uniform sweaters and exclusive colors. With such an active company at work the regiment will no doubt boom the coming season.

TOOK WRONG AMOUNT; GIVEN FOURTEEN DAYS

Walter Mahaffy goes to the county jail for fourteen days.

After the expiration of that term, if he dodges the straight and narrow path, and faces Magistrate Dumble again it will mean Central Prison.

Mahaffy before being arrested some ten days ago, worked at the plant of Taylor and Hall, cement brick and block manufacturers, and he took $7 for 4 1-2 hours' work, when this amount was due only for 4 1-2 days' work. He fell down when he should have told the cashier of the mistake.

"What do you want me to do with you," asked the Magistrate this morning.

The prisoner answered that he wanted another chance and if successful would do better and not take what was not his own, again.

"But this is the third time," continued his Worship.

This, however, didn't quench Walter's enthusiasm in asking for another chance.

"It will be one month in jail," was what he heard and the next time it will be Central Prison.

But Walter still persevered.

"Can't you take off the ten days I've been in jail?" he asked. His speech found favor, and he will rake the golden autumn leaves for two weeks.

PRICE OF POTATOES

Takes a Drop to 80 Cents—Shipments From Outside Points Arriving Here

Two farmers supplied the offering in potatoes at the market this morning and asked 80c per bag.

This price, which is a decrease from last Saturday's of twenty cents, also prevails in the retail stores.

The cause of the lowering in the price is due to the large shipments of potatoes which are arriving in the city, and mostly being brought up from Rice Lake and vicinity.

STRAWBERRIES IN OCTOBER

Raspberries are not the only berries that can grow in October. Recently Mr. Harry Noyes section foreman on the G.T.R. and a brother of Mr. Charles Noyes East City, discovered quite a number of wild strawberries growing beside the railway track near Fraserville. He brought several little sprouts on which were berries into the city. Little white buds just opening up were on some of the sprouts. The berries though not very large appear to be healthy and ripe. As far as can be learned these are the only strawberries that have been discovered growing in October in this neighborhood.

THE NEW HOME OF THE WEST END ATHLETIC CLUB

Congratulations are due the West End Athletic Club in the progressive spirit that has marked the life of the club since its inception, and which has now placed that organization in the high position which it now occupies. The new club rooms, on the third flat over the Royal Theatre, are bright and thoroughly up-to-date, being furnished elaborately, Mr. Pappas sparing no expense to give the club the very best. The floors in the four rooms are of one-inch hardwood, and ceilings metallic, and an Orme piano brings about a completeness that is very pleasing.

In the pool and billiard room are two expensive tables, and everything is up to the minute. One long room is fitted up for club dances and social evenings and a smaller one for dressing.

Club photos and other hangings are seen to advantage on the walls, and altogether the new home of the West Ends is an ideal one.

Over thirty-five members are now enrolled, and this number will no doubt greatly increase shortly.

The opening of the club is being arranged for, and a committee is in charge.

The officers are—

President—John Oldham.
Vice-President—Fred Haskill.
Secretary—Thos. Rielley.
Treasurer—Howard Kirn.

PETERBOROUGH CURLERS GROUPED FOR THE SEASON

Annual Meeting of Ontario Curling Association Held at Toronto—Mr. R. M. Waddell Represented the Local Club

The semi-annual meeting of the Ontario Curling Association was held at Toronto yesterday. Mr. R. M. Waddell represented the Peterborough Curling Club.

The local club was drawn as follows in the Ontario Tankard—

Group No. 2—Fenelon Falls, Lindsay, Peterborough, Campbellford, Port Hope, Bobcaygeon, Cannington. Play at Peterborough. Umpire, Mr. F. F. Matthews.

In the District Cup grouping Peterborough will play with the following clubs—

District No. 2—Cannington, Peterborough, Keene, Lindsay, Fenelon Falls, Bobcaygeon, Port Hope, Campbellford. Play at Lindsay. Umpire, Mr. J. D. Flavelle.

The special committee appointed to consider the question of the growing tendency among the clubs to compete for trophies and prizes, which is destroying the playing of friendly games and a true spirit of curling, reported as follows—

"We recognize that the social and friendly side of the game is decreasing, and in our opinion this is brought about by so many bonspiels and cup competitions being held. We have found great difficulty in arriving at ways and means of overcoming this difficulty, as we do not feel that arbitrary measures should be taken without the consent of the clubs.

"We would therefore make the following suggestions, and desire that they be brought before the clubs for an expression of opinion, and the secretary of the Ontario Curling Association advised of the conclusions arrived at—

"1. That all bonspiels and cup competitions be discontinued for one season, except the Ontario Curling Association competition and that the clubs devote themselves to the playing of friendly games.

"2. That if the clubs feel disposed to hold bonspiels and cup competitions, they should confine them to clubs belonging to, and members of said clubs registered with, this association.

"3. That this association should control bonspiels and cup competitions held or taken part in by clubs belonging to this association by requiring the club holding such competitions to first obtain from this association a permit for holding same."

The only motion carried was to the effect that first and second players, who have played only one game in the Tankard in the past, may play skip or vice-skip in the District Cup in the future.

BRIEF SPORT

There is no game to-day in the world's series, but the teams play at Chicago to-morrow.

It looks like Ben Simpson for the Hamilton Tigers' lineup Saturday, when they meet Ottawa.

Connie Murphy won't be allowed even to coach in the third game between Eatons and St. Mary's at Toronto, Saturday.

Mr. Gerald McFadden has framed two splendid pictures of the Athletics and Cubs and they are on exhibition at Snelgroves.

JACK CROUGH INJURED AGAIN

The Winnipeg Free Press says of "Dummy" Crough, in connection with the St. John's vs Rowing Club rugby game on Saturday, and which was won by Crough's team by a score of 16 to 13—

"Dummy" Crough was back into the game again and showed his class by his strong booting, though he fumbled the ball a lot. His shoulder was pulled out again when he saved the game by nailing Rawif who had passed everybody but the back.

RUNNING

Two of last year's competitors in the Examiner road race will enter again this year. They are Morris Montgomery and Chauncey Knapp.

PHILLIES AGAIN.

Athletics Administer Sound Drubbing to the Cubs.

Philadelphia, Oct. 19.—In a game that was full of thrills from the start almost to the finish the Philadelphia American League champions yesterday afternoon administered a crushing defeat to the Chicago National League champions before more than 24,000 persons. The score was 9 to 3.

The spectators received a shock when Pitcher Coombs showed unsteadiness, but this was quickly forgotten a little later when the fighting Athletics forged to the front. But in the seventh inning, when Captain Chance's splendid machine was crushed under a canonading of hits, the big crowd's enthusiasm knew no bounds. Almost everything that goes into a baseball game and makes it one of the most exciting of outdoor sports was in evidence.

The hero of the afternoon was Eddie Collins, second baseman of the home team, who several times electrified the crowd by his sensational work, and in five times at the bat reached first every time, three hits, two of them doubles, receiving a base on balls and making a force play. He scored two runs and sent two home; accepted ten chances without an error, figured in two sensational plays that stopped Chicago from running the bases and stole bases twice on the famous Kling.

Coombs pitched a most erratic game, giving nine bases on balls, and several times was pulled out of critical places by brilliant work behind him. In fact he seemed to show better form when the bases were occupied than when the bags were clear. This is shown by the fact that Chicago had fourteen men left on the bases.

Chicago's inside play did not seem to be in working order, for with the men on all bases, and Coombs unsteady, some sharp pieces of fielding would break up the inning after there was every prospect of a score.

No one questions the honest motives of those who advocate local option, or prohibition—not even we who brew Regal Lager. But the temperate folk who use Regal Lager as a daily beverage, for the health's sake know how mistaken is the idea that so pure a tonic a drink is an intoxican.

PRESENTATION TO DR. LUTTRELL

Dr. Sam Luttrell, who has been conducting evangelistic services at Park St. Church for the past two weeks, was presented with a purse of money and an address last night at the church by the church and Helping Hand Bible Class.

He made grateful acknowledgement.

THE MECHANICAL DRAWING CLASS AT THE Y.M.C.A.

If all the men, who have signed up in the mechanical drawing class at the Y.M.C.A. are in their places to-night there will be sixteen students for the teacher to face. The class will hold its first session commencing 8 o'clock sharp and the importance of being present at this first session can hardly be overestimated.

The very best teacher that could be secured will be in charge and will be prepared to give each student the attention he needs.

It means advancement to the young man who is willing to sacrifice a little this winter to take in this class. Young man ask your foreman whether or not it would be to your advantage to take in this class and see what he says. Do not waste your precious time this winter walking the streets and playing hockey when you can turn your time into money.

There will be a good delegation of Peterborough business men at the big convention at Toronto next week. Ten men have already signified their intention of being present and there will likely be others. This will be the biggest and best convention held in Canada this year. There will be two thousand men in attendance from all over the Continent and from Great Britain and Europe. Some of the best speakers in the world will be heard there and business will be transacted which will mean much to the future of the Y.M.C.A. in America.

The Board of Directors met last evening and transacted much necessary business. A large number of applications for membership were passed and the Membership Committee complimented on their good work. It was reported that one hundred new lockers had been ordered and that some of them would be finished and rushed here just as soon as possible. These will be the best lockers to be purchased made of heavy wire and steel and fitted with combination locks.

New Bible classes are being organized every week. Mr. Tait has a class for boys which meets every Sunday morning at 9.30. Last Sunday morning Mr. Tait taught the lesson with the help of a dry battery and a bell drawing some very helpful lessons from these things. Another class will be organized on Friday night to be taught by Mr. Galley. This class will be for working boys. Every boy ought to be enrolled.

Watch for the announcement of the men's meeting for next Sunday. It will interest you.

LAKEFIELD NOTES

On Wednesday evening a social was held in the school room of the Presbyterian church by the members of the different mission bands, which was attended by a large number of the members of the congregation. A most enjoyable time was spent in games and other amusements. During the evening the evening Rev. Mr. Burns, who had labored faithfully in the church during the past four years, and who leaves to take a graduate course in the Princeton University, was presented with an address and a purse of money from the members of the congregation. Mrs. Burns, who had been actively identified with the different mission bands, was presented with an address and a purse of gold. Mr. and Mrs. Burns were completely taken by surprise, but thanked the doners for their good will and kindly feeling towards them. Refreshments were then served and a pleasant evening was brought to a close.

Once you have used

you will readily pay the little more it may cost.

Until you have actually tried PURITY FLOUR you may demur at the trifle more it costs you than lower grade flours cost——but your first sack will show you why that seemingly higher price is a real economy for you

PURITY FLOUR

That trial sack (which you ought to order this very day) will teach you what Purity Flour is worth to you, as contrasted with an ordinary flour.

PURITY FLOUR is milled from only the kernels of the choicest Manitoba hard wheat—the world's wheat standard.

From the 84 grain elevators which we own and operate, we select the finest wheat of the year's crop. This, at our mills, is so treated that only the most richly-nourishing part of the wheat berry gets into a PURITY sack or a PURITY barrel.

The result is a flour so strong that it produces more bread for the quantity used than ordinary flour

But bulk of product is not all you are to expect of PURITY FLOUR. You are to expect lighter, snowier bread; bread that has the nutlike, sweet, wholesome taste every housewife tries to put into the bread she bakes.

PURITY FLOUR, moreover, is not merely a bread flour. It is an every-purpose flour. It makes the kind of pastry you can be proud of—cake that invites praise—biscuits that suggest an encore.

Not only is PURITY the flour for economy's sake, you see, but the flour for quality baking. Thus, the few extra cents which it may cost you actually insures you against baking disappointments. PURITY FLOUR is the flour you will never be without, once you fully test its unusual merits.

Begin with a small trial sack, if you are dubious. Your grocer can supply you.

"More bread and better bread"

PROTECTION AND TAXATION

The following letter is from the Toronto News:—

To the Editor of the Toronto News.

Sir,—A few days ago I addressed a letter to The Globe on Direct Taxation. It has not yet appeared. That worthy journal is now very triumphant in the prosperity of the country, as indicated by revenue returns. I asked The Globe why it was that we hear nothing nowadays of Direct Taxation. In the old days of Conservative rule when Conservatives asked their critics what objection there was to raising a revenue and at the same time protecting the industries of the country, the reply was always made that it was a crime to "protect," while as for raising a revenue the only easy and inexpensive way to do it was by direct taxation. Have we direct taxation to-day? No, not not even a word concerning it. Yet, the indirect and "expensive" method of raising a revenue for public works is strictly adhered to. Surely there is a tremendous falling away in Liberal professions here. Are we not entitled to an explanation of it if one can be given? To waste as The Globe used to allege twenty-five per cent. of the revenue in collection it is not less a "crime" to-day than formerly is it? And still the Globe does not admit that Sir Wilfrid is a protectionist. So that we have less excuse than ever for the failure to enforce Direct Taxation. A surplus under such conditions is surely a "crime."

Then, again, it is stated that the surplus for the last fiscal year in Canada is thirty millions. It is also stated that Canada is a larger customer of the United States than ever, larger than Germany. We have then this glaring fact staring us in the face, viz., that the tariff is bleeding us for revenue and national improvement purposes to the tune of thirty million dollars a year, building up the foreigner and killing our industries at the same time. Now! I am not going to tax your patience and good-will by asking you the usual awkward questions concerning this anomaly, but I am going to ask you where the glory of a thirty million surplus comes in, that should, according to The Globe's own argument be left in the pockets of the people since it is not protective? The surplus is burning the Canadian consumer's candle at both ends if anything ever was, since it exhausts his pocket yet does not protect his industry. And moreover, it furnishes the foreigner with his ready cash, which is surely the thing we can least afford to part with. To emphasize one of my points, Mr. Editor, I would like to suggest to your artist that he draw a cartoon showing the enormous increase in the importation of American and other foreign manufactures, the consequent immense revenue, the payment by the Canadian taxpayer of the duties upon them the while he is imagining he is enjoying the height of rational prosperity, and a little further off in the background the bounty-fed steel manufacturer sympathizing with the dying woollen victim.

But, sir, if the revenue is to continue to be derived from the import of American goods under a tariff that since it does not protect is merely a burden on the consumer, why not allow us a purely free trade tariff, and then, if we want to go in for the G.T.P.'s and other great enterprises, we can borrow the money and do it in a straight, businesslike manner instead of going about it as at present in an indirect, wasteful, destructive and absurd way? Is is not laughable to the last degree that the American, and the German should be rejoicing in their increased trade with Canada, while we rejoice because of our increased revenue derived from ineffectual duties paid by ourselves upon that date? If there were successful competition in Canada and a thoroughly protective tariff as well then the foreigner would have to pay the duty to get in, but at present, having killed home competition, we pay the duty. There is no excuse for a tariff that does not protect. If protection is not necessary or given, then the principle of Free Trade immediately reasserts itself.

For the Children

Prince Atom, World's Smallest Athlete.

A most remarkable little man is Prince Atom, the smallest midget in the world. The prince, who is soon to visit this country, stands just a little over two feet high and is built in excellent proportion. Although such a tiny fellow, he is the son of parents of normal size. He is well educated, speaking several languages. His title, of course, is purely fanciful, as he is not of royal blood.

For his size the prince is endowed with considerable muscular strength, and he is a skilled acrobat. Being fond of active sports, the little man has become expert in tumbling and other athletic feats. Recently he appeared before the children of the crown prince of Germany at Berlin and won their hearts no less by his wit than his physical feats.

The Siamese Twins.

The Siamese twins were the most famous freaks that were ever shown in American museums. They were Chinese boys born at Bang Becklong and taking their title from the country where they were brought up. Their names were Eng and Chang. The babies, born in 1825, were united by a band of flesh that stretched from the breast of one to the breast of the other. They were brought to America when they were little more than children and were exhibited in museums for many years. Their death occurred in 1872.

Dutch Worthy of Great Trust.

Replying to an address of welcome from the Pietermaritzburg municipality on a recent occasion, General Botha, the Union Prime Minister, reiterated his intention of making the Union a success and of proving to the British people that the Dutch were worthy of the great trust reposed in them. Any Government, Gen. Botha continued, which adopted any other policy would be short-lived. The British flag was the best thing for the Union, and ensured the protection of the young nation. He promised to do his utmost to kill racialism throughout the Union, and urged the use of common-sense, which would enable the races to live peacefully together.

Butter Hints.

One bad butter cow will eat up the profit of several good ones.

Good butter must be properly presented to the market. It must not only be good, but look good.

High grade butter is the result of intelligence, poor butter the result of ignorance. The one is in demand everywhere; the other goes begging in the market.

Butter worth 40 cents per pound is made from the same milk that grease worth 20 cents a pound is made from, and it takes as much to make the one as the other.

Dairy cows must be treated in accordance with their importance as a factor of success, and the milk and cream must be handled properly from cow to churn and from churn to market.

General French as a Boy.

General Sir John French has left Canada after an almost end-to-end inspection of her soldiers. But one bet he overlooked, and it was a good bet too. In the route of his march the headquarters staff at Ottawa forgot to mark a stop-over at any of the camps in the Province of Quebec. Montreal officers are somewhat mystified at this apparent neglect and, during the day or two that he remained in the city, before sailing for home, several diplomatic attempts were made to find out from the general himself what reasons were given for not allotting him sufficient time to look over the cavalry at Farnham and the infantry at Three Rivers and Levis.

"That's a conundrum," replied the general laughingly, when the question was put to him point blank. "And, speaking of conundrums," continued he, "I never could get that word straight, much less frame up an answer to one. Cucumbers, cumberers and conundrums all looked alike to me when I was a boy.

"As you probably know I am the only boy in a family of seven, the others, naturally, being girls. At rather an early age I took it upon myself as 'the only man of the family' to conduct family prayers when my father was away. My mother was very pleased at first, but hastily withdrew her consent when she heard my first effort. I said, 'Oh, Lord, cut us not off as cucumbers of the ground'."

Johnny meant cumberers.

Preparations are being made at a large coke-oven plant at Connellsville, Pa., to extract oil from smoke.

THE RUSSIAN PEASANT.

Stupid and Poor, a Good Fellow Who Merely Exists.

The Russian peasant does not live; he merely exists. "Nitchevo" ("It is nothing"), he merely says when anything happens to him. Nothing matters, nothing could be worse, and "Nitchevo" is his panacea for all evils. And yet the Russian moujik is really a fine fellow. Ordinarily, H. P. Kennard tells us in his book, "The Russian Peasant," he is a splendid, well built man, large limbed, large headed and healthy. He is equally unaffected by 20 degrees of frost or twenty glasses of vodka. He is clothed in uncured sheepskins and carries in winter more clothes than the average Englishman could stand up in.

He is unspeakably stupid, however, and his dream of happiness is to gorge, to sleep as much as possible through the winter and dance and sing in the summer. But the stranger's first objection to the moujik is that he smells—not because he does not wash himself. As a matter of fact, in every village there are public baths—baaza—and the peasants wash themselves there unfailingly every Saturday in order to be allowed to go to church on Sunday, for the Orthodox church enjoins cleanliness.

The Russian peasant is always poor and generally in debt. He plows the land in the same way that his father plowed it and gets as little for his labor. His main worry in life is how to pay the governor's taxes. If he says he cannot pay he is flogged, or perhaps he will sell part of his next year's power of work—i. e., work for nothing for several months—to raise a loan, and of course he is worse off than ever the following year.

On Christmas night at dusk the marriageable village girls go out into the streets and meet their young men, and one says, "What is your name?" The young man answers "Foma," and she replies, "My husband's name is Foma."

Some days later at the girl's home relations are gathered together. There comes a knock at the door. The starosta and the young man enter, carrying loaves of bread. The starosta says something like this:

"We are German people, come from Turkey. We are hunters, good fellows. There was a time once in our country when we saw strange footprints in the snow, and my friend the prince here saw them, and we thought they might be a fox's or marten's footprints or it might be those of a beautiful girl. We hunters, we good fellows, are determined not to rest till we have found the animal. We have been in all cities from Germany to Turkey and have sought for this fox, this marten or this princess, and at last we have seen the same strange footprints in the snow again, here by your court. And we have come in. Come, let us take her, the beautiful princess, for we see her in front of us, or can it be that you would keep her till she grows a little older?"

Thus does the moujik ask for a wife.

Inventor Davy and Love.

Sir Humphry Davy, the inventor of the Davy lamp, found love something of a delusion, if not a snare. Writing to his mother, he said, "I am the happiest of men in the hope of a union with a woman equally distinguished for virtues, talents and accomplishments." And in a letter to his brother he expresses his rapture thus: "Mrs. Apprece has consented to marry me, and when the event takes place I shall not envy kings, princes or potentates." The widow must have been a person possessed of great powers of fascination, for Sir Henry Holland makes mention of her as a lady who made such a sensation in Edinburgh society that even a regius professor did not think it beneath his scholarship to go down on his knees in the street to fasten her shoe. The sequel need not be dwelt upon further than to add that the marriage turned out to be altogether a mistake.

Fergusson and the Rabbits.

Robert Fergusson, the poet, was first matriculated at St. Andrew's university in the session of 1764-5. It was the custom at this time for each bursar to take his turn in invoking "blessing" at the meals. The college table having been surfeited with an unbroken diet of rabbits in various forms of cookery, Fergusson, on being called to say grace, repeated what are now celebrated lines:

For rabbits young and for rabbits old,
For rabbits hot and for rabbits cold,
For rabbits tender and for rabbits tough
Our thanks we render, for we've had enough!

It may be added Fergusson was not sent down, but the rabbits were "rusticated."

The Quipus.

The quipus, upon which the ancient Peruvians kept their records and accounts, consisted of a thick main cord, with smaller cords tied to it at certain distances. Upon these smaller cords the knots were tied by means of which the reckoning was kept. The length of the main rope varied from a foot to several yards. The cords were of various colors, each with its own proper meaning—as red for soldiers, yellow for gold, white for silver, green for corn, and so on. The reckoning seems to have been largely regulated by the distances of the knots from the main cord and the sequence of the branches. —New York American.

Same Effect.

"Cyril," said his mother as they sat down to the breakfast table, "did you wash your face this morning?"

"Well, no, mamma," said he slowly, evidently casting in his mind for an excuse, "but," he added reassuringly, "I cried a little before I came down stairs!"—Delineator.

HECLA FURNACE

Shows A Saving in Fuel of 13½%

It is not what a furnace should do, nor what it is said to do—but what it has actually done for others and will do for you—that should hold your consideration.

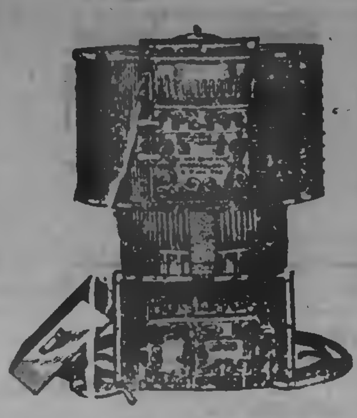
"Hecla" Furnace is truly economical—in first cost and operation.

"Hecla" Furnace has a steel ribbed Firepot. By adapting the principle of Fused Joints to the firepot, we fuse Steel Ribs on the outer surface of the "Hecla" firepot, thus getting three times the radiating surface of any other firepot of the same size. The radiating surface of the firepot is the most efficient part of the furnace because it is in closest contact with the fire. And the greater the radiating surface, the greater the amount of air that can be heated by a given amount of fuel.

By a careful, accurate three years test, these Steel Ribbed Firepots made an actual saving in fuel of 13½%. And remember, that the air from the "Hecla" is never hot.

The perfect radiation of heat brings warm air—fresh and invigorating—into the house, because "Hecla" firepot never becomes red hot. And a firepot that never becomes red hot won't burn out.

We make the firepot in two pieces which prevents cracking. This Steel Ribbed Firepot is only one of many improvements perfected by the old reliable firm who have 59 years heating experience to guide them.



Send us a rough diagram of your house—and we will plan the heating arrangements, giving you the cost of installing the right "Hecla" Furnace to heat your home right. We make no charge for this service. 102

FATHER CASEY REPLIES TO THE REV. MR. BOYD

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—The Rev. J. H. Boyd may be "an earnest and devout Irishman," as your report says he is, but he evidently has a very poor opinion of Canadians, judging by the lecture he treated them to at Murray street church on Monday evening. Rev. Mr. Boyd must be under the impression that the penal laws have been transplanted from Ireland to Canada, and that therefore our children grow up illiterate, since there is a price on the head of a schoolmaster. On no other theory can I understand his lecture. I knew that Ireland dates many of her misfortunes from the advent of the second Henry, but I had to learn from the Rev. Mr. Boyd that it is from that period her Catholicism also dates. Then the Pope must have been a Protestant in the beginning, else how understand St. Patrick's admonition to the newly converted that they were to be Romans as they were Christians. Rev. Mr. Boyd ought to write a history. People might read it if paid so much per head like his Irish converts. According to the rev. gentleman, the people of Ireland are looking forward to the time when they can free themselves from the Papal yoke. The Rev. Mr. Boyd would be invaluable as an astronomer. He is gifted with telescopical vision. We are told the Baptist missions are flourishing in Ireland. Why not add Mars as well? It is hard to preach the gospel to the Irish people. They are opposed to religion in some parts. Then why does not the Rev. Mr. Boyd stay at home and try to convert them? Why run away because the work is hard? There is only one statement of Rev. Mr. Boyd's with which I am partly in agreement. "The Bible is rarely seen in Ireland," he says, and I say yes, with the addition "in his part of it." If Rev. Mr. Boyd ever saw a Bible in Ireland or anywhere else he surely should have read therein that it prohibites lies and says calumny is a sin. In Catholic Ireland, and there is four-fifths of it, the Bible is no novelty, and so far from the priests forbidding the reading of it, the Pope has given an indulgence for its daily recitation. But it is needless to say more. The rev. gentleman is his own best refutation.

Yours,
D. A. CASEY.

WILL SPEAK ON MORAL REFORM

Rev. J. Bennett Anderson, who preached so eloquently at St. Luke's last Sunday, will speak at that church to-night.

All interested in temperance and social reform are asked to be present. Mr. Anderson has had thirty-five years' experience in reform work, and is a very interesting speaker on the subject.

FATHER O'SULLIVAN TO SPEAK; AN INTELLECTUAL TREAT

Rev. Father O'Sullivan, of Port Hope, founder of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society, and editor of the "Catholic Record," will deliver his inaugural address at the meeting of the Ladies Literary Society at the Lyceum on Friday night. Rev. Father O'Sullivan is known as one of the most cultured priests of Canada, and his lecture to the Ladies' Literary promises to be worthy of that reputation. He has selected a subject of unusual interest and we are sure that the large audience that will gather to hear him will be more than repaid. The members of the T.A.S. will be glad of an opportunity to hear him and all who wish to attend whether men or women, will please take this as an invitation. A good musical programme will be a feature of the night's proceedings.

ORONO TYPHOID PATIENTS IN LOCAL HOSPITALS

Orono, a little village about ten miles from Burketon, is the centre of a typhoid epidemic, and both St. Joseph's and Nicholls hospitals have a large number of summerers from this disease. Fortunately it is not of a very virulent type. Only one death has been reported so far, and the majority of the patients, it is thought, will recover.

At a boarding house in Orono this week a large number of boarders were suddenly stricken with the disease. One of the sufferers is now in Nicholls Hospital.

The drinking water is stated to be the cause of the disease. The patients are all men.

WITH THE HUNTERS.

The season for shooting the Ontario game birds opened on Saturday, Oct. 15. A number of the sportsmen during the previous week were busy getting their shot guns in working order and getting a supply of ammunition on hand. It was thought in the morning many would be doomed to disappointment, as a drizzle of rain was falling and a wet day was foreboded, but later in the morning it brightened up some and the rain ceased. Messrs. W. Lean and W. Staples left "Riverdene" early in the morning en route for Jack's Lake for a few days' hunt, in company with the former's black dog, "Perro." They procured a number of partridge on the way down, and on their return trip with the aid of the canine. They arrived at "Eelaview Villa" about four p.m., their game bags being filled. They disposed of their fowl, sent Perro home, and, after taking lunch continued their journey westward, and taking with them this time Mr. Staple's famous brown dog, "Collie Bruce." Collie being a little inexperienced, yet in the game forest on this evening showed great intelligence in hunting, and the hunters secured a few more birds. The dusks of even were by this time beginning to fall, and the hunters separated for their homes. They report having run across a place in the woods where a horse had died, and as far as they could ascertain, it has literally been torn to pieces by wolves.

"JEFF" BRETHEN BEHIND BARS

Was Picked up on the Street in a Starving Condition--To Leave The City

"Jeff" Brethen is in trouble.

Last Friday night it took P. C. Adams and Newhall to take him in tow on Simcoe street. He was placed in a cell.

Since the last day of the Peterborough exhibition, he has been loitering around the streets, with no visible means of support and had it not been for the action of the officers, a slow death by starvation might have been his lot.

Poor Jeff. He is a pitable case.

But he is only a dog. Mr. G. A. Brethrn, when showing his Holsteins at the fair, missed his four-footed friend, and despite all efforts failed to recover him. Up to last Friday he had been a wanderer, but is now waiting impatiently for his owner to reclaim him.

"Jeff" is a handsome animal and a valuable cattle dog. Word has been sent to his owner at Norwood.

CASE OF BRONCHIAL CATARRH PROMPTLY RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA.

MR. J. C. HERVUS PELLETIER

Bronchial Catarrh Unless Stopped Often Spreads To The Lungs, Causing Catarrh of Lungs.

J. C. Hervus Pelletier, Dep't de l'Agriculture, Ottawa, Ont., writes:

"The Peruna is particularly efficacious in the cure of catarrhal affections of the lungs and bronchial tubes, and it is in consequence the remedy most appreciated here in Ottawa. Six bottles cured me this winter of bronchitis. I am completely restored and I owe thanks to the Peruna. I have recommended this remedy to a large number of my friends afflicted with the same trouble, and they have verified my good opinion of this valuable remedy."

CATARRH of the bronchial tubes often very quickly becomes catarrh of the lungs. Catarrh of the lungs makes the patient an easy victim to the germs that cause tuberculosis. Sound lungs protect themselves against disease germs.

Peruna has acquired a lasting reputation in relieving catarrh of the throat, bronchial tubes and lungs. This should prevent the tubercular bacilli from gaining any foothold in the lungs, and saves the patient from the inevitable result.

Mr. Wickliffe B. Smith, Editor of The Potlatch Herald, formerly Principal of the Schools at Cameron, Idaho, writes:

"For some time I suffered with catarrh of the throat and bronchial tubes. I tried many remedies, but could find nothing that would give me relief.

"Finally I tried Peruna. Three bottles cured me, made me sound and well. I believe it will do as much for others as it did for me. I shall be glad to recommend it to those suffering with catarrh."

Wellman Says That He is Bound to Fly From America to Europe.

New York, Oct. 20.—The royal mail steam packet Trent with Walter Wellman and his crew on board, reached quarantine at 2.53 yesterday afternoon.

"I am going across the Atlantic in a dirigible balloon," declared Wellman. "Far from disheartening me, this failure has only spurred me to higher ambitions. It was our equilibrator that disabled the America. That was the one fatal error, despite the fact that the plan had worked out well in theory, and at the time I made my first attempt at the north pole.

"It will have to be a new type of dirigible that will be used. Even while the America was drifting helpless, and nearly a total wreck above the waters of the Atlantic, Vaniman and myself were talking over what was needed. We know, and we intend getting busy as soon as possible."

The America had been drifting helplessly for hours before it was abandoned and could have kept in the air more than 20 hours longer.

"We will support Wellman in any further air venture which he may undertake," declared President Joseph W. Salus, of the local Wellman Company. "The man has proven himself to be one of the heroes of modern times, and with his men has accomplished a feat far beyond anything of its kind ever known."

ISN'T THIS UNGRATEFUL ?

Galt, Oct. 20.—Yesterday morning the police received a telephone message from Cruickston Park, that there was a man there without hat or coat, acting strangely. An officer arrested the man, who turned out to be an escaped convict from the Central Prison farm at Guelph. He is a big, husky Pole, and tough-looking character, and has been away two days with nothing to eat until he arrived at Miss Wilks' place yesterday morning. From papers in his possession it transpires that he is a desperado, sentenced from Fort William for a serious crime.

A Central Prison officer last night took the prisoner back.

ROBBER KEPT THE ROSARY

Chicago, Oct. 20.—A Toronto woman's rosary led to conviction of a negro robber in Judge Smith's court Tuesday. He is John Perry, who robbed Mrs. Mary Turnbull, Toronto, of a satchel containing $700 and the rosary, besides a few other trinkets, when she was on her way to church one morning last May, from the residence of Mrs. Elizabeth Corein, where she was visiting. He had sold all trinkets but kept the rosary, which was found in his possession when he was arrested.

Will Welcome a Report.

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—Hon. Mr. Belcourt, president of the French-Canadian Association of Ontario, stated yesterday that at Tuesday night's meeting of the executive of the association it was unanimously resolved that the association would welcome the appointment by the Government of Ontario of a royal commission to investigate and report upon all the schools of the province.

NO ACTION ON BOUNTIES

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—The Government, it is learned, will take no action regarding the question of bounties or duties on iron and steel.

Iron and steel bounties, that is the bounties that are paid on pig iron puddled bars and steel ingots, will expire on the 31st of December next. The bounty paid on the manufacture of steel rods, however, will not cease until July 1 next. Payment may be made after the 30th of June on rods actually made and sold prior to that date.

The legislation regarding steel rods was passed last session at the instance of Hon. W. S. Fielding. During the discussion in committee on the bill, the question was asked of the Minister of Finance whether a duty would be imposed to take the place of the bounties. Mr. Fielding replied: "We certainly have no intention at present; what may come in the future, I cannot say." The Government has now decided to take no action.

A KNOCK FOR ROBT. PEARY

Berlin, Oct. 20.—Prof. Andreas Galle, the famous German astronomer of Potsdam, yesterday issued a sensational statement, in which he declared that Commander Peary did not reach the north pole.

Prof. Galle declares that none of Peary's methods for reckoning his position in the far north were reliable, and that even had Peary reached the axis of the earth, he would not have known it.

FEARS SELF-DESTRUCTION

Prison Doctor Watches Cooking of Crippen's Meals.

London, Oct. 20.—The prosecution continued its case against Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, charged with the murder of his wife, the actress Belle Elmore, yesterday, by introducing the testimony of Inspector Dew of Scotland Yard, who pursued the doctor and his companion, Ethel Clara Leneve, across the Atlantic and brought them back to England under arrest.

The inspector's evidence was a repetition of the now familiar story, which he had recited previously in the lower courts. While Alfred Aspinall Tobin, chief counsel for Crippen, was cross-examining Dew, with the object of showing that the defendant exhibited no trace of anxiety or nervousness during the police investigations at his Hilldrop Crescent home, one of the jurors fainted and the court was adjourned for two hours.

When the session was resumed, Prof. Augustus Pepper, the pathologist who examined the dismembered parts, was called, and his testimony, which was a recapitulation of the gruesome recital at the earlier hearing, occupied the afternoon up to adjournment.

Prof. Pepper has been unable to determine anatomically the sex of the Hilldrop Crescent house victim, but was satisfied that the parts were human, and that they had been severed by a hand skilled somewhat in surgery. The organs were healthy and indicated a stoutish person in middle life. They had been buried for not less than four months and for not more than eight months. One part bore a scar left from an operation.

Every precaution is being taken to guard Crippen against self destruction, it was learned yesterday. The prison doctor supervises the cooking of his meals and no food is allowed the prisoner but fresh-laid eggs and soup. All the food is especially served at the infirmary.

STREET CAR TURNED TURTLE

Winnipeg, Oct. 20.—Driven at reckless speed around the corner of Pembina street and Carydon, Fort Rouge car No. 245 turned turtle shortly after midnight, but the two passengers and the crew escaped with bruises.

W. Mahony, who lives at that corner, and who was the organizer and first president of the Street Railway Men's Union in Winnipeg, said he had expected something of that sort to happen for a long time, adding that at the present time there were a lot of men handling cars who were a menace to the people of Winnipeg.

TWO YEARS FOR POLYGAMIST

Sherbrooke, Que., Oct. 20.—Joseph Pinault, alias Alex. St. Laurant, found guilty of bigamy before Judge Mulvena, Monday, was sentenced yesterday morning to two years in the penitentiary. Pinault admitted having had three wives, one in Montreal, who had laid the complaint which caused his arrest, and by whom he had three children, one whom he married in Sherbrooke last May, and another with two children in another township town.

Le Devoir Retracts.

Montreal, Oct. 20.—Le Devoir takes back certain things said against Mgr. Fallon. It appears that The Gazette made the Bishop of London say: "This is a fight between the Irish and the French," when as a matter of fact his lordship said it was not a fight between those two elements.

NEW PAPER MILL FOR CANADA

Montreal, Oct. 20.—A special from Quebec says: Mr. William Price, M.P. head of the firm of Price Brothers, Ltd., confirms The Star's cable from London to the effect that the firm contemplates the erection of a large paper mill at Lac Au Sable, in the Caguenay country, to utilize the produce of the company's limits there. The company are offering an additional issue of bonds to the amount of $6,000,000. It is thought the new mill will have a daily output of 150 tons, and will employ about 1,000 men.

Price Brothers have also secured the controlling interest in the Jonquiere Pulp Co.

NO ATTACK ON CANON DAUTH

Montreal, Oct. 20.—The story that an attempt had been made on the life of Canon Dauth of Laval University is emphatically denied. It appears that a drunken man named La Rosa fired off a revolver at one o'clock in the morning, and the next day it was seen that one of the balls had entered the canon's study, but he was, of course, not there at that time of night.

Wanted Money Back.

New York, Oct. 20.—Carl Kather, whose brother Joseph died after being fifty hours on board a steamship en route to Naples, now demands that the company should refund him part of the money.

Both Legs Broken.

Kingston, Oct. 20.—James Insley of Picton is in the General Hospital. While teaming a portion of the load fell on him and he had both legs fractured.

SAUL GOUIN ACQUITTED FOR THE FOURTH TIME

Judge Comments Severely on North Bay Jury's Verdict—Gets Three Years for Assault on Carrie Russell—G. T. Blackstock Indignant.

North Bay, Oct. 20.—Saul Gouin, tried for the fourth time in connection with a brutal assault on two women in the bush near Cobalt, from the effects of which one died, was yesterday acquitted of a charge of wounding with intent to maim and disfigure Ethel Crawford. He was, however, sentenced to three years in prison for assault, causing bodily harm to Carrie Russell, on which he was convicted at the spring assizes, sentence then having been deferred pending the hearing of the more serious charge.

Justice Teetsel's charge was rather against the prisoner, but in two hours the jury returned a verdict of not guilty. G. T. Blackstock, K. C., in moving for sentence on the other charge, declared that responsibility for one of the grossest failures of justice ever known rested upon three juries of this district, who had failed to convict in the plainest evidence.

T. W. McGarry, K.C., Gouin's counsel, took exception to these remarks as insulting to northern juries, who were just as intelligent as those anywhere else.

Justice Teetzel, however, also expressed surprise, as a verdict of guilty was fully warranted. It had been one of the most outrageous assaults known to his experience, and both women had mercifully escaped instant death.

The assault occurred in a little shack on the Haileybury road, one mile and a half from Cobalt, Nov. 11, 1908, when Carrie Russell and Ethel Crawford received injuries from an axe in Gouin's hands. Carrie Russell died some months later in Toronto, but two jurors refused to connect her death with Gouin's action when he was charged with murder. Ethel Crawford recovered and has been the principal witness against Gouin in the various trials. The present trial was for wounding her with intent to maim and disfigure. On another more serious charge the jury returned no bill. Gouin was convicted at the spring assizes of assault and causing grievous bodily harm to Carrie Russell.

While admitting the assault, Gouin claimed he had acted in self-defence, having been threatened with a revolver. This the women denied, swearing he had assaulted them for purposes of robbery.

Lawyer McGarry in his address to the jury said that never before in the annals of justice in Canada had a man been so hounded by the law as had Gouin.

Mr. Blackstock, in protesting, said that the vindication of justice alone was desired and characterized Gouin's evidence as stupendous lies, and his action as a cowardly, dastardly crime, without a shadow of reason.

Gouin is a married man with a large family. The sentence dates back to April, when he was convicted.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

A big storm is reported on Lake Superior, moving eastward.

It is officially announced that Senator Gibson of New Glasgow, has been appointed Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia.

Mr. Plummer reports conditions good in the coal and steel trade, and says the Steel Corporation is planning to largely increase its output.

Miss Curlette was non-suited in her action against Mr. Vermilyea of Thurlow to recover the value of a piece of lace she claimed under a will.

At a representative banquet of the business and professional men of Fort William and Port Arthur Tuesday night, the cause of unity was discussed from all sides.

A large balloon, evidently one of the racers, is reported by C.P.R. trainmen as having landed two miles north of their track at Pogamasing, 135 miles west of North Bay, yesterday afternoon.

RADIUM MADE IN ENGLAND

London, Oct. 20.—Announcement is made that the first 500 milligrammes of radium have been produced in England from Cornish pitch blende. A continuous supply of British radium is thus assured for the future. When it is remembered that the total quantity of radium in existence at the present moment is only a few grammes, the importance of this statement to the medical and scientific world will immediately be understood. For the last eighteen months work has been proceeding quietly at the Frenwith section of the St. Ives consolidated mines in Cornwall, where pitch blende is being produced regularly in considerable quantities. From the pitch blende ore fair quantities of uranium oxide and other uranium products are daily being manufactured and the extraction and purification of radium bromides is now being worked out by continuous process.

Sir William Ramsay, one of the foremost scientist of the age, conducted the experiments. Radium sells now at $100,000 per gramme.

TWO FARMERS HEAVILY FINED

Brockville, Oct. 20.—The Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association is getting after dishonest patrons of cheese factories in this section. Two prosecutions inaugurated by Inspector Street, were disposed of yesterday, resulting in two farmers being made to toe the mark. Alfred Leonard of Augusta Township was fined $5 and $15 costs for sending skimmed and watered milk to the Grenville factory, and Frank Wiltzie, a large patron of the Palace factory at Addison, was fined $50 and costs. Both men made straight denials of the charge, but expert evidence of the syndicate inspector and Prof. Singleton of the Kingston dairy school were conclusive.

ROYAL EXILES IN ENGLAND

Plymouth, Eng., Oct. 20.—The royal yacht Victoria and Albert arrived here at 7 o'clock last evening, bringing King Manuel and Queen Mother Amelie from Gibraltar. The Duke of Orleans, Marquis de Soveral, the Portuguese Minister, and Senor Ville Y Urrutis, the Spanish ambassador, welcomed the royal exiles, who at once left on a special train for Wood Norton, Eversham, Worcestershire, which will be their home.

$10,000,000 DAMAGE SUIT

Chicago, Oct. 20.—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Illinois Central Railroad, Attorney Maxwell Edgar, who held proxies for an independent committee, including Franklin MacVeagh, secretary of the U. S. Treasury, made charges of gross mismanagement in the affairs of the committee. Almost simultaneously deputy sheriffs served subpoenas on the officers of the road to appear in a $10,000,000 damage suit brought by Attorney Edgar.

In addition to the plea for $10,000,000 damages the suit which is brought for the use of the Illinois Central Railroad Co., against the directors of the corporation, also demands an accounting of all the roads' finances, both of the main line and of the subsidiary lines. The principal allegation on which the suit is based is that the annual reports are not correct and the directors are responsible for losses which the road is alleged to have sustained.

PLEADING FOR CANDY'S LIFE

Montreal, Oct. 20.—Spurred on by the pitiful cry that comes across the Atlantic from a heart-broken wife a fight was commenced for the life of Tim Candy, sentenced to hang Nov. 18, for the double murder of Constables Fortin and O'Connell. Only the intervention of the Minister of Justice can now avail.

Acting on the prayer of the almost distracted wife, now in Liverpool, Eng., as well as the letter from the parish priest who knew Candy in the old country, a petition has been started by Mr. Ritchie Bell, secretary of the Montreal Sailors' Institute, asking commutation of the death sentence.

THANKS FROM POPE PIUS

Montreal, Oct. 20.—In reply to the resolution passed at Monday's meeting of the council, condemning the words of Mayor Nathan of Rome, Mayor Guerin yesterday received the following cable:

"Deeply touched with the noble sentiments that the mayor and council of the illustrious City of Montreal have sent, interpreting the feeling of the population, our Holy Father, who had the most happy souvenir of the devotion of the representatives and population of that city upon the occasion of the Eucharistic Congress, charges me to express in his own name his most profound gratitude to you, Mr. Mayor, and the members of the City Council. (Signed) Cardinal Merry Del Val."

ANOTHER WAR IN MORROCO ?

Paris, Oct. 20.—The Petit Parisien yesterday claims that Spain is on the verge of a rupture with Morocco over the payment of the indemnity of 130,000,000 pesetas (approximately $26,000,000), which Spain exacted, following the successful campaign against the Riff tribesmen in the summer of 1909, and contemplates despatching 40,000 soldiers across the Riff coast to occupy Letuan.

Gets Life Imprisonment.

Parry Sound, Oct. 20.—Louis Young, the American tramp who was accused of beating an old farmer named Davis to death while he lay in bed in a local hotel, yesterday pleaded guilty of manslaughter and was sentenced to life imprisonment.

He used a bottle on his victim's head and his motive was robbery.

METHODS OF N.Y. GRAFTERS

Had a Corruption Fund of Half a Million.

New York, Oct. 20.—Representative Otto G. Foelker, the man who was carried from his sick bed to the Senate chamber to cast the deciding vote for the anti-racing bills urged by Governor Hughes, took the stand as a witness yesterday, and gave the Merrit Joint Legislative Committee the details of the attempt to buy his vote, which he charges that ex-State Senator Frank J. Gardner, now under arrest, made in 1908. Gardner, called to the stand, refused to testify, but Robert Elder, first assistant district attorney of King's County, the next witness, repeated a conversation which he said he had with Gardner last March, and which had been referred to as a "confession."

Mr. Elder did not vouch of his own knowledge for the truth of what he repeated, but he gave it for what it might be worth, as testimony which involves more names of men now living, and names of men higher in social, business and political life, and the distribution of bigger sums of money than anything yet heard in either the Allds' hearing or any of the previous sessions of the present committee of enquiry.

The narrative was nothing less than a sensation. Briefly, it described a dinner at Delmonicos of prominent men friendly to the race tracks; of $500,000 subscribed to a corruption fund; of the distribution of this fund to politicians and to well-known correspondents at Albany of the New York newspapers, and the secret grievance of the late Senator Patrick McCarren, which worked for the passage of the bill against his own wishes and his associates.

COMFORTABLY FIXED NOW

Fort William, Oct. 20.—That the average citizen of the burned town of Beaudette, Minn., is much better clothed and fed, just as well, if not better, than before the fire, was the statement yesterday of Paul Anthony, who arrived here from Rainy River.

Mr. Anthony said that the population was comfortably housed in shacks, a warehouse is filled with contributions and a trainload of general supplies is being guarded on a side track. The town is still under martial law.

Imperial Labor Conference.

London, Oct. 20.—British Labor leaders are communicating with colonial leaders with a view to arranging a special conference of representatives of the various labor parties of the Empire to be held in London in 1911, about the time of the colonial conference. The idea is to discuss the possibility of joint action between parties on all matters affecting the interests of workers in the Empire.

WELCOME NEWS; NO MORE RABIES

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—Enquiry at the biological laboratory at the experimental farm, has revealed the welcome fact that the disease of rabies has about run its course, no cases having been sent in there for observation within the past couple of months.

During the year 1909, and until the end of September of this year, more than 125 animals have been sent in for observation, of which over half showed positive symytoms of rabies. Some were horses, others cows, and calves, but in the main the animals sent in were dogs, which would comprise about 85 per cent.

INDUSTRIAL CONFERENCE OF Y.M.C.A.

Toronto, Oct. 20.—Christian Phildius of Geneva, Switzerland, who has been in America for the past month in the interests of the immigration section of the Young Men's Christian Association, has finished the arrangements for the industrial and immigration conference to be held here next Thursday. Among those who will speak are: Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Ven. Archdeacon Madden, C. J. Hicks, John R. Mott, Dr. Peter Roberts and John Sherman Hoyt.

Held-Up at North Bay.

North Bay, Oct. 20.—Domini Latourre, Tony Demasco and Basillio Ferro, three Italians, were committed for trial last night on a charge of highway robbery. Camuse Kaukdry, a Macedonian of Toronto, on his way there from Cochrane, was held up and robbed of his earnings on the Transcontinental, $140, in a dark place of the railway yards, afterwards identifying the three men accused of the crime.

Laurier Will Speak Again.

BULLET IN HER HEAD

Colored Woman Shot by an Unknown Man at the Falls.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 20.—With a bullet in her head, Mrs. Maude Washington, colored, is lying at the General Hospital to-day, mortally wounded. The police are scouring the frontier for the assailant.

An unknown man, evidently a foreigner, did the shooting, which took place in a vacant lot on Murray street, shortly before 8 last night. John J. Shea was passing along Murray street, in front of the scene of the shooting, when three shots were fired. He saw the woman's assailant run away. The police believe that the man who was with Mrs. Washington fired to frighten Shea away and did not intend to shoot the woman.

Officers sent to investigate found Mrs. Washington lying on the ground in an unconscious condition, bleeding profusely from the mouth, and she was immediately removed to the hospital. The city and provincial police forces are both working on the case, every suspicious man found in the city being arrested.

Mrs. Washington is a cocaine fiend, and the police say that her physical condition is not such that would enable her to recover from even a much slighter wound.

Last week her husband was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison for stealing wire from the Electrical Development Co., and the police say he stole the wire to secure money to buy his wife cocaine.

The police have arrested several suspicious foreigners, one a Swede, who was hurrying across the bridge about half an hour after the shooting. When arrested he was going to work on the American side, but having no dinner pail and bore evidence of having been running and excited, the police say they probably have the right man.

COLONIES MUST MAKE FIRST MOVE

London, Oct. 20.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A. J. Balfour, speaking at Glasgow, first dealt with imperial defence and said: "These islands are strategically the gate of the defences of the Empire." He would resist the temptation to deal with the question of how far the responsibility for the protection of the Empire should be shared by the self-governing colonies. The initiative in this respect must come from them.

Mr. Balfour referred to the relative strength of Britain and the other powers in 1905 and 1910. Never in any other period of British naval history had there been such a change.

He urged the necessity for absolute safety and said the two-power standard was more necessary than ever. Other countries could build as fast as Britain. The Admiralty was ill-informed of what the nations were doing; it might, at any moment, be confronted with the utmost peril without warning. Britain could no longer wait and see what other countries were doing but must see to it that they did not get ahead.

It transpires that three of the five cruisers recently placed with contractors are for Canada, Australia and New Zealand. Canada and Australia pay the builders direct.

RESIDENTS WANT LIGHT

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 20.—Chippawa residents will next week forward a petition to the Minister of Marine, asking that the Government place a light at the mouth of the Welland River, which empties into Niagara a mile above the falls. Navigators are in danger of going over the falls, as the river mouth is hidden by a small island.

Actress to Wed Aviator.

Montreal Manoeuvres.

Montreal, Oct. 20.—There will be an important military movement here on Thanksgiving Day. There will be an attacking army, the objective points being the Victoria and Lachine bridges, while the defence will be supposed to render this attack abortive.

WEIR & O'BRIEN
ARCH WEIR JAMES O'BRIEN

The Daily Review
THURSDAY, OCT. 20, 1910.

TODAY, TONIGHT, TOMORROW

"Undoubtedly the tendency today is to shorten this. This is because generally speaking, two days' work is being accomplished in what formerly constituted one day. The hyphen in 'to-day' 'to-night' and 'to-morrow' should be discontinued today.—Fort William Times-Journal."

The Journal then goes on to show that John B. Rosser, statistician, wants to cut out the hyphen. He says:—

"There are 178 236,592 English-speaking people. The words 'to-day' 'to-night' and 'to-morrow,' are together used forty-eight times daily by every person—five of these being written out in long-hand. Thus the daily output of hyphens in these words total 391 182,460. Taking the average of a written hyphen to be one-quarter of an inch, you have a straight line 2964 miles long. At the usual rate of writing it would take one man 76 years to insert the hyphen in these words and his salary would amount to $78 436.

But avoiding all theory, 'to-day' 'to-night' and 'to-morrow' are daily hyphenated four times each on 134 198 typewriters and three times daily on 184 212 linotype machines. Remembering that a pressure of one ounce is required to strike a typewriter key and two and one-half ounces to depress a linotype we see that in writing these hyphens a total of 35974 foot-pounds of energy is expended or enough to draw a passenger train across the United States.

To avoid appearing picayunish no mention has been made of the waste of ink and paper but this would approximate in value the daily bread of the State of New York.

Now when to-night you write to-night do not write it to-night, but to-night when you write to-night write it tonight and to-morrow and the day after to-morrow, write it tomorrow. Why has a wagon got to have two g's? Why waggon doesn't wagon look as good. Doesn't program appear as pleasant as programme? We think so. To-day and if we live till to-night we will still think so and also to-morrow, and the day after to-morrow.

WHAT WOULD YOU SAY?

Twenty-four Chinamen who entered Canada on false certificates as merchants were deported today from Vancouver as the result of an investigation by the Dominion police.—Special despatch

Now if you were a Chinaman my friend and a missionary came to you with a bible, and asked you to leave Confucious for the Lord of Love what would you say? If you were a Chinaman and this missionary preached the golden rule written first by Confucius—what would you say? That's all we ask, what would you remark?

THE HUNTED MAN

"Hounds and they are on my trail. Why do they hunt me? What have I done?" "You fool what have you done? Nothing of course; but don't be a thick-head. Run run for your life for this is the open season for men and the gods have granted the deer the privilege of coming to town and killing a few of you that is all."

"Killing a few of us! Why what have we done?" "Nothing, of course; but don't be so stupid. It is fun to see you run to hear the howl of the hounds to sight the rifle and press the trigger. 'Tis ecstacy to watch you fall and rise and run and fall again to the song of the final bullet. Why this is royal sport—for the deer.

"The gods are humane though, and not more than two men may be killed by one deer nor may you be killed if you can escape to the lake

"But what have I done that they should hunt me?"

"Well you are slow of comprehension. You have done nothing—it is the fascination of blood. So from the United States come the great deer the deer strong and rich, and for a brief period they too, have the licensed right to kill maim, worry, and wound two men each. Now you know it all. Fly fly for your life!"

A howl; the hounds are coming nearer!

Where will I go, What will I do?

Ping!

A ball hisses by. A miss thank heaven! The hounds close in on me for the trail is very fresh. My home my friends my native haunts, my life! I must escape; I will!

Ping!

I feel the bite of the ball and a warm streak trickles down my side.

The hounds bark louder.

I look to a hill but the form of a deer rises up and blocks me. I look down a runway and another form rises with rifle in hand. I look to the lake but it, too, is guarded.

Ping!

For the second time the ball bites and I fall before the pack.

Two deer approach and hold conversation over me:

"He ran well didn't he?"

"Yes he did; and I had to shoot quick just as he passed the open."

"How many for the party now?"

"This will make three men two women four children and a babe."

"But the law protects babes."

"Ha ha! the law. I guess you've not done much hunting. We would have killed another man for we broke his leg but he managed to crawl away and then we bagged a boy but he was too badly torn by the pack to bring to camp."

"Let's string this fellow up."

"It is a sharp knife and it cuts well and here I hang a victim to the open season for men."

A chickadee comes and chirps beside me and I look to him for sympathy but he only says, "Well, how do you like the open season for men anyway?"

THE SALVATION ARMY

We believe in the Salvation Army. They get after people that the church does not by its actions seem to consider worth while. A fellow may be lousy, crumby, bummy, rummy, yet the Army will take him in, wash him feed and help him on his feet. How would a lousy man, half shot, and needy make a hit with the average church. General Booth is not out for the coin. He states that he has never had a shilling from the Army coffers for his own support. The Army funds, he declares, are audited annually by a leading accounting firm in London. General Booth we believe is one of the greatest men of the age. He lives for others. He will live in history, when Kipling, Stevenson and the richest of them will be forgotten. Two weeks ago the figures showed that there were 8,300 seperate societies conducting their work in 32 different languages. The paid officers numbered 16,000, the employes 5,000 and there are 8,000 officers who gave their spare time and efforts for no remuneration. The army had 25,000 musicians. In a single week 46,800 indoor and 30,000 outdoor meetings were conducted with attendances of 140,000 in the one case and 2,000,000 in the other; 20,000 patients were taken to the hospitals, 200,000 people were fed, 10,000 men were sheltered, and 15,000 public houses were visited. Last year 60,000 situations were provided for men, and the army furnished employment—the best it could—to 40,000 who would otherwise have been workless.

The Army is the friend of the friendless, of the down and out, and for that reason we are a friend of the Army. The man with money has many friends the man with a job is always sure of his bed, his rent, his home. We are for the other fellow.

THE NEWSPAPER AND THE SCHOOL

In Chicago—where in some quarters they will murder you for a dollar and in others pay you the largest salary obtainable in the world if you can deliver the goods—in this up-to-date city the authorities are thinking of educating the scholar in newspaper reading. The modern newspaper reflects the world. The modern novel is too often the pipe dream of some misguided mutt. Fiction can never outrival reality. The newspaper deals in facts The newspaper of to-day lays at the doorstep of every man the wide world in a glance. Is a nation in revolution, the reader learns it at his supper table or over his morning coffee. Is there an horrible murder, it too is revealed to him. Has some great discovery been made, It is common property. Has John Brown gone to Toronto, has he died, has he married, is he doing anything of interest. Lo! read of John Brown. Is there an earthquake or a large egg laid or a chicken with four wings, you read at once the story. The modern newspaper is the product of observation keener and more accurate than that of most bookish historians. The news is written by men who have a quick appreciation of "human interest" and often a polished style of writing.

The newspaper is the mirror you turn to it lo! there's the world reflected

THE LION

The Lion is described as a "cruiser," but she is superior in fighting capacity to any battleship in the world. We give you the figures of her principal characteristics and those of her predecessor, the Indefatigable, the biggest armored cruiser ever built, which was launched on Oct 27 last;

	Lion	Indefatigable
Length	700 feet	580 feet
Beam	82 1-2 feet	80 feet
H. P.	70,000	45,000
Speed	30 knots	27 knots
Displacement	26,000 tons	20,000 tons
Main armament	8-13.5-inch	8-12-inch
Coal	3,500 tons	2,500 tons
Turrets	4 centrals	4 enechelon

Her 13.5 inch guns throw a projectile weighing 1,250 lbs. with force enough to penetrate 22 inches of armor plate at a distance of three miles. Her armor has 30 per cent. more resisting power that that of former battleships, and it extends seven feet below the water line She has every known protection against torpedoes, and devices by which danger of collisions is minimized by submarine electric signals. She is expected to develop a speed of 30 knots or more—Hamilton Times.

And millions are being spent on the defence fund, and millions of men, women and children are scantily clothed, poorly fed wondering about approaching winter, about the cold that they must soon feel. And millions are spent on the defence fund on building battle ships that will soon be destroyed, wrecked as obsolete, that millions more may be spent on new devices. The rich, the very rich, the non-producers, spend millions in foolish pleasures, the poor, the very poor, snatch at a crust of bread. Ermine for the rich, rags for the poor.

And the sound of the church bells is loud in the land as the sound of the hammers, the din of the dockyards, where honor saving, life destroying, widow making, orphans making, crepe making, fighting machines are being hurried to completion. God save the king. The Golden Rule may do for the family, but for the great family of nations, God save the king at any cost.

A Gentleman From Mississippi

By THOMAS A. WISE

Novelized From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THOMAS A. WISE

"Certainly, certainly," mumbled Haines impatiently as he endeavored to associate coherently, intelligently, in his mind these startling new revelations of Telfer with certain incidents he had previously noted in the deliberations of the committee on naval affairs.

Then he looked across at the mayor and smiled. Apparently he had heard nothing to amaze him.

"Colonel," he returned calmly, dropping into a voice that sounded of pity for the gray hairs of the lobbyist, "about fifty men a day come to me with propositions like that. There is nothing doing, colonel. I couldn't possibly interest Senator Langdon, because he has the faculty of judging for himself, and he would be prejudiced against either town that came out with such a proposition."

"Lan' speculation is legitimate," protested the colonel cunningly.

Haines agreed.

"Certainly—by outsiders. But it's a—a thievery when engaged in by any one connected with putting a bill through. If I were to tell Senator Langdon what you have told me it would decide him unalterably in favor of Altacoola. Senator Langdon, sir, is one of the few men in Washington who would rather be thought a fool than a grafter if it came down to that."

The mayor of Gulf City jumped to his feet, his face blazing in rage, not in shame.

"Seems to me yo're mighty fresh, young man," he blustered. "What kind of politics is Langdon playin'?"

"Not fresh, colonel; only friendly. I'm just tipping you off how not to be a friend to Altacoola. As to his politics, the senator will answer you himself."

A scornful laugh accompanied Telfer's reply.

"Altacoola, huh! I reckon yo' must be a fool, after all. Why, everybody knows of the speculatin' in land around Altacoola, and everybody knows it ain't outsiders that's doin' it. It's the insiders, right here in Washington. If yo' ain't in, yo' can easy get a latchkey. Young man, yo'll find out things some day, and yo'll drop to it all.

"I guess I was too late with yo'. That's about the size of it. I guess Altacoola 'll talk to yo'," went on the mayor. "If that feller Fairbrother of Altacoola had been able to hold his tongue maybe I wouldn't know so much. But now I know what's what. I know this—that yo're either a big fool or—an insider. Yo're a nice young feller. I have kind-a taken a fancy to yo'. I like to see yo' young fellers get along and not miss yo'r chances. Come, my boy, get wise to yo'rself, get wise to yo'rself! Climb on to the band wagon with yo' friends."

Bud concluded that he might be able to get more definite information out of Telfer if he humored him a bit.

"I tell you, colonel," he finally said, "these are pretty grave charges you're making, but I'll tell you confidentially, owing to your liking for me, that it is not yet too late to do something for Gulf City. Now, just suppose you and I dine together tonight early, and we'll go over the whole ground to see how things lie. Will you?"

The colonel held out his hand, smiling broadly. He felt that at last he had won the secretary over: that the young man was at heart anxious to take money for his influence with the senator.

"All right, my boy, yo're on. We'll dine together. Yo' are absolutely certain that it won't be too late to get to Senator Langdon?"

"Get wise to yo'rself! Get wise!"

"Absolutely positive. I wouldn't make a mistake in a matter like this, would I, unless I was what you said I was—a fool?"

"Of course not. Oh, yo're a slick one. I like to do business with folks like yo'. It's mighty educatin'!"

"Thanks," answered Bud dryly. "It's certain that Langdon won't decide which place he's for until tomorrow. I promise you that he won't decide until after I have my talk with you."

"Yo' see," said Telfer, "I asked that question because, as yo' probably know, Congressman Norton and his crowd is pretty close to Senator Langdon"—

Haines cut him short with a gasp of surprise.

"Norton!"

Telfer, wrinkling his forehead incredulously, looked at Haines. "Surest thing you know, my boy."

Bud turned his head away in thought.

"Oh, leave the Norton outfit to me. I'll fool them," he finally said.

"Good."

Telfer shook the secretary's hand heartily.

"Yo're no fool, my boy. Anybody can see that—after they get to know yo' all. That's what comes of bein' one of them smooth New Yorkers. They 'pear mighty sanctimonious on th' outside, but on th' inside they're the real goods, all right."

The lobbyist hurried away, his bibulous soul swelling with satisfaction. He was sure of triumphing over Altacoola, and he was willing to pay the price.

Haines sank into his chair. "I wonder what Washington 'insiders,'" he murmured, "are speculating in Altacoola land. Telfer mentions Norton's name. I wonder"—

The door opened, and before him stood Carolina Langdon.

"Ah, Miss Langdon," he exclaimed, "I am glad to see you!"

She walked to him and extended cordially a slender gloved hand.

"This is a real pleasure, Mr. Haines," she began. "I've been waiting to talk to you for some time. It's about something important."

"Something important," smiled Haines. "You want to see me about something important? Well, let me tell you a secret. Every time I see you it is an important occasion to me."

Carolina Langdon had never appeared more charming, more beautiful to young Haines than she did that day. Perhaps she appeared more inspiring because of the contrast her presence afforded to the unpleasant episodes through which he had just passed; also Carolina was dressed in her most becoming street gown, which she well realized, as she was enacting a carefully planned part with the unfortunate secretary.

His frankness and the sincere admiration that shone in his eyes caused her to falter momentarily, almost made her weaken in her purpose, but she made an effort and secured a firmer grip on herself, for she must play a role that would crush to earth the air castle this young secretary was building, a role that would crush the ideals of this young optimist as well.

CHAPTER XII.

THE LURE OF A WOMAN'S LOVE

Carolina had come to find out from Haines, if possible, how her father was going to vote on the naval base and to induce the secretary to persuade him to stand for Altacoola—if there seemed danger that he would vote for another site. That was her scheme, for Carolina had put $25,000 into Altacoola land, money left by her mother. Norton had persuaded Carolina to invest in the enterprise to defraud the government, promising her $50,000 clear profit. How much she could do in Washington society with that!

The continued uncertainty over her father's final attitude had strained her nerves almost to the breaking, for the success of the conspiracy depended on his vote. Not even the words of Norton, her future husband, could reassure her. Her worry was increased by the knowledge of Randolph's investment of her father's $50,000.

That Carolina must sacrifice Haines on the altar of her consuming desire for money, for a higher worldly position, was an unimportant consideration. He stood in the way. Any moment he might discover the existence of the Altacoola scheme, he would immediately tell her father, and she knew her father would immediately decide against Altacoola—the bright hopes of her future would turn to ashes. Norton's money as well was invested in Altacoola. He, too, would be ruined. She was sure that she loved Norton, but she could not marry a penniless man.

Carolina resumed the conversation.

"It isn't anything so very important, Mr. Haines. It's about father."

Haines beamed.

"I have the honor to report, Miss Langdon," he bowed, "that your father is making the very best kind of a senator."

The girl hesitated.

"Yes; he might if he had some ambition."

"Don't worry! If he comes down to that, I have ambition for two. You want him to be a success, don't you? Well, he is the biggest kind of a success."

"I never believed that he would be," confessed the daughter.

Haines laughed.

"Why, do you realize that today he is one of the most popular men in public life throughout the country; that 'What does Langdon think?' has become the watchword of the big body of independents who want honesty and decent government without graft?

"I tell you that's a big thing, Miss Langdon. That's success—real success in politics, especially in Washington politics.

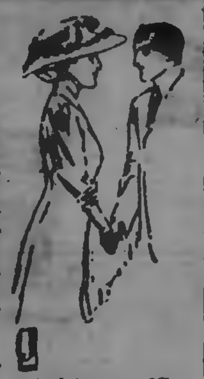
"Now, if there's anything else you want him to have, I'll see that he gets it. I'll try to get it for him"—he paused a moment, then added, with heartfelt meaning in his voice—"and for you, Miss Langdon."

Carolina played coquettishly with the secretary.

"For me, Mr. Haines?" she questioned archly, with an effective glance into his eyes.

Bud's pulses began to throb violently—to leap.

"Yes," he exclaimed unsteadily, "for you, and you know it. That's the inspiration now, my inspiration—the chance of winning your belief in me, of winning something more, the biggest thing I ever thought to win—because, Miss Langdon—Carolina—I love you." He bent over and seized the girl's hand. "Ever since the day I first saw you!"—



"And for you, Miss Langdon."

She shook her head indulgently and in a moment drew her hand from his.

"You mustn't be so serious, Mr. Haines. You don't understand southern girls at all. We are not just like northern girls. We are used to being made love to from the time we are knee high. Sometimes I fear we flirt a little, but we don't mean any harm. All girls flirt—a little."

"But somebody wins even the southern girls," declared Haines eagerly.

The girl's face became serious, earnest, sincere.

"Yes, somebody does, always," she said. "And when a southern girl is won she stays won, Mr. Haines."

"And I have a chance to win?" questioned the determined young northerner.

Carolina smiled sweetly and expressively.

"Who knows? First make my father even a bigger success—that's first. Oh, I wonder if you can realize what all this life means to me! If you can realize what those years of stagnating on the plantation meant to me! No man would have endured it!" she exclaimed bitterly. "I am more of a man than a woman in some ways; I'm ambitious. From the time I was a little girl I've wanted the world, power, fame, money. I want them still. I mean to get them somehow, anyhow. If I can't get them myself, some one must get them for me."

"I want power, fame, money."

"And love?" suggested the man. "You are leaving love out. Suppose I get all these things for you?"

Bud's pounding heart almost stopped. He could scarcely gain his breath as he saw creep into Carolina's eyes what he believed to be the light of hope for him, the light even of a woman's promise.

"Who knows, Mr. Haines? There's no reward guaranteed. There may be others trying," she answered.

Haines laughed—the strong, hopeful, fighting laugh of the man who would combat the boss of the senate on ground of the boss' own choosing.

"All right!" he cried. "If it's an open fight I'll enlist. I'll give them all a run. What are your orders?"

Carolina appeared indifferent.

"I don't know that I have any particular orders, sir knight, except to see that my father does all he can for the Altacoola naval base."

Haines paused, seized by a sudden tremor.

"The Altacoola naval base?" he stammered. "Well, all I can say is that the senator will do what he thinks right. That might bring power and fame—a right decision in this case—but it can't bring money."

Carolina shrugged her shoulders.

"Money?" She laughed with affected carelessness. "Well, we'll have to let the money take care of itself for a time. But I do want him to vote for Altacoola, because I believe that will be the best for him. You believe in Altacoola, don't you?"

Haines hesitated, then answered:

"Well, between the two sites merely as sites Altacoola [illegible] me rather better."

To be continued.

MOTHERS SHOULD WATCH CLOSELY

Diseased Kidneys the Cause of Bed-Wetting

Wellesley young man permanently cured by Dodd's Kidney Pills, gives the public the benefit of his experience.

Wellesley, Ont., Oct. 19.—(Special.)—That all diseases of the bladder from bed-wetting to Gravel are the direct results of Kidney Disease, has been proved again and again by Dodd's Kidney Pills. They cure the Kidneys and the Bladder diseases speedily disappear. One of the latest proofs comes in the experience of Mr. George Strebel the well-known harness-maker of this place.

"I was troubled with bed-wetting for many years," Mr. Strebel says. "The doctor could not give me relief and no one knows how I suffered. I tried many medicines, till in January, 1905, reading the experiences of others led me to use Dodd's Kidney Pills. Nine boxes cured me so completely that I have never been troubled since."

Mothers should learn that when their children are addicted to bed-wetting it is time to look to the cause. The Kidneys are the cause. Cure the Kidneys by using Dodd's Kidney Pills, and not only stop the bed-wetting, but ward off serious and dangerous diseases in after life.

A new method in the transfusion of human blood saved the lives of two children in Chicago.

Only fifty members attended the meeting of the Republican Club to endorse Col. Roosevelt's ticket.

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

Have Eyes Tested at Intervals

Whenever you feel uneasy in your spectacles, don't hesitate to call and see us. We are always glad to help you.

FRESH FROM LONG RUN IN CHICAGO

"The Alaskan," a musical comedy of superior merit, will be the attraction at the Grand next Tuesday, October 25th.

This is the same production which ran for five consecutive months in Chicago the past summer, and comes to the Grand in its new dress and with Chicago's strong stamp of approval written plainly all over it. It is a bright, cheery entertainment, full of crisp, clean, snappy dialogue, fresh humor of the twentieth century vintage, many new songs interpolated and a thoroughly competent company, it is sure to be a welcome visitor and a popular offering.

The story is brief, concerns Richadr Attwater, a young miner who has been grub-staked by a wealthy easterner. Attwater's claim is on the verge of playing out, when a letter arrives, stating that his benefactory has died, leaving one-half of the mine to his daughter, Arlee, and that she with a party of friends, will come to Alaska. Attwater falls in love with his partner, but the failure with the claim makes it impossible to declare his love. A discovery of a rich vein of gold and the sale of the mine brings wealth and happiness, and wedding bells join in the finale.

The present production is full of novel, exclusive surprises, and is the strongest laugh-producing combination to visit us this season.

CHIMES

The staff of the Nugent Drug Company made a kind contribution of five dollars to the fund yesterday. A gift of $10 was received from an old St. John's boy, now in Montreal. This brings the fund now up to $4,972.32.

Considerable pleasure is expressed at the action of different lodges in town, who have either made donations or have expressed interest in the movement, with action under consideration.

This is one of the most general and representative ways in which the fund can be finished up, without laying much burden on any one. Of a similar character are the magnificent donations made by the employees of the different factories, which has greatly widened the interest in the project, and shown general public desire which exists from the obtaining of a fine chime of bells.

Each contributor whether through lodge or factory is invited to the general meeting of subscriber, to-morrow evening in the Council Chambers, which will be most important in its nature. The advice of all subscribers is desired as to the action to be taken.

While the fund has now almost reached $5000, is by no means complete and every additional dollar will enable better results to be obtained.

ADDRESS TO THE REV. J. G. POTTER

The address presented by the congregation of St. Andrew's church to Rev. J. G. Potter on his retiring from the pastorate, has been designed and made up and bound at the Review Office. It is a very handsome piece of illuminated work, the pages being tastefully bordered. The cover inscription is surrounded by a border of Scotch tartan, in a recessed panel, on the dark leather cover. The script and lettering has been beautifully written by Mr. McKone, of the Peterborough Business College. Rev. Mr. Potter will be pleased to receive so handsome a testimonial from the congregation to which he ministered for so many years. In order that friends may see the address it will be on view for a day or two at Tuly's drug store, before sending forward to Montreal.

Belleville may have a street railway if rumors at present current are true. [illegible]

SWEET OCTOBER BRIDES

A pretty, though quiet, wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon at half past two at the home of the late Mr. John Wallace, 425 Bethune street, when his daughter, Mary Jane, was united in marriage to Mr. Frank Gilbank, of Leskard, Durham county. The happy couple left on the 6.38 train for their home in Leskard.

FLAHERTY—KANE

On September 17th, Michael J. Flaherty, formerly of this city, was married to Miss Mary Kane, of St. Paul, Minn., where they now reside.

DAWSON—FISHER.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized on Wednesday afternoon Oct. 19, at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. Robert Fisher Lakeview lot 15, South Monaghan, when their daughter Julie Pearl, and Mr. Edmond C. Dawson were united in the holy bonds of matrimony.

Rev. F. W. White, B.A., of Fraserville was the officiating clergyman.

The bride was charmingly attired in white duchesse satin semi-empire style with girdle and train trimmed with bebe Irish lace and seed pearls. The undersleeves and yoke were of tucked silk net. She wore the customary tulle bridal veil caught up with orange blossoms and carried a beautiful shower bouquet of bridal roses lillies of the valley and hair ferns.

Miss Myrtle C. Dawson sister of the bride made a very pretty bridesmaid while Mr. Charles C. Fisher acted as groomsman. About one hundred guests were present.

The ceremony was performed in the drawing room under a canopy of interlocked ribbons supported by pillars trimmed with autumn leaves and asparagus ferns. The bride was given away by her father while Miss Mamie Fisher played Wagner's "Lohengrin's" and Mendelssohns wedding march.

Miss Lillie Finney was a very pretty flower girl and carried a large basket of pink roses.

The bride was the recipient of $100 in gold from her father and from her mother a handsome set of Alaska sable. The groom's gift to the bride was a sunburst of pearls to the flower girl a pearl ring, and to the organist a safety pin pearl brooch.

Mr. and Mrs. Dawson left on the 4.38 train from Peterborough on a wedding tour to Winnipeg and points west and on their return will reside at "The Maples" lot 5, South Monaghan. They will be at home to their friends after the new year.

Many guests were present many coming from Millbrook Nestleton Peterborough, Port Hope and Chicago.

GABRIEL—GRAHAM

Havelock, Oct. 19.—A very pretty and fashionable wedding took place in the Presbyterian church here today when the marriage of Miss Maud, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Graham, of town, to Mr. Arthur Gabriel, of Toronto, was solemnized at 1.30 o'clock.

At the appointed hour the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the church to the strains of the wedding march, played by Miss Edna Graeb, of Toronto. She looked sweet and graceful in her wedding gown of satin with bridal veil of tulle caught up with orange blossoms and carrying a bouquet of white roses. Miss Warren, of Deseronto, attended as bridesmaid, while Mr. Rollie Graham, brother of the bride, attended the groom. During the signing of the register, Miss Effie McGill, of town, sang.

After the ceremony a wedding dinner was served at the residence of the bride's parents on Ottawa street. The young couple left on the afternoon train for a short honeymoon amid showers of confetti and the best wishes of their friends. The groom's gift to the bride was a necklace of pearls, to the bridesmaid a pearl ring and to the groomsman a gold tie pin.

The bride, who has resided in Havelock for a number of years and who has formed a large circle of friends here was the recipient of many handsome gifts among them a silver tea service on a silver tray from the congregation of the Presbyterian church of which she has been a member and organist for a number of years.

The young couple will reside in Toronto where Mr Gabriel is engaged in the retail hardware business.

WHEN WILL WEDDING BELLS RING?

When will the chimes chime the Mendelssohn tune?

That's what several young ladies of marriagable age and matrimonial prospects want to know.

Anxious inquiries have been made of those interested in the chimes regarding the time the chimes will be installed. Each one wants to know, it is said, in order that she may have the honor of being the first bride for whom the chimes will ring as wedding bells.

BUSY NOTES FROM Y.M.C.A.

To-night in the Intermediate Basketball League the following teams will meet, Quakers vs. Jolliers, and Hustlers vs. Joshers. The first game promises to be "some game" as these teams have not been defeated as yet, and it is a dead sure thing that neither team will give up before the referee's whistle blows for full time.

The second game ought to prove quite as interesting as the first, as the Joshers say they have lost enough games and are due to win the rest of the games. But the Hustlers say "nay." You are invited to come and take in the games.

Intermediate Bible Study Club meet in the board room to-night from 7.30 to 8.00.

STARTED AS A JUNIOR AND IS NOW MANAGER

Around the year 1890 a young lad came to Peterborough as junior clerk in the old Bank of Commerce, situated then at the corner of Brock and George streets. To-day that boy, grown to manhood, after years of faithful and diligent service, is manager of the bank in Peterborough. Such is the career in brief, up to the present, of Mr. Dunsford, who arrived in the city last week to accept the position as manager of the Bank of Commerce.

Mr. Dunsford will be remembered by many of the older residents of the city. His father was the late Mr. Martin Dunsford, who practiced law in Peterborough in the year 1860. He served in the bank here for two years before being moved, and since that time he has been constantly transferred from city to city, each move being a slight promotion, until now, in middle life, he has been appointed manager in the same city which saw the commencement of his banking career.

Mr. Dunsford is a nephew of the late George Dunsford, and also of the late Mr. Hartley Dunsford, registrar of Victoria.

Mr. Dunsford will, in a few weeks, occupy the residence vacated by Mr. D. Hughes Charles, 748 Water street.

BY THE WAY
THE LAST STRAW

Last night the moon was large and bright,
The weather without flaw,
And down the street, a bald-head shone
Beneath a well-used STRAW.

His clothes were neat, his step intent,
The looks he got were raw,
But like a hero, on he trod,
Beneath that dollar STRAW.

He got the laugh, the newsies smiled,
And so did Miss and Maw,
Yet still, this hairless son of fads,

This chap a medal he should get,
Or else a "bean" from Paw;
The latter p'raps would help to box,
From sight, a dead game STRAW.

WANT 26 ACRES AT BURLEIGH

Central Ontario Power Co. Ask for Patent Rights of Property Adjoining the Falls

Toronto Star.—A deputation headed by J. J. Preston and J. H. Devitt, two members of the Legislature, waited Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Lands, Forests, and Mines, this morning to ask that the Central Ontario Power Company be given a patent of 26 acres of Government lands near Burleigh Falls.

This company has received from the Dominion Government a concession to develop power at Burleigh Falls on the Otonabee River, at the head of Stoney Lake. The land in question is immediately adjoining this water power. At the present time the question of ownership is in dispute between the Ontario and Dominion Governments, and therefore the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines is in favor of a lease. The company, however, desires patent rights. It promises cheap power to Cobourg, Port Hope, Peterborough and surrounding towns.

PORT PERRY—LINDSAY WATERWAY INSPECTED

Mr. J. H. McClellan, superintendent of the Trent Valley Canal, returned yesterday from an inspection trip of the waters between Lindsay and Port Perry. He was accompanied on the trip by members of the council of Port Perry, that town being greatly interested and thoroughly alive, in regard to the waterway problem that now, and for some time past, has been confronting it.

When Port Perry was at its height as a lumbering centre a railway was bonused, and a line built from Whitby to that place, and later a junction was built, which gave the town access to Lindsay, just as did the Scugog river, and lake. Transportation by water, however, gave way to the railway, and as a consequence, the dam and locks erected by the Ontario Government, which kept the water-level normal, fell into disuse and out of repair.

With the completion of certain sections of the Trent Valley canal, Port Perry woke up in alarm. They saw the possibilities before the town, if connected with the canal.

Since the erection of the new dam and locks at Lindsay by the Dominion Government, and which has but recently been put in operation, the water is again at normal level, and with the rise has come corresponding benefits.

The fish have come back to their old haunts, and this in itself is a great asset to Port Perry as a summer resort. Then, too, the water facilities in conjunction with the canal will allow of cheaper transportation to and from the town.

There have been many complaints about the low water in this watercourse, but the dam and locks at Lindsay is now fulfilling its purpose, and besides being buoyed, the river and upper Scugog will receive other attention by the department.

Because your case is a difficult one, doctors having done you no good, do not continue to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It costs but a trifle to try it, and the result is worth millions to many suffering women.

IDEA FOR WOMEN

Tells How Radiant Hair Can Easily Adorn any Head

It's a mighty good thing for the women of Canada that Parisian Sage can now be obtained in every town of consequence.

No preparation for the hair has done so much to stop falling hair and eradicate dandruff and make women's hair beautiful as Parisian Sage.

Parisian Sage is the only certain destroyer of the dandruff microbe which is the cause of 90 per cent. of hair trouble.

These pernicious, persistent and destructive little devils thrive on the ordinary hair tonics.

Parisian Sage is such an extraordinary and quick acting rejuvenator that Wm. Madill, druggist, who is the agent in Peterborough, guarantees it to cure dandruff, stop falling hair and itching scalp in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is most daintily perfumed, it is an ideal preparation, not sticky or greasy.

It is a magnificent dressing for women who desire luxuriant, lustrous hair that compels admiration.

And a large bottle of Parisian Sage costs only 50 cents at Wm. Madill's and at leading druggists all over Canada. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every package. Made in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont., who fill mail orders, all charges prepaid.

LOOKED LIKE MRS. CRIPPEN'S UNDERVEST ALSO LIKE MRS. CRIPPEN'S HAIR LOOKED LIKE MRS. CRIPPEN'S SCAR TRACES OF HYOSCINE FOUND CRIPPEN BOUGHT HYOSCINE

Special to the Review.

London Oct. 20.—The Crown closed the Crippen prosecution at 1 o'clock this afternoon after presenting further evidence practically a repitition of that brought out at the preliminary hearing. Dr. Spalesbury of St. Mary's hospital declared himself convinced that the mark on the remains found in the cellar of Crippen's house was an operation scar. Dr. Marshall also declared himself to the same effect. Dr. Wilcocks, analyst for the home office told of finding trace of hyoscine and declares himself convinced hyoscine poisoning had caused death. A chemist clerk told of Crippen purchasing hyoscine. Mrs. Harrison identified hair shown her as resembling Mrs. Crippen's and also the undervest found near the remains as being like one worn by Mrs. Crippen.

RUMORED SPLIT IN LIBERAL RANKS OVER THE QUESTION OF RECIPROCITY SIR WILFRID'S REMARKS MAKE ACTION NECESSARY IF HE IS TO KEEP HIS WORD

Special to the Review.

Ottawa Oct. 20.—It is rumored in Government circles that a hitch is coming in the reciprocity negotiations between Canada and the United States. Influential eastern Liberal leaders are said to have hinted to the Cabinet that there will be trouble if anything is done to imperil Canadian industry or the British preference and that there is no particular demand for reciprocity anyway. Sir Wilfrid's western statements however is held here to make some action imperative.

WHERE IS FRANK ARKLES WANTED IN DETROIT?

A communication from Detroit has been received by the local police department asking as to the whereabouts of Frank Arkles, who left that city on October 3, to come to Peterborough, where he at one time resided.

Up to the present, Arkles has not been located. The letter is as follows:

93 12th Street,
Detroit, Mich.

Dear Sir:—Will you kindly look up a man by the name of Frank Arkles, who left Detroit, October 3rd, for Peterborough. I have not heard anything of him since. I am very uneasy about him. He used to be an old boy of Peterborough. If you find him, please answer at once, for I am afraid something has happened to him.

The last word he told me, he would write as soon as he arrived there, and that is why I am so uneasy.

Please locate him if possible for me, and oblige,

Yours truly,
Mrs. J. Adair,

"WASTE AND DESTRUCTION ARE IN THEIR PATHS"—STRONG ATTACK ON LIQUOR TRAFFIC BY ANGLICAN CLERGYMAN

"Waste and destruction are in their paths."

The above words found in Isaiah 59th chapter formed the text for J. Bennett Anderson's address last evening in St. Luke's Anglican church.

Mr. Anderson is a convincing speaker. His attitude in the temperance cause is too well known to need comment. He stands for total abstinence out and out. No half-way measures for him although, as he said himself, he is not a strictly temperance lecturer preferring at any time to preach the simple gospel yet so vividly and often have the horrors of the liquor traffic been brought before him that he cannot but speak against it.

CALLS DRINK TRAFFIC A CANCER

His address last night should have been listened to by a larger audience and it is to be regretted that more were not present.

"It would be impossible to depict the full horrors of the drink traffic" said the speaker. "It is a cancer in the heart of this grand Dominion cursing it more than people realize. It is a waster and destroyer and the text as applied to our land and all lands where liquor is sold is true.

"Why are people not saved? Because their sins and iniquities have hidden their faces from God.

"When a man is drunk he will commit both adultery and murder. Drink is an unnatural appetite, and it creates its own lust.

The greatest glutton in the world can sometimes control his appetite but how rarely is this possible with the drunkard.

"Drink doesn't satisfy. The strongest wills weaken under its appetite. You don't need liquor you know before God that you don't but it has become second nature to you and you cannot stop.

"With some people drink is a passion. It is the cause of a large per cent. of the backsliding in the churches.

"Can you name a family in Peterborough or in Canada who can say that no friend or relative of theirs has fallen a victim to intemperance.

"John Bright the eminent statesman once said, 'That if the Christian churches would take up the temperance cause they would carry all opposition before them.'

"Isn't it a sad spectacle a drunken man staggering home late at night and arousing the citizens.

"Mothers longing to hear the footsteps of husbands yet knowing that his arrival only means abuse for her and the children.

"Again liquor causes a great waste of money soul, and bodily health. 'I blush for the Irishmen' said the speaker 'when I think of the time when whole families in Ireland were starving for the want of barley which was being used in making liquor and the breweries were flourishing. Indeed the mainstay of some towns and cities are the breweries especially so in the Old Land where one prominent man stated that "It was from the beerage to the peerage."

Here Mr. Anderson told several sad stories of tragedies he had witnessed due to drink.

"It is better" he said, "to kill your wife at once than to slowly kill her by inches through worry, grief and shame over your drunken actions and folly."

INCONSISTENCY.

The speaker knew of some men who could stand on a local option platform and talk temperance, and would go into a bar and get a drink.

Again drinking shatters the constitution. It destroys the citadel. It goes direct to the brain. A sad feature of it is that it does not show so marked effects on the dull stupid fellow but strikes the brainy men, the finest intellects and noblest sons carrying destruction in its path.

"If the millions which are spent upon it were devoted to the manufacture of boots and shoes clothes, etc., there would be fewer people out of employment".

Many little experiences of his own were told by Mr. Anderson. In concluding his address he made a strong plea to his hearers to do all in their power to further the temperance cause.

They were all invited to sign a temperance pledge, to abstain from all intoxicating drinks.

GOES BACK TO GAOL FOR ANOTHER WEEK

And Francis McGirr Was Given Another Six Months on the Hill.

The young man who is being held in connection with the robbery at Edgar's wholesale premises, appeared again before His Worship Magistrate Dumble this morning, and his counsel, Mr. G. N. Gordon, again declined to elect or plead.

A further remand of a week was ordered, and the request of Mr. Gordon that the amount of the two sureties be reduced from $500 each to $250 or $300 did not meet with the consent of the Crown Attorney.

Mr. Gordon, too, objected to a further enlargement of the case, and submitted that the Crown should present its reasons for such a step.

Chief Thompson answered that he had good reasons for the enlargement but was not disposed to make them known.

SIX MONTHS.

Francis McGirr, a regular lodger at Castle Nesbitt, when asked by the magistrate if he objected to six months, answered "no."

Francis knows no other home.

THEATRICAL

"THE NAKED TRUTH."

If everybody were to tell the truth the social system would be upset.

It's convenient in business, politics and love to be a liar. The habit of trying to beat Annias at his own game cannot help but lower the moral standard of the race, but who cares about honesty and frankness nowadays! Money and smooth sailing are the only things.

"Bunny" Darrell, the storm centre of "The Naked Truth," found himself in a peculiar condition. His uncle from India brought him a ring that made the wearer tell the truth. "Bunny" (Henry E. Dixey) was by nature about as polished a prevaricator as one would meet outside a law court. But he put on the ring his uncle gave him and couldn't get it off. Under its magic influence—sensible plot, isn't it—he was compelled to tell the blunt, brutal truth.

The result was that he upset the S.C.C. (Syrian Cement Company) a fake concern of which he was secretary, told his fiance she wasn't really the prettiest girl in the world, actually had the impudence to tell the cook she couldn't cook—and people are generally afraid of cooks in plays and comic papers—and did many other things that no diplomat would think of doing. The result was that everything was shattered to the all round embarrassment of the other members of the company, and to the delight of the majority of the audience.

As "Bunny" a part that called for very little histrionic effort, outside of putting the lines over smoothly, Henry E. Dixey showed himself a capable comedian. In the first part of the show the audience thought it was going to like Miss Ruth Shepley, who gave promise of being a charming Norah Creighton. But toward the end of the play she giggled so much at times when she was supposed to be serious that one felt like calling in an alienist.

Mr. Dixey was supported by a good company, and the scenic embellishments were attractive.

Wild Geese appeared on the Susquehanna river last week on their way south.

FOUND GUILTY

Three Men at North Bay Are Convicted of Robbing Mine.

North Bay, Oct. 21.—After deliberating two hours the jury in the Nova Scotia mine bullion robbery case, returned a verdict of guilty against all three prisoners, with a recommendation to mercy for Thomas and Ralph Ballantyne. The verdict was received in breathless silence by the crowded court room, broken only by sobbing of the mother of the two Ballantynes and the wife of Thomas Ballantyne, who was almost hysterical.

Justice Teetzel fully concurred in the verdict, which he said would have a splendid moral effect and be a warning to all that life and property would be protected by juries and courts. It would have a splendid salutary effect in this district, when running property was exposed to great risk from the presence of so many men of low moral character.

George T. Blackstock, prosecuting attorney, concurred in the recommendation to mercy on behalf of the Ballantynes, on account of this being their first offence, and of their previous excellent character. He could not say anything in favor Reilly.

Prisoners' counsel, Mr. Bull, made a strong appeal for leniency.

Judge Teetzel said he was convinced that the Ballantynes had been the dupe and Reilly had plotted the entire crime. He suspended sentence in their case, conditional upon good behavior, and sentenced Thomas Reilly to seven years in Kingston Penitentiary.

Reilly was dazed by the sentence and dropped to his seat with bowed head, while tears streamed down his cheeks. He reiterated his innocence, exclaiming, "I never had a thing to do with it; this is all spite work."

W. R. Montgomery, convicted of manslaguhter in causing the death of Elmer Kline in ejecting him from his hotel in New Liskeard, was fined $500 and was released on suspended sentence by Justice Teetzel yesterday.

A MISTAKE ON BOTH SIDES

Montreal, Oct. 21.—Rev. Father Paradis, the Quebec priest who has done so much good work for education and colonization in northern Ontario, was in the city yesterday, and while discussing what he terms the unfortunate Fallon controversy, the reverend gentleman said there were misunderstandings and exaggerations on both sides.

"Perhaps my fellow-countrymen do not quite understand Mgr. Fallon, and it my be his lordship fails to comprehend the French-Canadian mentality, but, be this as it may, nothing could be more erroneous than the idea that the French schools do not want to have their children taught English in the Province of Ontario. If that were so, they would be fools, and my fellow-countrymen are certainly not fools. They have their weak points, but they want to do about right, and they especially want their children to master the English language.

"My compatriots want to learn English, and they never dream of dominating any other race or people."

DAVID B. HILL PASSES AWAY

Albany, N.Y., Oct. 21.—Ex-United States Senator David B. Hill died early yesterday at his residence, Wolfert's Roost, north of the city line.

For two weeks he had been ill with a cold and complications. There was a recurrence of the lung trouble of four years ago. Senator Hill's last public appearance was in Elmira several weeks ago, where he made a speech in which he pleaded for a return to "old-time principles of honesty in public life."

David Bennett Hill was the last of the old-line politicians who made Democratic history in New York when that party secured control of the State Government following the famous stalwart and Half-Breed Republican fight, which involved President Chester A. Arthur and Senator Roscoe Conklin. He was for years in absolute control of the Democratic party organization in the state and his bitter conflicts with the Grover Cleveland organization finally culminated in Cleveland abandoning New York State as his home.

NEW MONSTER OF THE DEEP

Belfast, Ireland, Oct. 21.—The first of the two mammoth White Star liners, the Olympic, was launched successfully amid scenes of much enthusiasm yesterday.

The new vessel is of 45,000 tons. She is a triple screw steamer, her principal dimensions being: Length over all, 882 1-2 feet; breadth over all, 92 1-2 feet; height from bottom of keel to top of captain's house, 165 1-2 feet. She exceeds by nearly 100 feet in length and by 13,000 tons, any other ship afloat.

Police Commissioner Resigns.

New York, Oct. 21.—Police Commissioner Baker late yesterday afternoon announced that he had resigned his office. James C. Cropsey, a Brooklyn lawyer, was sworn in as commissioner Baker's successor shortly after the latter's resignation was handed to Mayor Gaynor.

TERRORIZES FARMER'S FAMILY

Hagersville, Oct. 21.—A bold attempt to terrorize a family and drive them from the farm which they have occupied for 23 years is being perpetrated in Haldimand County, near the village of Selkirk, where the household of Mrs. Fred Smelser live in deadly fear of impending disaster. Three weeks ago their barn, filled with the season's crop, was fired and destroyed under strange circumstances, and since that occurrence Mr. Smelser has received an anonomyous letter warning him to give up the farm and move away or his life will be taken. Five letters have been received to date, in which the writer represented himself as the involuntary agent of an unrelenting enemy of Smelser who will brook no interference with his plans.

The members of the family are not only terrified but mystified. They have hitherto believed that they possessed the friendly regard of their neighbors far and near, and they are at a loss to know whom to accuse of the crime. Two of the threatening letters have been forwarded to the Attorney-General's Department, two have been stolen from the Smelser home, and the fifth is in the possession of Mr. Joseph W. Holmes of Selkirk. Mr. Smelser has taken the mysterious mandate very seriously. He has advertised a sale of his stock on Nov. 1, and is preparing to abandon the farm.

The Smelser family consists of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smelser, two daughters, and four sons, three of whom are at home; Ernest, aged 23; Lloyd, aged 18; and a boy aged 12, who is attending school. They live about a mile north of Selkirk on the Hagersville road, and about 11 miles south of this town. There are two men employed on the farm just now, Harvey Schweyer and Maynard Wilkinson. Mr. Smelser rented the farm 23 years ago from Joseph W. Holmes of Selkirk, and has been a continuous tenant. Besides running the farm Smelser owned a thrashing machine and a clover seed-cleaning machine which he hires out to neighboring farmers.

EXPERIMENTAL FARM WANTED

Chatham, Oct. 21.—The Royal Commission on Technical Education and Industrial Training arrived in Chatham at noon yesterday, and received evidence all afternoon, after visiting several schools and factories. The evidence submitted all favors the establishment of technical schools, and Chatham is particularly anxious to secure an experimental farm. The evidence showed that there is a scarcity of skilled artizans in Chatham, although laborers are very plentiful.

Banker Simon, president of the Board of Trade, criticized the education being given to boys who have applied to enter his bank. Courtesy is evidently lost sight of by the teachers. The boys are also deficient in spelling and writing. This was accounted for, he said, by the rushing in the schools. Mr. Simon resented the recent criticism that boys who enter Canadian banks have no chance to rise to the top of the institution.

Last night the commission were entertained at dinner by the officers of the 24th Regiment.

The suggestion advanced by Capt. J. S. Black that the Federal Government should combine military training with technical education met with great approval. The scheme was to make drill sergeants experts in some technical branch of education, and require them to give free instructions to men of the regiments, educating them and encouraging them to join the militia.

OIL TANKS EXPLODED

East St. Louis, Oct. 21.—A fire started in the Chicago & Alton freight house on the river front, and spread rapidly to neighboring structures of like character, causing a loss of more than $300,000 early yesterday morning. The blaze was of no significance when discovered, but soon spread to ten tank cars of oil, which exploded, hurling blazing fluid in all directions.

The oil set fire to the Baltimore & Ohio freight warehouses, covering a block. A score of oil tanks in it exploded with a roar that was heard for miles.

ENGINEER SUICIDES

Toronto, Oct. 21.—After sitting alone all morning and writing letters to those who would survive him, John H. Fell, a civil engineer, of about fifty years of age, stepped quietly into the lavatory on the top storey of No. 15 Toronto street and shot himself through the head shortly after two o'clock yesterday. He did not die immediately, but was unconscious for nearly an hour before death came.

The reason he gave in letters was domestic troubles. "The last straw had broken the camel's back," he said. He was married to an Italian woman, and they lived at 928 Seaton street. He leaves one step-daughter, Mrs. John Stanley Richmond, 453 Church street.

Mr. Fell was a fluent speaker of the Italian language, and for the past two nights had held a position as night school teacher at the Elizabeth street school. He was a civil engineer, born in England, but had no office in this city.

CRIPPEN WILL TRY TO PROVE THAT HIS WIFE IS NOT DEAD

Plan of Defence Seems to be to Allege That Belle Elmore Fled to America to Join Bruce Miller of Chicago—Goes on Stand Without Nervousness.

London, Oct. 21.—For the first time since his arrest on board the Montrose, at Father Point, Quebec, Dr H. H. Crippen, the American doctor, yesterday afternoon gave to the world his version of the disappearance of his wife, Belle Elmore, the music hall singer, whom he is charged with murdering.

After a sensational opening statement by his counsel, A. A. Tobin, in which Tobin told the jury of a plot to smuggle Crippen safely from the Montrose, Crippen himself took the stand.

He made it clear immediately that the defence will seek to prove that Mrs. Crippen is not dead, but that she fled to America ostensibly to join Bruce Miller, the Chicago real estate man, whose name Crippen mentioned to Inspector Dew when the latter questioned him.

Dapper and spruce as a dude, attired in the height of fashion and showing no signs of nervousness, Crippen had walked briskly to the witness stand.

Crippen first gave the jurors a brief outline of his early life and his medical career, both in the United States and England.

"I knew that my wife had been very friendly with Bruce Miller," he continued, "and I often upbraided her for corresponding with him. In 1904, Cora admitted to me that she was very fond of Bruce Miller. I ceased cohabiting with her at that time and our relations from that time on were strained to the breaking point. She repeatedly threatened to leave me, telling me that she could go to America to join Miller. I last saw her on Jan. 31, of this year, and I believe that she fled to America.

"To avoid scandal, I concocted a story that she had gone to America to attend to certain private business for me in California, and that while on her way across the American continent she had died, and had been incinerated there. I simply could not face my friends with an admission that my wife had deserted me.

"On the Monday night before I wrote a letter, in her name, to the Music Hall Guild, resigning her position as treasurer. Mrs. and Mr. Paul Martinetti came to our house for dinner. After they left my wife abused me for not paying him more attention, and said: 'This is the finish of it. I won't stand it any longer. I shall leave you to-morrow, and you will never hear of me again.' Before this, she told me that the man she would go to was better able to support her than I was. I went to business next morning, and when I went home, between 5 and six p.m., I found she had gone.

"I tried to think how to cover up her absence without any scandal. I wrote to the guild that she had gone away, and I told that to all our friends. I afterwards realized that this would not be a sufficient explanation for her not coming back, and later on I told people that she was ill with pneumonia, and afterwards I told them that she was dead from this ailment. I do not remember telling them where she died, except that it was in California. Afterwards they asked me where my son lived, and I gave them his address.

"I then put an advertisement in the Era that she was dead, as I thought that would prevent people asking me a lot of questions. Whatever I said to other people in regard to her death was absolutely wrong, but was done to prevent a scandal.

"I do not know what my wife took with her when she went away. She had often told me that when we parted she wanted nothing from me. I never pawned any of her jewels. I did draw money on several checks signed by her. We had a collective banking account, in her name, so I always carried several blank checks around with me to which she had signed her name, so that I could get money when I needed it.

"It is true that I was at the Benevolent Fund dinner at the Criterion with Miss Leneve and that she wore a brooch my wife left behind. She also wore my wife's furs. Miss Leneve had been in my employ and I had known her when she was employed with other firms for which I worked for the past eight years.

"After my wife disappeared Miss Leneve lived with me as my wife in the Hilldrop Crescent home. I have been intimate with her during the past three years. I had frequently visited hotels with her, but I was never away from home at night.

"After I had told people that my wife was dead, Miss Leneve and I went to Dieppe for five days and stayed at a hotel there.

"My firm belief is that my wife went to Chicago to join Bruce Miler. He often sent her presents and wrote her loving letters, in some of which he signed himself, 'With Love and Kisses to Brown-Eyes, Bruce.'"

Crippen was questioned by Attorney Tobin regarding the purchases he made of hyoscin, the deadly poison which he is charged with having used to murder his wife. He declared that he had never given his wife any poison. The hyoscin, he swore, he had given in very small doses to several of his patients who had been suffering from nervous disorders.

Crippen confirmed Tobin's statement about the alleged plot concocted with the quartermaster of the Montrose to allow him to escape with the vessel's cargo, adding:

"I decided that I had nothing to fear, and that it would be best for me to return to England and face the charges, of which I knew I was innocent. The letters I wrote threatening suicide were to be used as a 'blind' to prevent a search being made for me. I wanted people, at that time, to think I had killed myself. When I decided not to try to escape, I forgot to tear up the notes."

At this point the hearing was continued until to-day, when Crippen will probably resume the stand."

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

The steamer Moreland, which was wrecked at the Soo, was run ashore owing to an error in her compass.

Montreal ministers attended a burlesque show to investigate the performance. They declare that it was a hot show.

A meeting was held at Fort William to discuss the union of that city and Port Arthur. The sentiment was favorable to a union.

James R. Keene, the millionaire horseman, has denied that he ever subscribed to a fund to fight the Hughes race track bills.

Fire destroyed McArthur's woodworking factory at Stellarton, N.S., yesterday, entailing a loss of $1,000. There was no insurance.

William Cargill and William Gillespie were sentenced to a year's imprisonment at Parry Sound for robbing Dr. Goldie's summer cottage.

The trustees of Princton University have accepted the resignation of Dr. Woodrow Wilson, president of the university, who is the Democratic candidate for the governorship of New Jersey.

MISTOOK GIRL'S HAIR FOR SQUIRREL

Buffalo, Oct. 21.—Medical Examiner Danser yesterday instructed Justice Davidson of Alden to held an inquest into the shooting of Miss Martha L. Pope, a 17-year-old girl, near that place Wednesday.

The girl was walking in the woods with Frank Lowney, 26, to whom she was engaged to be married. Seeley Conley, 27, hunting squirrels at the time, mistook the girl's brown hair for a squirrel, and fired. Rushing to the spot, he found the girl dead, shot through the head, and Lowney kneeling over her prostrate body.

The Adam Beck of Japan.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 21.—His Excellency R. Nankike, jr. president of the Imperial Hydro-Electric Power Resources Commission of Japan, accompanied by a number of prominent Japanese engineers, yesterday inspected the local power plants. Plans of Niagara's power houses will be taken back to Japan by the visitors.

CALLS ACCUSERS UNTRUTHFUL

Winnipeg, Oct. 21.—Rev. Dr. John McDougall of Calgary, arrived here yesterday from Fisher River, northern Manitoba, and at once answered accusations made against him at a Methodist mission meeting at Toronto recently.

"That statement was false, and the man who made it knew it was false," he said, referring to the charge that he was responsible for the orgies of Indians. He added that he had done more to stop improper Indian dances than all other members of the Methodist Mission Board together. But he did believe that Indians had the right to conduct their ceremonies under proper control and conditions.

Bit Officer's Face.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 21.—When an unknown foreigner was refused admission to Canada yesterday afternoon, he apparently became suddenly insane. Along the station platform he ran, shrieking at the top of his voice. He was captured after great difficulty. While Grand Trunk Policeman Anderson was taking him to the police station in a hack, the man bit a piece of flesh out of the officer's face.

PREMIERS TO CONFER HERE

St. John, N.B., Oct. 21.—Premier Hazen of New Brunswick and Premier Hassard, Prince Edward Island, left last evening for Toronto, for a conference with Sir James Whitney and other provincial premiers regarding control of joint stock companies. The question of provincial representation in the Federal Parliament will also be debated. The Maritime Provinces want the British North America Act changed so that the representation will be restored to what it was when they entered the union and never to fall below that.

Bank Officials Resign.

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—A. A. Taillon, who for many years has been manager of the Ottawa branch of La Banque Nationale, has resigned, along with Arthur Frechette, the accountant. It is stated that Mr. Taillon's resignation is the result of a disagreement with the board of directors.

WHISKEY IN BALED HAY

Cobalt, Oct. 21.—License inspectors have seized a large quantity of whisky bound for the north, secreted in bales of hay, at Cochrane. During the night, after the car had arrived in siding at Cochrane, the owners of the cow feed got anxious as to how they would extract the whisky, and broke into the car. A police officer, taking them for robbers, came on the scene, and though convinced of their ownership, naturally had comments to make when he saw baled hay yield corn whisky. Inside of each bale a big jar of whisky had been secreted.

HE MARRIED TWO WOMEN

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 21.—On a charge of bigamy preferred by wife No. 1, John W. McCoy, aged 37, a milk dealer of Detroit, was arraigned before Police Magistrate Leggatt here Wednesday. McCoy was picked up by the police as he crossed the river. Bail was refused.

It is charged that McCoy married Agnes Rollins, of this city, about ten years ago, and after five years of unhappiness, deserted her, going to Detroit, where he has since resided. Mrs. McCoy some time ago learned that her husband had married Etta Clapper, a Detroit girl, without going through the formality of divorce proceedings, and the warrant of arrest followed.

RESIGNATION OF PROF. DYDE

Kingston, Oct. 21.—At a meeting of Queen's University trustees Wednesday night, the resignation of Prof. S. W. Dyde, as head of the department of mental philosophy was accepted with regret. Prof. Dyde becomes principal of the new Presbyterian College at Strathcona, Alberta, at the first of the year.

The trustees decided to hold a special meeting on Nov. 16 to take up the question of a change in the constitution by removing the ties that bind Queen's to the Presbyterian Church, which question was again referred back by the general assembly.

Want Free Delivery.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 21.—The police began taking a census yesterday. This is the council's final effort to obtain free mail delivery, the Post office Department having promised to grant a service if the population reaches the ten thousand mark.

Reciprocity Negotiations.

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—It is rumored that a note has been received from the Washington Government in connection with the reciprocity negotiations, and that it is now under consideration by the Cabinet.

HUNDRED MILLION

Canada's Trade Increase Announced in Annual Report—England Best Customer.

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—The annual report of the Department of Trade and Commerce for the fiscal year ended March 31 last, shows that the total merchandise imported amounted to $385,835,103. This is nearly one hundred millions increase over the previous year. The total exports of merchandise amounted to $298,763,993, an increase of nearly 39 millions. Including coin and bullion, the total imports and exports were $639,211,221, an increase of 122 millions.

Trade with the United States increased by 67 millions, and with Great Britain 41 millions. The comparison is interesting. Total trade with the United States, $353,221,327; with Great Britain, $245,313,984. Merchandise imports from United States, $110,614,327, to Britain, $149,630,488. Thus, while the mother country is a much better customer for Canadian produce than the United States, Canada buys more from the United States than she does from the United Kingdom.

In view of the treaty with France, the figures concerning Canadian trade with that country are very disappointing. While the imports from France have increased by two millions, the exports to France have actually decreased by half a million. The figures are: Imports $10,170,908 against $8,098,806 in the previous year; exports $2,640,648, as compared with $3,176,096 in 1908; total trade $12,811,551, as against $11,204,902.

On the other hand, Canadian trade with Germany has increased in both imports and exports. Imports $7,968,264, an increase of nearly two millions; exports $2,501,191, an increase of one million.

Thus our trade arrangements with these two countries would appear to have been more to the benefit of them than of Canada.

Baby Scalded to Death.

Huntsville, Oct. 21.—The eight-months-old child of Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Hebner was scalded to death on Wednesday. The baby overturned a bowl of scalding water, suffering fearful burns about the head and body before death relieved the child's agony.

Assassin of Empress a Suicide.

Geneva, Oct. 21.—Luigi Luccheni, the anarchist who assassinated Empress Elizabeth of Austria in 1890, hanged himself in his cell here on Wednesday.

UNFORTUNATE POSITION OF YOUNG GIRL AND CHILD

Had No Place to Spend the Night—Girl Gave Minden as Her Home.

Without money or friends, and carrying a four weeks old baby, which was but scantily attired, a young girl of nineteen years of age called at the police station last night with a request for aid.

P.C. McGinty, with whom the unfortunate girl conversed, directed her to the home of Relief Officer Miller, and there she said that her home was in Minden, but that she had been travelling in different parts of the country.

She had been in Campbellford and Bockhorn, and in the former place met her betrayer.

The young girl had been in the city but a short time and not having any acquaintances or friends with whom she could spend the night, took the course stated above.

She was given the direction as to how to find a local institution, where she was taken care of.

"THE NOOSE ABOUT HIS NECK" THAT'S WHAT COURT OFFICIALS SAY ABOUT CRIPPEN. HE IS PALE AND ABJECT. MAKES DAMAGING ADMISSION

Special Cable to the Review.

London, Eng., Oct. 21.—Dr. H. H. Crippen, under the merciless cross-examination of Prosecutor Richard Muir, rapidly changed from the self-complacent and dapper prisoner of yesterday, into an object of abject pity.

Court attaches declared he had placed the noose about his own neck.

The spectacle he presented was one of the most pitiable in the annals of the famous old tribunal of justice.

Crippen admitted he knew of no person who had seen or heard from his wife since February 1st. Nor did he know any one who had seen her leave his residence at No. 39 Hilldrop Crescent, London, alive.

He admitted his testimony concerning her leaving him to join another man in America was mere assumption.

HUSBAND LEFT HER; WOMAN AND CHILD DEPORTED

Mr. P. Devlin, deportation officer of Kingston, arrived in the city this morning, and left on the Belleville train with an English woman and her child of four years, who are being deported to England, Mr. F. W. Miller, Relief Officer, having made the necessary arrangements with the Dominion authorities at Ottawa.

HUSBAND LEFT HER.

Two months ago the woman's husband left her in almost destitute circumstances. The family came here last spring, and the husband turned out to be worse than worthless, as far as working and supplying his wife and child with the necessities of life. She, poor woman, had to go out and work most of the time, and then found it hard to make sufficient money.

When the husband left matters became worse and finally the relief officer, who had been called upon to supply aid, finally decided to send the two back to England, the prospects for the future being only a bill of expense for the city, as past experience has shown, in dealing with other cases of a similar nature.

EXPAND

Say friend, expand. As you lift your blind to let in the fresh light of a new day, expand.

Expand your vision, be prepared for better things. Look forward, not backward, upward not downward, and expand. You know a bit, know more, you have a friend have more. Be friendly, expand. The seed expanded, the flower blossomed. Expand, you are made to mount and not to crawl. You are made to struggle and when you fall to rise again and move on. Expand, not as a mushroom, here to-day to-morrow trod underfoot. Expand as a man with high ideals, great ambitions, large in hope, serious in purpose. Be kind in your expanding, there is the other fellow. Expand but do not be conceited. Expand, but let your hat ever be the same size. This world is a great world and you must grow with it. The rut is the world of the worm made. You sir, have this whole world. Do not be narrow, be universal, expand.

UNION OR SEPARATION

The speech of Sir Wilfrid Laurier at Montreal is thoroughly disturbing. There may be no absolute inconsistency, but the tone is different from that of his western addresses. In the speeches which he delivered in the west there is the note of British imperialism. The speech at Montreal betrays an extreme Canadian Nationalism. Some of the sentences could have been spoken by Mr. Bourassa or Mr. Monk, and could be easily accepted by the Quebec Provincialists.

Why should we be so eager to assert our independence of the Mother Country and our desire to be a "power," rather than an integral part of the British Empire? We venture to think that the dominant sentiment of Canada is in favor of Imperial co-operation and consolidation, rather than of separate and isolated action. This speech of Sir Wilfrid Laurier, although we do not assert that that is his purpose, suggests a preparation for independence rather than a movement towards closer union. It is difficult to read the deliverance without feeling that it is addressed to a separate Quebec instead of to a United Canada. He seems willing to create the impression that, if his position were properly understood, he would occupy the same relation to the Empire as that of Mr. Monk and Mr. Bourassa, and that he equally with his critics, deserves the confidence of Quebec Nationalists.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier exalts the bogey of autonomy much as it is exalted by his antagonists. He suggests all through his speech at Montreal that like the Nationalist leader, he is standing on guard against an encroaching British Government. Under all the circumstances this attitude does not become the leader of the Government, and certainly is not justified by any action of British Ministers.—Toronto News.

LAURIER AND GREAT BRITAIN

At Montreal Sir Wilfrid Laurier claimed credit for resisting the "demands" of Great Britain. The Mother Country makes no "demands" upon Canada or any other of the Dominions. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's suggestion that he has been protecting the independence of Canada against aggressive British Ministers, that in some way Canadian autonomy has been imperilled by Imperial machinations, that if he had not stood on guard we would have been lured into the "vortex of European militarism," has the ring of insincerity in every sentence. There has been no proposal in Great Britain to levy a contribution upon Canada for the navy, or for any other purpose. Even the proposal to which Sir Wilfrid Laurier took particular exception was laid before the Imperial Conference by a representative of South Africa.

THE EIGHT DOLLARS

The application of Fire Chief Howard to the committee of the council that he be reimbursed the sum of $8.00, which he spent in entertaining visiting firemen during the summer, brings up a matter which is worth considering. If we issue literature asking public bodies and societies to make this city an excursion point, shall we stop at that. When the influential committee, including the Double-barrelled Deputy Director, or the most Exalted Principal, steps from the train to the platform, some one should be there to extend the glad hand and likewise to do some of the amenities of social and fraternal life that grease the wheels of business and lubricate the slides of progress. To invite people here and ignore them is not good policy, nor good business. It is true we do not undertake to entertain, but that does not wholly excuse. So, when Fire Chief Howard, as a representative official does what is seemly, he is assisting in holding up the prestige of the city and establishing a reputation for hospitality. Both of these are desirable assets.

As we progress in our life as a city we must incur city expenses. Why not? We may not afford all—we should not shirk some. Are our city officials to be set the example by Fire Chief Howard? Still there is this suggestion that may be put forward that as the City Council granted the chief a respectable sum for his holiday trip, he might have taken the eight dollars out of it and defrayed the excursionists' entertainment.

TRY IT GIRLS

Girls, did you ever stop to think that sweeping works every muscle in the body, and is the best deep breathing exercise that you can find? Sweeping under the bed and in the corners is excellent for the kidneys, and the use of the good old-fashioned broom tends to produce good blood and a fine figure. It beats the carpet sweeper all to pieces. Then, washing is good for the complexion and stirs up the liver. It also keeps the hands soft, and after an hour at the tub the nails are very easily manicured. Try it, girls.

CHURCH GOING

A city clergyman, on Sunday, was somewhat disrespectful, purposely so, towards the absentees from church service. He quoted the recent religious census to the effect that only about an hundred persons in the city were not church attendants.

Incidentally one other thought occurs to the Whig in passing. It is that men and women cannot be coerced by the church. They have to be persuaded or won. Dr. Frank Talmage demonstrated how power could be had over the masses by living very close to them and entering as much as possible into their lives. The sheep that see the shepherd only at times and at a distance will not follow him, and will not obey his voice.—Kingston Whig.

We do not know how many people there are in Peterborough who never go to church, but we know of a whole lot of people who do go, but who do not seem to be any better for it. They kneel to pray and rise to prey. Prey upon the man on Monday. Can they turn a corner and get away with it. Can they drive a hard bargain, they'll do it and do it quick. But that's not the fault of the church or the clergyman, that's not Christ's fault. It's the man's fault. The church can get along far better without the individual than the individual can get along without the church.

PRICES

There has been a good deal of complaint of late regarding extortionate prices demanded by those having produce for sale on the Guelph market. The remedy is surely in the consumer's hands. If the farmer asks more than is fair don't give it to him—let him keep his goods. It may be pretty hard to do this when you want butter and eggs, but there are other places where they can be bought, and once the producer sees the consumer doesn't care he will come down in his price. He is not a bit to blame for asking every cent he can get. We would, and probably do, just the same. We want the highest salary to be got and we like the best bargain at the store. So does the farmer—and he gets them because he has the ready cash. If we pay him more than is a fair price for produce there is nobody to blame but the consumer—he can apply the remedy.—Guelph Herald.

We cannot see anything extortionate about the price of eggs and butter. We have lived on the farm. Hens need care, need food, need a house. It's all right to say, let them scratch in the barn yard and that's all they want. Hens get lousy, get the pip, get the gapes and go on strike. A fresh egg is worth the money, a rotten egg, God forbid, we have opened them, God forbid that we should do it again. We have churned, we have pulled off the top, no signs, we have churned, we pulled off the top again, no signs. We have churned, churned till our arms ached. That butter isn't dear. Did you ever churn?

THE DEPOSED KING

There is something pathetic in the way that Manuel the deposed King of Portugal paid his second visit to England. A few months ago he came with all the pomp of royalty seeking a bride. The warships boomed salutes the soldiers stood to attention. He was a king. On Wednesday when he arrived at Plymouth there was no display no cannon, no soldiers at attention. There was no pomp. Sympathy took its place. The king had disappeared and a man walked forth instead.

SEPARATE QUEBEC

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's speech at Montreal is an appeal to a Separate Quebec rather than to a United Canada.

THE MOULTING SEASON

This is the season when the canaries moult and the women shed their hair. "In days of old when barons bold and warriors held their sway," the men were protected in mail, but ages before that they had only their skins and hair to keep them from the blast. Then they wore hair instead of clothes but one day Adam and Eve appeared and people wore clothes and the fig leaf has developed into a prince albert or an Empire gown. So the hair disappeared. This is the moulting season. When autumn starts, the roots of the hair seem, to put it simply, to go to sleep, and the hairs drop out as though they were dead plants. It is as natural a thing as the falling of the leaves. After this period of rest, and just before winter begins to be severe, the hair roots awaken to renewed activity and a crop of hair stronger and thicker than that of the summer grows. In the case of animals their winter hair is not only stronger and warmer, but it also changes its color. In winter, for instance, the Arctic fox gets a white coat and so does the Arctic hare. This autumnal moult is a relic of the time when men depended on their hair for shelter against the sun, the rain and the cold."

BECOMING COMPLICATED

Recent naval evolution has been somewhat as follows:

The torpedo boat.

The torpedo boat destroyer.

The destroyer of the torpedo boat destroyer.

The destroyer of the destroyer of the torpedo boat destroyer.

And so on.

Then there is the Biblical warfare, which is proceeding much like this:

The heretic.

The heresy hunter.

The hunter of the heresy hunter.

The hunter of the hunter of the heresy hunter.

And so on.

To the average man there seems rather much hunting of the individual, and not enough hunting for the truth.—Star, Toronto.

To this we would also add:—There is the public meeting nuisance.

The man who moves the vote of thanks.

The man who thanks the man for thanking him.

The man who thanks the man for thanking him for his thanks.

And the man, who, not to be outdone, thanks the man for thanking him for thanking him for thanking him for his thanks.

DR. HASTINGS CHALLENGES BEELZEBUB

The terror that flieth by night and the pestilence that crawleth at noonday if we may slightly paraphrase a recognized translation is the foe that Dr. Hastings has seen fit to attack as soon as possible. As a matter of fact the domestic fly is held to be responsible for more deaths through typhoid fever than polluted water.

Flies cannot be avoided if they are permitted to live. They crawl over everything. Their feet are tainted with a million germs. They pollute the bread the butter the milk, the meat, everything they touch. They come from the filthiest places and are foul with the taint of the most abominable dirt.

Food that is open to the contamination of flies is a danger to health and should be shunned like the plague. Storekeepers who take no precautions against flies are in league with death against their customers. Medical health authorities are pressing this matter in other cities and Dr. Hastings is well advised in taking up the campaign against the disgusting evil.

Toronto's death rate is very heavy compared with that of London with its seven millions. The fly is to a great extent responsible for this tragical condition. A teaspoonful of formaline in a pint of water in a warm grill attract flies and destroy them and there are other simple means of protection so that Dr. Hastings is not raising a difficult question.—Toronto World.

Hush! Is our Council are the members of the Board of Health in league with Beelzebub?

A Gentleman From Mississippi

By THOMAS A. WISE

Novelized From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THOMAS A. WISE

Miss Langdon held out her hand impulsively.

"Then it will be Altacoola!" she cried. "Thank you, Mr. Haines. We are partners, then, for Altacoola."

The young man grasped her hand earnestly.

"I'd like to be your partner for good, Carolina!" he cried.

They stood there close together, holding each other's hands, looking into each other's eyes, when the door opened and in came Charles Norton.

CHAPTER XIII.

AN OLD FASHIONED FATHER.

CONGRESSMAN NORTON was startled visibly at the sight of Carolina and Haines apparently so wrapped up in each other. Perhaps she was getting interested in the handsome, interfering secretary. That a woman sometimes breaks her promise to wed he well knew. Plainly Carolina was carrying things too far for a girl who was the promised wife of another.

Carolina and Haines showed surprise at Norton's entrance.

The congressman advanced and spoke sneeringly, his demeanor marking him to be in a dangerous mood.

"Do I intrude?" he drawled deliberately.

Carolina drew away her hands from Haines and faced the newcomer.

"Intrude!" she exclaimed contemptuously, a tone that Norton construed as in his favor and Haines in his own.

"Intrude!" Haines laughed sarcastically, feeling that now he was leader in the race for love against this Mississippi representative, who was, he knew, a subservient tool and a taker of bribes. "You surely do intrude, Norton. Wouldn't any man who had interrupted a tete-a-tete another man was having with Miss Langdon be intruding?"

"I suppose I can't deny that," he replied.

The secretary smiled again.

"I'll match you to see who stays," he said.

But Norton's turn to defeat his rival had come. He held out a paper to Haines.

"Senator Langdon gave me this for you. I reckon I don't have to match."

The secretary opened the note to read:

"Where in thunder does that hydrate come from—South America or Russia? How much off on the tariff on the creature do we want? Come over to the committee room, where I am, right away. Say it's an urgent message and get in with a tip."

The secretary looked up, with a laugh.

"You win, Norton. I'm off. Good-by." And he started on a run to the senator's aid.

Norton turned angrily on the girl as the door closed.

"See here, Carolina," he cried, "what do you mean by letting that fellow make love to you?"

Carolina Langdon would not permit rebuke, even from the man she cared for. She tossed back her head and said coolly:

"Why shouldn't I let him make love to me if I choose?"

"You know why," exclaimed Norton, his dark face flushing sullenly. "Because I love you and you love me!" And he seized her and pressed her to him. "That is why!" he cried, and he kissed her again and again.

"Yes, I love you, Charlie; you know that," Carolina said simply. She was conquered by the southerner's masterfulness.

"Then why do you stand for that whippersnapper's talk?" asked Norton perplexedly.

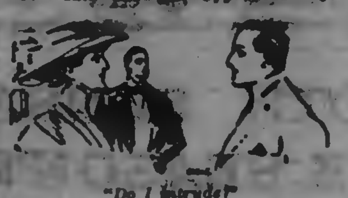
Carolina laughed.

"Don't you see, Charlie, I have to stand for it? I have to stand for it for your sake, for Randolph's sake, for my own sake, for all our sakes. You know the influence he has over father.

"He can make father do anything he wants, and suppose I don't lead him on? Where's our project? Let him suspect a thing and let him go to father, and you know what will happen. Father would turn against that Altacoola scheme in a moment. He'd beggar himself, if it were necessary, rather than let a single one of us make a dollar out of a thing he had to decide."

"You're right, I reckon, Carolina," said Norton dejectedly. "Your father is a real type of the southern gentleman. He hasn't seen any real money in so long he can't even bear to think of it. Somebody's got to make money out of this, and we should be the ones."

"We'd lose frightfully, Charlie, if they changed to Gulf City, wouldn't we?" said the girl apprehensively.



"Do I intrude?"

"I'm horribly afraid sometimes, Charlie. That's why I came here today. I wanted to influence Haines, to keep him straight. Is there any danger that they'll change? You don't think there is, do you?"

"Of course not, child. Stevens has got his money in, and Peabody. There are only five on the committee. It's bound to go through."

"Then why is father so important to them?" asked Carolina.

"It's past my understanding, Carolina. I don't see how he's done it, but the whole country has come to believe whatever your father does is right, and they've got to have him."

"And father is completely under the domination of this secretary," murmured the girl thoughtfully.

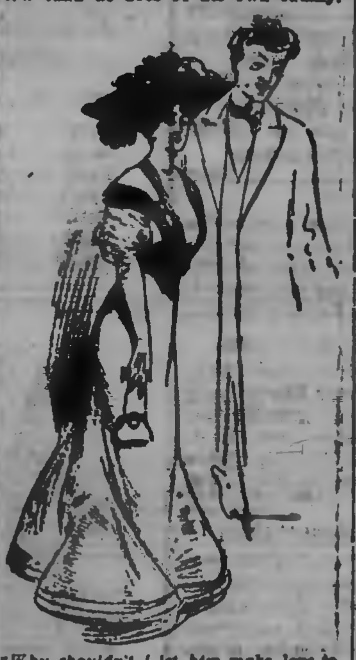
Norton nodded.

"We've got to get rid of him, Carolina. That's all there is to it. He has to go! When it comes to bossing the senator and making love to you, too, he's getting too strong."

"How can you do it?" she asked. "You know when father likes any one he won't believe a thing against him."

Norton agreed sorrowfully.

"That's right. Seems like the senator's coming to think more of this fellow than he does of his own family.



"Why shouldn't I let him make love to me?"

Why, I wouldn't be surprised if he'd even let one of you girls marry him if he wanted to marry you."

"We'd have something to say about that," Carolina laughed amusedly. "Do you think that Hope or I could ever care for a man like this fellow? Of course not. But do be careful, Charlie. This Altacoola business must go through right. It would be too cruel not to have it so. And then"—

"And then you and I'll be married at once, Carolina, whether your father likes it or not," ended Norton for her. "With Altacoola safe, we can do as we please, as between us we'll be rich. What does it matter how we get the money, as long as we get it."

CHAPTER XIV.

WHEN A DAUGHTER BETRAYS HER FATHER.

BUD returned to find Miss Langdon and Norton still in the room. New buoyancy, new courage, thrilled in his veins. He would give this congressman the battle of his life for this prize, of that he was confident.

"I have an engagement with Mrs. Holcomb, Senator Holcomb's wife," she said, "so I must hurry away, but I expect to be back to see father."

"I think I'll just wait," suggested Norton. "I have to see the senator as soon as possible, and he ought to return from that ways and means committee meeting pretty soon."

When Carolina had gone a slight feeling of constraint settled over the two.

"The senator's pretty busy these days with his naval base matter coming up, isn't he?"

"Yes; keeps him pretty busy receiving delegations from Altacoola and Gulf City and patting them both on the back," said Haines. "Had a man from Gulf City in this morning with some pretty strong arguments."

The secretary watched Norton keenly to note the effect of this hint in favor of Gulf City.

"Gulf City!" Norton sneered. "Shucks! Who'd put a naval base on a bunch of mud flats? I reckon those Gulf City fellows are wasting their time."

"Think so?" suggested Haines. "Are you absolutely sure?"

Norton started.

"Why, you don't mean to tell me," he exclaimed, "that Senator Langdon would vote for Gulf City for the naval base?"

"I don't mean to tell you anything, congressman," was the cool rejoinder. "It's not my business. The senator's the one who does the talking."

An ugly sneer wrinkled the congressman's face.

"Well, I'm glad he attends to his own business and doesn't trust too many people," he said pointedly.

The secretary smiled in puzzling fashion.

"That's exactly why I don't talk, congressman," he said pleasantly. "The senator doesn't trust too many people. If he did, there might be too much money made out of land speculation. Senator Langdon doesn't happen to be one of those senators who care for that kind of thing."

"I suppose you think you're pretty strong with the senator," ventured the Mississippian.

"Tell you the truth, I haven't thought very much about it," replied Haines, "but, if you come right down to it, I guess I am pretty strong."

"Suppose you've influenced him in the naval base business, then."

Still the secretary smiled, keeping his temper under the adroit attack.

"Well, I think he'd listen to me with considerable interest."

"But you're for Altacoola, of course."

Haines shook his head.

"No, I can't say that I'm for Altacoola. Fellow who was in here this morning put up a pretty good argument, to my mind, for Gulf City. In fact, he made it pretty strong. Seemed to show it was all to my interest to go in with Gulf City. Think I'll have to investigate a little more. I tell you, Norton," spoke Haines in a confidential manner, "this land speculation fever is a frightful thing. While I was talking to this fellow from Gulf City I almost caught it myself. Probably if I met the head of the Altacoola speculation I might catch the fever from him too."

"Why don't you put your money into Gulf City and lose it, then?" replied Norton, nodding his head scornfully. "That'd be a good lesson for a rising young politician like you."

Senator Langdon's secretary peered straight into Norton's eyes.

"Because, congressman," he said, "if I were to put my money in Gulf City perhaps I wouldn't lose it."

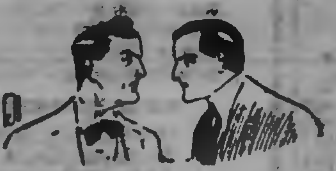
The southerner took a step forward, leaned over and glared angrily at Haines. His face whitened.

"You don't mean that you could swing Langdon into Gulf City?" he gasped.

Haines smiled.

"I can't say that, Norton, but I guess people interested in Altacoola would hate to have me try."

"I didn't know you were that kind, Haines," said Norton, his virtue aroused at the thought of losing his money. "So you're playing the game like all the rest?"



"I'll make you pay for that!"

"Why shouldn't I?" shrugged the secretary. "I guess perhaps I'm a little sore because the Altacoola people haven't even paid me the compliment of thinking I had any influence, so they can't expect me to work for them. The Gulf City people have. As things stand, Gulf City looks pretty good to me."

To be continued.

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

Have Eyes Tested at Intervals

"THE ALASKAN"

A Musical Comedy Full of Laughable Scenes, Catchy Songs and Pretty Girls

Under the above heading the Ottawa Journal of Wednesday October 19, says of "The Alaskan" which will be at the Grand on Tuesday:—

Bronzed prospectors an imperturbable professor a can of most effective laughing powder a few side-splitting puns a well trained and powerful chorus and a large aggregation of girls some of them pretty, constitute that musical comedy "The Alaskan," presented at the Russell Theatre last evening. It is not such a frosty production as the title implies although there is a female character in the caste who treated her fiance rather frostily in a certain circumstance of the plot of the play. The scene is laid in bleak Alaska and the vivacity of the entire production is a splendid antidote to a spirit of depression. It is a laugh from the rise of the curtain to its final drop.

There is just sufficient plot to withstand the load of fun. The play opens with a rivalry between two prospectors for a girl and the play ends with a triple wedding ceremony which one of the participants in this not altogether funeral ceremony calls "an excursion."

The song hit of the evening was the Snowball song the interest of which is intensified by a regular fusilade of of fur balls thrown by the chorus girls into the audience. If the men in the audience used as much energy in trying to find the South Pole as they did throwing back those balls to the chorus girls there would be a big concourse of people within the Antarctic circle.

Professor Knicklebein the laughing powder artist provided reason for the more spontaneous outbursts of hilarity. The Professor's mixing of the bowl of punch and his laughable insistence upon trying it every moment to see if there be any deficiency in it was a reminder of the venerable lord of Bracebridge Hall which Washington Irving so vividly pictures.

The animated totem poles and the Totem Pole song by Deetmar Poppen were a feature of the last act. Mr. Poppen's singing was admirable.

The entire performance is refreshing and is full of wholesome laughter.

MUNICIPAL SYNDICATE TO DEVELOP POWER IS A PROPOSAL ON HAND

Bowmanville Review: Monday the Commissioner of Industries for Peterborough 'phoned the Mayor that there were power facilities in that district that could be cheaply developed and suggested that the several towns form a municipal syndicate to exploit them. He said under this plan electric power could be developed in Bowmanville at a cost not exceeding $15 per horse power. A meeting may be held in the near future.

The Toronto Telegram says:—"Eastern Ontario stands waiting the guiding hand of this Commission. What the Commission has done for Ottawa in securing for the citizens of the Capital electricity at $15 per h.p. it must also do for Whitby Bowmanville Kingston, Brockville and Cornwall. Power must be had from the waters of the Trent Valley Canal and from the other rivers and falls of Eastern Ontario to stimulate the industries of these cities and towns and to revive the flagging commercial life of this the oldest section of our province."

SEVEN CASES BEFORE FALL ASSIZES OF HIGH COURT

Two Murder Charges and Five Civil Actions—Chancellor Boyd to Preside—Opening on Tuesday, October 25.

The Fall Assizes of the High Court of Justice will open on Tuesday afternoon, October 25, at the County Court House with a docket list of six cases, two of which are murder charges.

Chancellor Boyd will preside and Mr. E. B. Meredith, K. C., will conduct the prosecution, in the murder charges.

The other cases are civil actions, four jury and one nonjury.

The particulars of the two murder charges are still fresh in the minds of local citizens. After a preliminary hearing before magistrate Dumble, James Gorham, was sent up to stand trial for the murder of his mother, whom he shot, with fatal effects, when a police officer was about to place him under arrest, for creating a disturbance.

Hugh Lelin, who, it is alleged caused the death of his wife at their home in Belmont Township, is the other prisoner to be tried.

CLAIM $5,000

Alex. Innis and Maud Innis, his wife, of Havelock are the plaintiffs in the non-jury action, against the Corporation of Havelock.

On Sunday, May 22, 1910, the plaintiff, Maud Innis, while proceeding along the sidewalk, on George Street, Havelock, stepped into a hole, in the sidewalk, and she was thrown violently to the ground, receiving severe injuries, to the head, left leg, left eye and spine. By reason, of the injuries sustained by the plaintiff, Maud Innis, the plaintiff, Alex. Innis, was deprived of the comfort, society, assistance and services of the said plaintiff and is still deprived of the same and has incurred and will incur great expense for nursing and medical attendance and domestic service.

The plaintiffs claim, $5,000 damages and their costs of the action, and such further and other relief as the nature of the case may require.

Dennistoun, Peck and Kerr, for plaintiffs. Hall, Hayes andHall, for defendants.

CLAIM FOR $3000

Edward Foley, residing near Havelock, claims $3000 from the defendants, Wm. West. sr., and Wm. West, jr., of Havelock, portable mill owners.

Plaintiff claims, that while engaged in operating an edger, and was standing beside a machine which he was superintending and operating, the machine which operated the carriers, drawing the sawdust from under where he stood, broke, and a flying piece of the machinery struck him a little above the ankle, and broke his leg. As a result plaintiff suffered great pain, and has been prevented for a long time from following his usual occupation, and has been put to great expense in obtaining medical and other attendance.

Hall, Medd and Davidson for plaintiff, George Alfred Payne, Campbellford, for defendants.

FOR LOSS OF HUSBAND

Mary Anna Vinette, claims $5,000 from the Otonabee Power Company Limited for the loss of her husband, Isadore Vinette, who was killed while in the employ of the Company, owing to the said company's negligence.

O'Connell and Gordon for plaintiff iff, Hall, Medd and Davidson for defendants.

$2000 DAMAGES

The Bishop Construction Company, Limited, are the defendants in an action brought by Michael, Joseph Sullivan of Peterborough, in which the plaintiff claims $2000 damages for injuries received while in the employ of the defendant Company, on or about the 12th day of April, 1910.

Plaintiff alleges that the part of the scaffold on which he was standing gave way and he was precipitated into the Otonabee river, and carried through the rapids and falls thereof, and sustained serious and permanent injuries.

O'Connell and Gordon for plaintiff Roginette, Godfrey Phalen and Henderson for defendants.

CLAIMS $1,000.

William B. Warne seeks to recover $1,000 from the Canadian Pacific Railway for damages received to his automobile on or about September 1, as a result of the negligence of the company.

The accident occured at a crossing on Rink Street, and was caused, the plaintiff alleges, through no signals being given by an engine which was shunting some cars.

O'Connell and Gordon for plaintiff, Angus McMurchy for defendants.

PUBLIC MEETING OF CHIMES SUBSCRIBERS THIS EVENING

The chimes subscribers are reminded of an important meeting this evening at 8 o'clock in the Council Chamber, which, it is to be hoped, will be largely attended in order that the movement may be thoroughly discussed and the ideas of those in attendance placed before the committee.

The S.O.E. sent in $5, which was voted for the fund at the society's last meeting.

A donation was also received from R. J. Winch, now in Vancouver, with a letter expressing warm wishes for the success of the enterprise.

The girls of R. Fair & Co. have sent in $2.25 as their joint contribution.

Several other donations have also been received, and the fun now stands at over $5,000.

Mr. Grant Potter, son of Rev. J. G. Potter, is in the city for a few days, on his way to Montreal. Mr. Potter has just returned from Regina, where he has been filling a position in the City Engineer's office.

He reports that the building operations at Regina for the present year and up to October 15th, amounted to over $2,500,000 and this large sum only includes store and dwellings. SPORTING NEWS

OTTAWA'S GOALTENDER TO COACH UNIVERSITY SEVEN

Percy Le Sueur, the well known goal keeper of the Ottawa hockey team, has just closed with the athletic authorities at Columbia University, N.Y., to coach the hockey team at that institution this winter. Columbia is in the Intercollegiate League with Princeton, Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth and Cornell. Le Sueur, in his extended hockey career, has played most every position on the ice, starting in the business as a wing man and winding up by playing the nets. He is well qualified to coach. His contract calls for seven weeks, and he will report at Columbia on the 15th of November. Percy will be back before the start of the big league season in the National to take his old place in front of the Ottawa cage.

Le Sueur's little publication "How to Play Hockey," issued last year, became very popular among the hockeyists on the other side, as well as in Canada, and ever since it has been in circulation the author has been in demand as a coach. Le Sueur has made a close study of hockey and plays it from an intelligent point of view. He is a strong believer in the one man on the ice is better than two on the fence theory and always prevails on his team mates to stick where they are most useful.—Ottawa Free Press.

SPORTING COMMENT

Eddie Collins, the dashing second baseman of the Philadelphia Athletics, is well known in Ottawa, having appeared at Varsity Oval with Burlington and Rutland when Ottawa was on the Northern League circuit. Eddie was a student at Columbia University at the time and it was through his presence in the Northern he was refused permission to play any more baseball or football with the Columbia team.

While playing here, Collins looked a mere youth and he was as a matter of of fact being but nineteen years old. He could smash the ball hard and his work in the short field was very classy. He always wore his light blue and white Columbia sweater every time he played on the local diamond. Manager "Punch" Daley, of the Ottawa team, tried to land him on two occasions, but Eddie said Ottawa was too far north for him.

Here's another one from Lindsay about that Junior O.R.F.U. team;

The Warder says;—The Capital Rugby team of Toronto, have asked for a game of rugby with the Lindsay Junior O.R.F.U. team on Thanksgiving Day.

As the Lindsay O.R.F.U. team has ceased practicing owing to the default of the Peterboroughs, they will not be in shape for a game. However, the bankers are considering the matter and may play an exhibition game.

THE WAY OF THE BIG FOUR

Montreal Gazette.

Two of the four games down for decision on Saturday again look like close affairs, and two more, uneven. The forecasts last week proved right—the closest game in Ottawa, and next to it the game between Queen's and McGill here, with the other two to be won by big margins. This week the feature struggles will be the meetings between Hamilton and Ottawa, in Ottawa, and between McGill and Toronto in Montreal. Argos will have to take a remarkable brace, and Montreal as remarkable a slump to make the outcome of the game in Toronto anything else but a victory for Montreal. In Kingston Queen's will dispose of Ottawa College without much difficulty if the past records of the teams are to count for anything.

Tigers, encouraged by the Montreal victory, are counting on winning in Ottawa. From this distance it looks like an even bet, with the chances slightly favoring Ottawa. If the Ottawa players had been able to go the route there might have been a different story to tell last Saturday, and Ottawa is by no means out of the race yet. Unfortunately for themselves, if they down Tigers they will be giving Montreal a commanding advantage in the Big Four, and yet they must win the game to remain in the race. An Ottawa victory would leave Montreal a chance to win the championship by breaking even with Tigers in home-and-home games, defeating Argonauts in Toronto next Saturday and trimming Ottawa here in the last last game of the schedule.

HE FEARED BLOOD POISON

But Zam-Buk Saved His Thumb!

Once again a case is reported in which the popular balm Zam-Buk has saved a worker from the terrible effects of blood-poisoning. Mr. Alfred Hy. Orth, of Shipley, Ont., says;—"While at work I had the misfortune to run a rusty nail under my thumb nail, to the depth of about one and a half inches. The pain was terrible and what I feared was that the nail being so dirty and rusty would set up festering and blood-poison. I knew from previous experience how good Zam-Buk was, so I cleaned the thumb, melted a little Zam-Buk, and ran it into the wound. The result was wonderful! It soothed the pain and the thumb actually did not swell. Zam-Buk kept away all inflammation. I was able to go on with my work all the time, and in a few days the thumb was as good as ever. A balm which can do this should be in every working man's home."

Zam-Buk is the finest form of "insurance" for all workers. Its antiseptic power is so great that no disease germ can live in it; and if immediately applied to a sore or injury, or diseased patch, all danger of blood-poisoning is averted.

Being composed of pure vegetable essences, Zam-Buk is an ideal balm for babies and young children, and mothers will find it far superior to the ordinary salves, some of which contain harmful mineral poisons, rancid animal fats, etc.

Zam-Buk is a sure cure for ulcers, abscesses, eczema, ringworm, blood-poison, scalp sores, chapped hands, cold sores, inflamed patches, bad leg, varicose veins and ulcers, piles, cuts, burns, bruises and all skin diseases and injuries. Sold by all druggists and storekeepers at 50c. a box, 3 for $1.25. Post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Avoid harmful imitations and substitutes.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind:—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To-day the Knight engine stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as tested, tried and proven of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "22" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

BON FIRES

With the shedding of the maples,
Comes a time held dear by youth,
'Tis the day of big bon fires,
For young "Bill" and sister Ruth.

Garden rakes and stolen matches,
Youthful shouts, not mixed with sighs,
Heaps of leaves lose all their beauty,
While curling smoke ascends the skies.

Willing hands soon gather fresh fuel,
This brings marks of fame for all,
Dirty faces, hands and garments,
Soon is heard the supper call.

All unheeding, goes the summons,
There amid the blaze and smoke,
Stand these playmates, true and loyal,
None can see a future yoke.

They just now are like the young leaf
In the budding days of spring,
So, well may their childish voices
'Round the bonfire gladly ring.

For some day they too, must wither,
Having passed through stream and sea,
May their lives be marked with beauty like the leaf on yonder tree.

STAGE STAFF OF GRAND GAVE CONGRATULATORY BANQUET TO BENEDICT BRETHREN

The scene was laid at Coleman's. There were two leading men. The curtain calls were enthusiastic. There were fifty-four in the company and the music was supplied by entertaining vocalists and the Grand Opera House orchestra. There was considerable comedy thanks to the efficiency of those contributing to the program and a vein of seriousness when the two principals were congratulated on the important parts they had taken. The whole production was a big success.

In language savoring less of the footlights, Mr. Teddy Crowe, the well liked and able stage manager of the Grand Opera House and Mr. James Price a popular member of the stage staff were banquetted by their associates at the opera house and friends last night in a manner that spoke volumes for their popularity and the feelings of affection and good fellowship cherished toward them.

Mr. J. J. Turner, the manager of the opera house was in the chair and officiated most happily in that capacity. He paid sincere tributes to the ability and trustworthiness of Messrs. Crowe and Price and the other members of his stage staff and said that he thought the Grand had one of the best stage crews in the Dominion. He congratulated the young men on their accepting the responsibilities of the marriage state.

Mr. Turner said that the relations between the management and the staff were of the most cordial character and expressed his pleasure at having the privilege of acting as chairman of the banquet.

It was nearly eleven o'clock when the guests sat down to the fine spread provided by Messrs. Coleman Bros.

The first toast was to "The King" and was loyally honored. The toasts to "Our Guests" were responded to in appreciative terms by Messrs. Crowe and Price both of whom expressed their gratitude for the banquet tendered them and spoke of the kind treatment always accorded them by their friends of the stage staff. When the toast was proposed the gathering sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows" with a heartiness that bespoke real sincerity.

The first number on the musical program was a song by Mr. Lee. He was warmly encored. Mr. George Lynch was called on for a song but said that instead of showing his experiences as a vocalist he would tell a few stories which he did in his own original and very humorous way. Mr. W. Barrie followed with a brilliantly played piano solo. Mr. Harry Wilfrid sang an infectious comic song that set the crowd humming and was given a generous recall. Mr. Charles Coleman went to sleep in his humorous solo but the crowd kept very much awake as was shown by the vigorous encore given him. Mr. George Chandler was in unusually good form in his tenor solo and gave "Mary of Argyle" in fine voice. He was given an enthusiastic encore.

The "Press" toast was replied to by the representatives present and Mr. Mr Turner responded to the toast to "The Chairman" proposed by Mr Tom Stinton.

"God Save the King" brought to a close of an evening that was an unusually bright and pleasant one and an occasion that was marked with a spirit of the best of goodfellowship.

YOUNG MEN WERE GIVEN SUSPENDED SENTENCE

Two young men who gained an entrance into the lower store of T. H. Hooper on the night of Friday last and were arrested by P.C's. Newhall and Meagher after they had taken a quantity of candies faced Magistrate Dumble again this morning.

Through their counsel Mr. F. D. Kerr each elected for a summary hearing and pleaded guilty.

His Worship decided on a suspended sentence. In his remarks to the prisoners he pointed out that they had betrayed the confidence of Mr. Hooper in making use of the key and that the offence of burglarizing was committed with their eyes open. It would be better for them were they to suppress the habit of seeking to gratify their every desire and rather deny themselves.

The Magistrate advised the young men to get on the right path and and stay there. While suspended sentence was permitted this time a repitition could not be made in the event of another offence.

INTERNATIONAL Y.M.C.A. TO BE HELD AT TORONTO OCT. 28-31

Local Young Men's Christian Associations throughout Canada are busy selecting the delegates to represent them at the Great International Convention to be held in Toronto on Oct 28-31. Some idea of the importance of the gathering is had from the fact that over two thousand delegates will be present.

The programme for the convention is, in part, as follows—

Quiet hour session—Fletcher S. Brockman, national secretary, China.

Triennial report of International Committee—Dr. L. C. Warner, New York.

"A Decade of Association Progress"—Home Field, Alfred E. Marling, New York; Foreign Field, W. D. Murray, New York.

"The Unifying Power of Christ and His Service"—Rev. J. L. Gordon, Winnipeg.

"The Timeliness of the Association to Meet the Needs of Canada."—J. Macdonald, Toronto.

Three devotional addresses by Dr. George L. Robinson, of Chicago.

"In View of (a) Large Modern Buildings, (b) Civic and Industrial Opportunities, (c) Growth of Brotherhoods and Kindred Organizations, what is the present-day association objective, and what changes, if any, are required in our Religious Work Methods?"—C. R. Joy, A. G. Studer, Chas. R. Towson, W. K. Cooper, L. W. Messer and others.

"The Association's Message to Young Men."—F. S. Brockman, China.

"The Latent Powers of the Men of North America."—N. W. Rowell, K.C, of Toronto, and Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, of Rochester.

"Our World-wide Obligations"—John R. Mott, LL.D.

"What Can the Association do to Recruit for the Church Leaders, Lay and Clerical?"—Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, Rochester.

"Safeguarding the Boys of a Continent."—Ernest Thompson Seton, New York, and D. R. Porter, New York.

"Some great Unfinished Tasks in the Work of the North American Association Movement."—John R. Mott, LL.D.

Canadians throughout all the Provinces of this half-continent are looking forward with eager expectation to the gathering. They hope for the best things. They know that from the convention lines of transmission run out to every large centre. They believe that within reach is the source of "all power in Heaven and in earth." To send that power thrilling through the lives of all delegates to the life of the Canadian people is the great opportunity of the convention. It is indeed great business.

CANADIAN CHICLE COMPANY ASKS FOR GRANT OF FREE SITE

At the Manufacturers' Committee meeting last night a letter from the Canadian Chicle Company asking for a grant of a free site at the corner of Romaine and George streets was read by the chairman. They purpose erecting a factory dimensions to be 35 by 78 feet and to employ 30 hands. They ask for a site with fifty feet frontage and a depth of seventy. The site is a very valuable one. On motion of Mayor Morrow the matter was left in the hands of the Board of Works which meets on Saturday, and the chairman advised to get all possible information regarding it in the meantime.

There was nothing done in regard to a letter from Mr. Carew asking for an extension of his gas franchise.

The meeting adjourned about nine o'clock.

PETERBOROUGH WILL BID FOR FIRE CHIEFS' CONVENTION

The Legal Committee met at 5.30 last night.

Mayor Morrow Aldermen Buller and Gillespie City Clerk S. R. Armstrong and Chairman Ald. Duffus were present. Alderman Phelan was confined to his home through illness and Ald. Turner is out of the city.

Alderman Duffus read a letter from Fire Chief Howard secretary of the Provincial Fire Chief's Association. The Fire Chiefs' Convention meets in Toronto this year. The chief thought it would be desirable to have the convention held in Peterborough next year. Orillia is making a bid to have it in their town. The committee thought it was a commendable project.

Mayor Morrow moved that an invitation to them be extended. Alderman Gillespie seconded it and it was carried.

R. N. Scott's traction engine went through the Mark street bridge just north of Hunter street early last month. A number of minor expenses were incurred by him in extricating it. In a letter to the Council he asked for twenty-five dollars damages.

Alderman Buller moved that it be referred to the city solicitor for investigation. The motion was carried.

Another communication from Fire Chief Howard in the shape of a bill, was the next item. Eight dollars was the amount. The expense was incurred in providing the Oddfellows excursion here last summer with refreshments.

Alderman Buller moved that the matter be left in the hands of the Fire Water and Light Committee. Seconder Ald. Gillespie.—Carried.

A lengthy letter from W. Wrigley secretary of the Hardware Dealers' Association was read. The following extract from it explains itself:

Toronto Ont.

Mr. Jos J. Duffus

Chairman of Reception Committee

Peterborough:

Dear Sir—

The writer in company with our president paid a visit to Peterborough on the evening of Sept. 19th leaving early the next morning and having time to interview only the local manufacturers and Ald. J. J. Turner regarding signs and decorations for the Armories at the time of our convention next February. We expect to visit Peterborough again shortly and hope to have the pleasure of meeting you again and discussing arrangements for the convention.

As chairman of the Reception Committee of the City Council we suppose you will be willing if in office next February to act on the local reception committee to meet the visiting hardware men on their arrival in the city and assist in getting them located in the various hotels. Ald. Phelan and Ald. Turner will also be willing no doubt to act on the Reception Committee.

W. WRIGLEY.

The above matter was left in the hands of Ald. Duffus to get all information on a motion moved by Mayor Morrow and seconded by Ald. Gillespie.

Not Responsible

(To The Editor of The Review)

Sir:—The following explanation by The Toronto Star, (Liberal) of the alleged conversation in which he took part which was so vigorously attacked by Sir James Whitney is of interest:—

(The Toronto Star)

• • • •

A STATEMENT FROM THE REPORTER.

The following reply to Sir James by Mr. H. M. Loland, the reporter of The Star, who was despatched last Thursday to obtain an interview with Bishop Fallon, has been received by telegraph this morning.

(Special to The Star)

London, Oct. 18—In reply to the statement made by Sir James, I might state that I did have a conversation with a lawyer on the train coming west from Toronto last Thursday evening. It is not necessary to mention his name, but during our remarks he described himself as "a personal friend of Mr. Hanna." We were discussing the publication of the letter written by Mr. Hanna. I had stated that it was pretty well known who was responsible for the matter finding its way into the columns of the French papers. I had in mind Mr. Maisonville, secretary to the Minister of Public Works, but his name was not mentioned by me. As to the rest of Sir James' statement he is in error or has been misinformed. I did not at any time state that I personally held Mr. Hanna responsible for the letter becoming public, nor did I say that I or The Star was going to "Keep it up on Mr. Hanna to show that his object is to assist Bourassa and Monk in the Province of Quebec."

What did happen was this. The lawyer supposed a case as follows: Taking it for granted that someone in authority in Queen's Park had given out the letter, what political advantage could he hope to gain by it? In reply I stated that in the minds of more than one the object was to assist the Conservative party by doing harm to the Liberal party, and incidentally helping Mr. Bourassa in Quebec. The lawyer asked how that could be, and I said that the way it could be figured out was that the Catholic Church is generally thought to be in favor of the Laurier Government. Accordingly if it were shown that the Right Rev. M. F. Fallon, one of the bishops of the Catholic Church is down on the French, the obvious conclusion would be that the whole Church is, and the Liberal party also, because it receives the support of the Church. Certain of the French-Canadian papers, I said, have been maintaining that the Liberal party is not French enough, and the giving out of the letter, in the minds of more than one, was a means of discrediting the Catholic Church and the Liberal party in the eyes of the French. Why else was the letter sent to the French papers is a question, I said, that people are asking.

In no maner, directly or indirectly, did I state that I personally, or The Star, held that view. One of two things has happened, either the lawyer misunderstood what I said, or Sir James was misinformed as to what was really said by me, for I did not say, directly or indirectly, expressed or implied that I or The Star was going to "Keep it up on Hanna."
H. M. LOLAND.

Yours, etc.,

STEAMER BLOWN FROM COURSE LOCAL LADY ON BOARD

Miss Alice Leader, daughter of Mr. George Leader, 278 Thomas St. arrived home this week from St. Johns, Newfoundland. On the trip from St. Johns to Montreal, Miss Leader and the other passengers had an experience which they will not easily forget. The steamer blown 140 miles out of her course by violent winds and choppy seas, was nine days in making the passage. Violent showers of hail fell frequently. The passengers were compelled to remain below for several days at a time.

The trip ordinarily only takes five days, so that her arrival at Montreal was four days overdue. The vessel was the "Bonavista" of the Black Diamond Line. She carried no cargo on this trip. She touched at Sydney, Nova Scotia; for a day to take on coal.

Miss Leader, when seen to-day, considered the incident quite an experience and stated that she did not mind undergoing it in the least.

BIGGEST SHOW TRAVELLING ON THIS CONTINENT

"The Midnight Sons," Lew Fields' mammoth musical play, which holds the record for long Broadway engagements, comes to the Grand Opera House next Thursday, October 27th. This will be one of the few engagements played by "The Midnight Sons" in Canada. The production requires six baggage cars to transport the large amount of scenery, properties and costumes. There is one scene alone—that showing the interior of an opera house—which requires one baggage car to hold.

The book of the play is by Glen McDonough, who has written "The Jolly Bachelors" and "The Summer Widowers." Raymond Hubbell, the well known composer, is responsible for the score. There are thirty numbers, all of which have been staged by Ned Wayburn. The scenery is from the immense studios of the New York Hippodrome.

CRIPPEN MATCHED WITS WITH LAWYER

Doctor on Trial For His Life Spends Day in Duel With Lawyer For Crown—Tells Story of Quartermaster on Board the Montrose, Who Was Willing to Conceal Him and Let Him Free at Montreal

London, Oct. 22.—Dr. Hawley H. Crippen, accused of the murder of his wife, known to the theatrical profession as Belle Elmore, matched wits yesterday with Richard Muir, one of the cleverest criminal lawyers in England. Crippen was under cross-examination for practically four hours. Throughout that time he was the personification of coolness.

The defence, as soon as Dr. Crippen left the stand, began examining various medical experts, each of whom swore, without qualification, that the alleged scar found on the piece of flesh in the Crippen home was not a scar, swearing that under no condition could a gland form on a scar, yet such a growth had formed on the alleged scar.

Barrister A. A. Tobin immediately thereafter began addressing the jury for the prisoner. King's Counsel Muir will address the jury to-day, and Lord Alverstone, the lord chief justice, who is presiding at the trial, will charge the jury immediately after lunch.

When Crippen was escorted to the witness-box yesterday, he rested his elbows on the railing, clasped his hands and looked enquiringly about the court room. Mr. Muir, losing no time in preliminaries, asked Crippen whether he had seen or heard anything of his wife since early on the morning of Feb. 1. He replied in the negative, and in answer to further questions that were rapidly fired at him said that he could not prove any fact showing that she left the house alive. He supposed that she had gone to Bruce Miller, her professional acquaintance who lives in Chicago.

Mr. Muir suggested that if the witness's wife were alive she would call upon her sisters in the United States. Crippen's reply to this was that if his wife had gone with another man she would not have "the face" to go to her sisters. This opinion of the witness drew forth a chorus of "ohs" from the spectators.

"When she left you thought how to cover up the scandal?"

"Yes."

"It involved you in a great deal of trouble?"

"That has been already acknowledged."

Asked why he wished to conceal his wife's disappearance Crippen said he didn't wish to let his friends think he had been ill-treating her, and to avoid a scandal.

"When you were living in open adultery with Miss Leneve?" said Mr. Muir.

"It was not so open as you seem to imagine."

"You had treated your wife well, given her money, furs and jewels for four years, and ceased to cohabit; then she treated you with ingratitude, and left you. Why seek to cover up the scandal about such a wife?"

"I cannot explain in any other way than I have done," said Crippen.

As to the discovery of the buried flesh, he said: "My wife and I were often away from home on visit to other parts of England and on the continent, and it would have been possible for someone else to have placed the flesh where it was found. I must admit, though, that this seems very improbable. I have not the slightest idea how came the flesh there, and I have no theory that might account for its presence. The thing is as great a mystery to me as it is to the police."

Counsel next led Crippen to his departure from London. The prisoner said that he made up his mind to go away on the 9th of July, the morning Inspector Dew called. He thought there was sufficient against him, the result of which he might have to be in jail for months, till his wife was found.

"What crime did you anticipate you would be kept in prison for?"

"I do not understand the law enough to say. I have heard of people being arrested of suspicion of being concerned in the disappearance of other people. I thought I should be held until the woman was found if I could not produce the woman. Dew told me I should be in serious trouble. I also knew it would put Miss Leneve in a serious position, and the only idea I could think of was to take her out of the country."

Referring to the card upon which Crippen had written his intention to jump overboard, and which Crippen stated was part of the plot to deceive the police at Quebec, counsel asked Crippen whose idea it was that that should be written. Dr. Crippen said the quartermaster suggested to him that he must leave behind something to show that he was going to jump overboard.

Crippen said the quartermaster spoke to him on July 30 just behind the captain's cabin, and in the afternoon he handed him a letter in the wheelhouse in which he said that the captain knew who he (Crippen) was, and that the police would arrest him at Quebec. If he lived, however, he would stow him away and smuggle him ashore at Montreal. The letter was not signed and the quartermaster took it away from him directly he had read it. "He seemed afraid to trust me," added Crippen.

During the four hours on the stand Crippen did not lose his composure, but he was deathly pale when he left the chair and appeared on the point of collapse.

Addressing the jury Mr. Tobin reviewed the evidence at length, contending that in view of the conflicting testimony of experts, it was impossible for the jury to find a verdict of guilty.

Regarding the non-appearance in court of the quartermaster of the steamship Montrose, counsel said that the man would be rendered liable to a charge of impeding the police if he corroborated the testimony of Crippen, to the effect that the quartermaster and he had arranged for the pretended suicide of the doctor.

BANK MANAGER GETS THREE YEARS

Brockville, Oct. 22.—Robert Cughan the former manager of the Farmers Bank at Athens, goes to the Kingston Penitentiary for three years, the sentence being imposed upon him by Judge McDonald at the conclusion of his trial on a charge of stealing bank funds aggregating $900.

Cughan acknowledge his indebtedness to the amount of over $200, covered by notes and guarantee orders which he has made good since the prosecution was instituted. The evidence showed that Cughan had taken sums of money from the bank from time to time, in addition to falsifying statements. Melvyn Forrest, Cughan's teller, who was also involved, turned King's evidence. He is now awaiting sentence.

Inspector J. G. Fitzgibbon was also a leading witness. He went to Athens two days after Cughan had dismissed Forrest. He found that the cash, according to the books was $1,116.25 short. Cughan had admitted to him that he took various amounts. The amount that he demanded in restitution was about $1,400, of which Forrest said he would be willing to pay $500. Cughan refused to pay $900, saying he did not owe it, but was willing to pay the small sums.

Cughan was sworn on his own behalf and saddled the thefts on Forrest, who, in turn, blamed Cughan.

A charge of falsifying the books against Cughan still remains.

"That if, in the opinion of the Minister, the said petroleum or its products, or any portion thereof, should at any time, during this demise, be required for the use of His Majesty's Canadian navy, the Minister shall have the right of pre-emption of all crude petroleum oil or its products, gotten or won under this demise, for such use as aforesaid, the price to be agreed on between the Minister and the lessee, or in case of difference, to be fixed by the Exchequer Court of Canada."

A BANQUET AT THE SOO

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 22.—Over two hundred guests sat down in the International Hotel here at ten o'clock last night to perhaps the most elaborate banquet given in Ontario outside the capital cities. The occasion was in compliment to William Charles Franz, the general manager of the Lake Superior Corporation industries.

The particular moment selected was the practical completion of four great new industries at an outlay of close on seven million dollars. A party representing English bondholders in the corporation, have been traveling in the west, and their return coincides with the banquet. The mayors of Sault Ste. Marie and Steelton, which united in tendering the banquet to Mr. Franz, presided jointly, and Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, represented the Dominion and Hon. Frank Cochrane and Hon. W. J. Hanna, the Provincial Governments.

Arthur W. Grenfell, chairman of the Canadian agency of London, Eng., which has been instrumental in bringing fifty million dollars of capital to Canada during the past year, was one of the chief guests. All the leading citizens were present.

Hon. Mackenzie King brought the very hearty congratulations of Sir Wilfrid Laurier. He desired to emphasize the important and significant place the Soo industries held in the nations' economy.

Mr. King enlarged on the importance of the steel industry to every branch of commerce, and he traced some of these ramifications.

NIOBE NOW ON THE JOB GIVEN WELCOME AT HALIFAX

Premier Unable to be Present, But Hon. Mr. Brodeur and Deputy Minister Desbarats Officially Receive the Ship on Behalf of the Dominion.

Halifax, Oct. 22.—The Canadian cruiser Niobe, fresh from England, came up to the mouth of the harbor yesterday morning and was met there by Admiral Kingsmill, who went on board and hoisted his flag. The cruiser remained off the harbor until noon, when she came in, and, proceeding up to the dockyard, cast anchor about one o'clock. Soon after, Mayor Chisholm and the civic reception committee went aboard, and presented the following address:

To the Captain, Officers and Crew of His Majesty's Canadian ship Niobe:

I desire on behalf of the reception committee appointed for the purpose, and on behalf of the citizens of Halifax, to say a word of welcome to you, Captain Macdonald, and to your officers and seamen on your arrival in Halifax.

Ever since the memorable arrival here on June 21, 1749, of His Majesty's sloop of war, Sphinx, with Hon. Edward Cornwallis, bringing his commission as captain-general, and governor-in-chief of the Province of Nova Scotia, Halifax has had intimate and agreeable relations with the naval service of the Empire.

When it was determined by His Majesty's Government to establish a permanent settlement on the shores of the harbor, special encouragement was given through advertisement in The London Gazette to officers and privates, then lately discharged from the navy, to settle in these parts. As early as 1759, a dockyard was established in Halifax.

During the wars between Great Britain and France for mastery on this continent, and later, during the war between Great Britain and the United States, Halifax was the principal depot of the British fleets in North America.

In succeeding years and until recently it was the principal station of the sea forces of Great Britain in North Atlantic waters. It is fitting, therefore, that the Niobe, the first ship of the permanent naval force of Canada, should signalize her arrival in the Dominion by coming to Halifax.

We hope to see you often in this port. On behalf of the citizens, I bid you welcome. We feel that you will always maintain the noble traditions of your service, and we wish you all every prosperity and success.

On behalf of the committee and citizens,

(Signed) J. A. Chisholm,
Chairman of Committee and Mayor of Halifax.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who had been invited by Mayor Chisholm, chairman of the celebration committee, to visit Halifax, sent a telegram of regret and of good wishes.

Immediately after the visit of the civic committee, Hon. Mr. Brodeur, Minister of Marine, and Mr. Desbarats, Deputy Minister, went aboard and were received with a salute of seventeen guns.

About three o'clock Governor MacGregor, Gen. Drury and others went aboard, when addresses were presented and replied to. At this time, also, the silver plate, given to the ship by the Province of Nova Scotia, was formally presented by the governor.

CRIPPEN GUILTY

Prisoner Was Found Guilty of Murdering His Wife—Will Be Hanged---Received His Sentence With Indifference

November 14 or 15 Will Be the Date of the Hanging

SPECIAL CABLE.

London, Oct. 22nd.—Dr. H. H. Crippen was found guilty of murder by the jury and was at once sentenced by Lord Alverstone to be hanged.

The jury, after being addressed by the judge, retired at 2.42 o'clock and returned shortly after with a verdict of guilty of murder.

The court room was crowded when the case was resumed this morning.

Dr. Crippen was as usual carefully dressed and to all outward appearances unworried by the seriousness of his position.

A sensation was created in the court when the judge first asked the jury if they had seen yesterday's Evening News directed that an order be issued for the attendance before his lordship in the course of the day of the editor of the Evening News.

His lordship, addressing Mr. Muir, chief counsel for the prosecution, said he had received a great many communications, some of them entitled to respect.

LATER. THE DEATH DAY.

London, Oct. 22nd.—Crippen was sentenced to death by hanging either on Nov. 14 or 15. The jury was out only a short time. Crippen received the result stoically.

Motorman Killed by Bandit.

St. Paul, Oct. 22.—J. F. Alexander, motorman, was shot through the heart and killed Thursday night by a bandit who tried to hold up a Grand avenue street car on the outskirts of the city. SUES FOR MILLION DOLLARS

Victoria, B.C., Oct. 22.—James Dunsmuir has brought suit against William Mackenzie of Toronto on claims which will aggregate in the neighborhood of a million dollars.

The trouble arises out of the recent sale of the Dunsmuir Coal properties to William Mackenzie. It appears that the transaction was completed July 17 last, on which the price fixed, $11,000,000 was paid, and the property duly handed over. All the expenses in connection with the running of the properties had then been met to June 1, and it was agreed, as a matter of convenience, that the running expenses from June 1 to June 17 should be paid by the owner, William Mackenzie, who, to recoup himself, was to retain a sufficient amount out of moneys due to the company from various parties. It is out of this arrangement that the present lawsuit has arisen.

According to the allegations made in the suit, the defendant, since taking over the property, has persistently refused to make any accounting and has moreover retained a good deal which does not belong to him. It is alleged that on June 17 there was due to the Wellington Colliery Co., which is in this connection another name for James Dunsmuir, $500,000 for coal shipped and sold in the ordinary way of business. There were also 25,000 tons of coal ready to be mined at Extension and Cumberland and 15,000 tons of coke at Union Bay. In addition there were upwards of 40,000 tons of coal, worth upwards of $150,000, which had been sold to the C.P.R. and delivered to the stock pile at the City of Vancouver, the understanding being that the C.P.R. was to pay for it from time to time as they used it.

The Lieutenant-Governors of the Canadian provinces will be invited to attend the annual meeting of the Road Builders' Association at Indianapolis, Dec. 6.

The body of an unknown women, apparently nearly sixty years old, was found yesterday in the Niagara river below the falls. A portion of the body is missing from the hips down.

Arrangements have been made by which 500 to 600 delegates, representing the organized farmers of Canada, will meet members of the Dominion Government, and of Parliament, at Ottawa, to present their claims on the tariff question and on other matters in which the agricultural classes are interested.

HOWITT BY ACCLAMATION

Guelph, Oct. 22.—J. Ranson Howitt was at one o'clock yesterday afternoon declared elected by acclamation member for South Wellington for the Ontario Legislature.

Joel Harvin Briggs of Toronto attempted to carry out his threat to contest the riding. He did succeed in getting two citizen of Guelph to sign his nomination papers, but when he presented the document to Returning Officer Col. W. W. White, his nominees were not present, and so the returning officer refused to accept his nomination.

Mr. Howitt and Thomas McCarry of Renfrew both addressed a meeting in the court house yesterday afternoon. The new member expressed his pride at being elected a member of the Whitney administration, pointing out how the present Government had kept every promise it had made to the people in the beginning, telling of its prison reform work, the smashing of the school book ring and its efforts along the lines of securing good roads and cheap power for the province.

Mr. Briggs said a few words, but declared he would not make a real address until the meeting had been opened with prayer by some minister of the Gospel. The audience treated Mr. Briggs in a joking way, and he left the meeting an irate man.

WHY THERE WAS NO INTERVENTION

Paris, Oct. 22.—The Temps publishes an interview with Senor Teixeira de Sousa, former Premier of Portugal, who says that while the king and his cabinet were aware of revolutionary feelings, nevertheless the ministers voted that if a rising occurred they would not ask for foreign intervention, because that would be humiliating, and also because they were convinced that any power intervening in Portugal would decline to retire.

Toronto, Oct. 22.—To the press last night Lieutenant-Governor Gibson stated that, acting on a telegraphic request from St. Louis, sent to himself and the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, he had communicated with Sir James Whitney, who had caused telegraphic instructions to be sent to all police officers and provincial officials in Northern Ontario to have a search instituted for the missing aeronauts.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 22.—Relief expeditions to search for the pilots and aids of the three missing balloons, Azura, Dusseldorf II., and America II., which started in the international race here Monday, and who apparently have been lost, will be started from Toronto, Ont., Sunday if no news is received from them before that time.

This announcement was made last night by officials of the Aero Club of St. Louis.

The situation in reference to the unreported balloons assumed a serious aspect last night. It is believed that the men had landed somewhere in the wilds of Canada, where they may be victims of starvation before succour can reach them.

All of the balloons should have been down and reported by Wednesday night, according to aero club officers.

It was pointed out that the greatest danger is anticipated in the case of a balloon having descended in Georgian Bay, which contains more than 30,000

NEW CITY HALL FOR WINNIPEG

Winnipeg, Oct. 22.—The germ of agitation for a new City Hall is still working here. The proposal is for a structure involving an expenditure of $1,000,000 and an eventual outlay of $2,000,000, and is to come before the City Council at the next meeting.

A movement is on foot to change the present system of giving discounts to taxpayers. The claim is that through this method large sums are wasted annually and that the burden is unfairly placed.

THE TIDE TURNING

Not long ago the Ontario young man thought that unless he went across the line to the land of Old Glory he could never fulfil the high destiny which nature held for him. Its changing now. Not only in the west has the American made his appearance, but the young man with other motives than successful agriculture has made his appearance in Ontario. No less than three of the best of Maine's life blood are in Peterborough, arriving very recently. One holds a responsible position. He likes the country so well, the air, the environment that he wrote to his friends and they arrived on Thursday to come here to make good citizens. "Yes, the tide is turning and the Canadian can truly say, "We are the people."

MARRIAGE

Omitting sentimental pyrotechnics, and getting right down to practical, day in and day out, three meals and millinery existence, marriage is not an unselfish relationship. A man may protest, and he may believe, if he is very young and ardent, that he is "taking this woman" to work for and cherish, and make happy; but 'way down among his instincts, if he troubles to look, he will find a conviction that this particular woman will make a good mate for him, and honor him among his fellows; that she will cater to his patriarchal aspirations in providing a family; and through the years will continue to find through the years sweet satisfaction for his soul and body hunger. The conviction may be unconscious, but it is there. If when a lover woos his lady-love she were to answer: "Yes, I will marry you if you will agree to a platonic marriage; no children, no love-making; rooms in a hotel; and an allowance," an old dodo might accept the terms, but any real man out of the wheelchair stage would promptly take to his heels.—The Bellmaster.

We believe in marriage. Its the proper way to live. We believe in large families. We know that it is not good for man to live alone. Who can darn socks like a wife? Who can tell you whether your ears are clean or your hair brushed right behind but your wife? But far above the questions of socks, ears and hair is the close and peculiar relationship of the truly and lovingly wedded. The mere words of a minister do not constitute a marriage. They too often merely grant legal satisfaction of lust. The lust satisfied, the fires burnt, there is nothing but ashes—then too often divorce. But what happier state than the well wedded life. One in hope, one in fear, one in achievement, in defeat, in sunshine and in shade. Seeing them we are pensive and walk away filled with the bitterest envy.

THE PRESS

Last night Rev Canon Davidson thanked the press for their aid in the matter of publicity concerning the chimes. We acknowledge our power. We thank Canon Davidson for his kind words. The press is a mighty factor in the land. It makes and unmakes men and nations. Let the press of the world cease publication for one week the world would be lost. The press is the leading power of the land. However the press is not conceited.

REASONS AGAINST RECIPROCITY

The following very cogent reasons why Canada should not enter into a reciprocity treaty with the United States at the present time, are submitted by the Toronto News, and will repay careful perusal:—

1. The Dominion is abundantly prosperous. The farming community thrives and the workingmen in the industrial centres enjoy constant work at good wages. Why not let well enough alone?

2. The United States tariff against Canadian goods is far higher that the Canadian tariff on United States goods. As a result seven million Canadians spend more than $200,000,000 in the republic for every $100,000,000 that 90,000,000 Americans spend in the Dominion. Every man, woman and child in Canada sends 40 times as much money across the boundary line as the individual American sends here. Washington should lower its own tariff to a level with ours before asking us to negotiate for customs concessions.

3. Under the present conditions American capital is pouring into this country and establishing Canadian branches of great United States industries. If the tariff is reduced materially this influx of money and factories will cease, Canadian raw materials will cross the line to be manufactured by United States workmen into finished articles of commerce for the Canadian market. Why take the work away from Canadian workmen?

4. Canada's industries could not stand against a flood of imports from the heavily capitalized and specializing trusts of the republic.

5. Reciprocity would have the effect of turning over much trade and traffic to United States railways and ports. American railways would gain at the expense of Canadian. American steamship Companies at the expense of Canadian. Boston and Portland at the expense of Halifax and St. John.

ONTARIO DOES IT. BUILT THE TRANSMISSION LINE WITHIN THE ESTIMATE

Speaking at Toronto a while ago, Mr. R. L. Borden said:—

"Sir James Whitney and his colleagues have constructed their power transmission system at a cost less than the original estimates, and have improved upon the original plans."

Ontario to-day is celebrating the accomplishment which carries the might of Niagara to an electrical switchboard in Berlin. The occasion is opportune to recall how economically the men employed by the Ontario Government have done their work. An old fallacy has been exposed again. It is not true that work done for any Government must be accomplished at an extravagant price. It is not true that preliminary estimates are always exceeded by actual expenditure.

When reference is made in Parliament or in the press to the expenditure on the National Transcontinental Railway some one is sure to reply that an excess over estimates was to be expected. The estimate of $50,000,000 will be exceeded by $150,000,000 rather a disproportionate rate. But Ottawa considers the construction of public works as a political activity. Contractors and middlemen help the party and then help themselves. If patronage and its evils were abolished there might be a closer relationship between estimates and expenditure. If it is possible for the Ontario Government to build a transmission line within the original estimate, it should not be impossible for the Federal Administration to bring estimates and expenditures at least within hailing distance of each other.

OUR NAVY

Well, we are safe. The Canadian flag floats at the masthead of the Niobe and Nova Scotia has presented the ship with a costly set of silverware. Hurrah. Three cheers for the tea pot navy, armed with a silver service.

LIFE'S STORM

New York, Oct. 21.—After passing through the very heart of the Cuban hurricane, when waves were lashed mountain high and the wind blew nearly 100 miles an hour, and when passengers prayed for safety and sang hymns for deliverance, the steamship Osmus, from New Orleans, arrived here to-day, four days overdue.

It was during the terrible Friday storm that the momentary possibility of death caused religious fervor to spread through the ship. Men and women knelt for hours and prayed that the vessel might be guided safely into port. The captain feared that some of the steerage passengers would go insane from fright and Mrs Cooper volunteered to pacify them. As she sang hymn after hymn, men and women crouched about her, touching her hands and kissing the hem of her garments. They looked upon her as the angel of deliverance, and when the ship was safely through the storm they pressed their thanks upon her with tears of joy.

We are very brave when we enjoy fine health, profanity rolls from the lips of the profane man a picturesque stream. But let the doctor come and shake his head and say "Send for his friends." The profane man whispers "Send for a parson." The ribald jester turns to a prayerful whisper, "Lord have mercy." The society woman whose only thought is that other function, the dance, the party. Let sickness come and she too looks upward with entreaty. We are very proud until He stirs the waters or sends sickness or pain or anguish. Then don't we hike to our bedside and lay in sackcloth and ashes.

THE LIVE WIRE

When fifty or sixty men and women in an east-bound King street car Thursday night at 6 o'clock found themselves cut off from dinner by a broken trolley wire near the Don, an ingenious conductor soon got them over the difficulty.

The break in the wire made it impossible for any cars to proceed eastward for nearly half an hour. Hundreds were leaving the long string of cars to walk miles to their homes. Figuring out the matter to himself, the conductor found that by pushing the car and trailer about a block, it would connect with a new line of current in the wire and could proceed to the beaches.

Every man in the car jumped at the suggestion, and getting a grip on the sides or rear, pushed the train several hundred feet and into the zone of the new current. The scheme worked successfully, and the rest of the trip was completed in record time. —News, Toronto.

Many a conductor would have simply taken a bigger chew and swore a little more than usual and let it go at that. This fellow was evidently a minute man. He was resourceful. In St. Catharines the other day when a church was crowded with 800 people smoke was noticed curling up behind the organ. "Fire!" It was the shout of a fool. "Sit down, there's no danger." It was the voice of a minute man, and immediately after the choir leader had the choir singing. Another minute man had got busy. A live electric wire had caused a smudge. Minute men are men who cannot be held by tradition or stopped by scoffs. They know no beaten path; if the new way is the best way, they take the new way. Yo, heave ho! Guided by the conductor the car was pushed where there was a live wire. A simple thing. Ye gods its the simple things that counts. Get next to the live wire, gentlemen. Are you stalled? Move up and on.

BRITISH JUSTICE

This morning the Review received a laconic flash: London—"Jury finds Crippen GUILTY of murder."

This will make our Yankee friends sit up and take notice. To keep a murderer, real or alleged, in the pen for four or five years is not at all uncommon. That is if he has the money. Yes, and if he has very much money he isn't usually a murderer at all, he is insane and therefore not accountable. He is insane and goes to an asylum. We have our Gunner Meir, who was declared insane and went to an asylum. This is an isolated case in Canada. There are hundreds of cases in Uncle Samuel's Land, where murderers are being held as insane, or on appeals, or for new trials. The laws of Old England ring pretty true, and there's not much flap doodle about the execution of them, either.

SHAKE

Shake, Carpenter. You are on the right track. Rev. Charles Carpenter, curate of St. John's church, has a room at his residence, 161 Antrim street, where from 7 till 10 week night evenings young men can spend a pleasant hour in games, in reading or in writing that letter too often delayed. Every young man is welcome. Is there a patch on his pants he is just as welcome as if he wears broadcloth. Indeed, he may be more welcome. Rev. Mr. Carpenter says that his idea is to provide, so far as he is able, a place where the young man can spend a happy hour. Of course there is no admission. If a man has a nickel he is welcome at the bar." If he hasn't a nickel or a friend, the bar doesn't want him. The bar is liable to give a fellow a big head. The Guild of Goodfellowship, of which Mr. Carpenter is organizer, and in which he is an ardent worker, gives no dark brown taste in the mouth. This room at 161 Antrim street is a prophecy. It is a prophecy of the time when churches will stand for more than sermons and prayer meetings, of Bands and Ladies' Aids. It breathes all the time when men can go to a good room and listen to good stories, read good literature and enjoy good games. The next morning looks good to a fellow who spends his time in a place like 161 Antrim street.

The South Alberta Courier comes to hand. It is dressed in fine paper and is published in Lethbridge. We were pleased to see it. It bespeaks prosperity and a future. Apart from an article "Dad," which the writer penned about 9 years ago, and has been floating aroud the country ever since, the matter was new and spicy. You can't stop the west. They cannot be kept back. Optimism, buoyancy, hope and grit go hand in hand. May the Courier carry good tidings, may it grow and may it make few bad debts. Here's to the Courier of Lethbridge, Alta., and we drink its health in water.

APPLES SCARCE THIS YEAR

Not in many years have apples been as scarce as they are this fall.

No authority has as yet solved the question as to why there are fewer apples this year. Some say there is a decrease in the average grown. Others say "off season" or some other equally plausible excuse.

While there are probably fewer apples yet the quality in many districts is vastly improved. This statement is made by the Director of Fruit Experiment Stations P. W. Hodgetts, who is also secretary of the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition. Mr. Hodgetts assures us that there will be a fine lot of fruit at this year's exhibition. Some counties alone will send as many as 290 barrels of apples.

It is rather surprising that in seven year this exhibition has become known throughout America as the one place where a person can see perfect fruit in abundance. The Railway Companies have recognized its importance by granting single fare rates to Toronto from all stations east of Port Arthur.

The dates of this years' Exhibition are from November 15th to 19th. Thousands of persons from all points in Eastern Canada visit Toronto each year to see the best Canada produces in fruit flowers and honey.

A Gentleman From Mississippi

By THOMAS A. WISE

Novelized From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THOMAS A. WISE

"Is this straight talk?" exclaimed Norton.

"Take it or leave it," retorted Bud.

The Mississippian leaned with his hands on the desk.

"Well, Haines, if you're like the rest and are really interested in Altacoola, I don't know that you'd have to go very far to talk."

"You know something of Altacoola lands, then, Norton?" said Robert, tingling with suppressed excitement. He felt that he was getting close to real facts in a colossal "deal."

Norton was sure of his man now.

"Well, I am in touch with some people who've got lands and options on more. I might fix it for you to come in," he whispered.

Haines shook his head.

"You know I haven't much money, Norton. All I could put in would be my influence. Who are these people? Are they cheap little local folks or are they real people here who have some power and can do something that is worth while?"

"Do I look like I'd fool with cheap skates, Haines? They're the real people. I think, Haines, that either Senator Stevens or Senator Peabody would advise you that you are safe."

"Ah! Then Stevens and Peabody are the ones. They'll make it Altacoola, then sell to the government at a big advance and move to 'Easy street.'"

"That's right," agreed Norton.

Bud Haines straightened abruptly. The expression on his face gave Norton a sudden chill—made him tremble.

"Now I've got you," cried the secretary. "You've given yourself dead away. I've known all along you're a d——d thief, Norton, and you've just proved it to me yourself."

"What do you mean?" Norton was clinching his fist. Words like that mean fight to a southerner!"

"I mean that before Senator Langdon goes one step further in this matter he shall know that his colleagues and you are thieves, Mr. Norton, trying to use him for a cat's paw to steal for them from the government. I suspected something this morning when Gulf City tried to bribe me and a visitor from there gave me what turns out to be a pretty good tip."

"So that was your dirty trick," exclaimed the congressman as he regained his composure.

"Set a make believe thief to catch a real one," laughed the secretary. "Very good trick, I think."

"I'll make you pay for that!" cried Norton, shaking his fist.

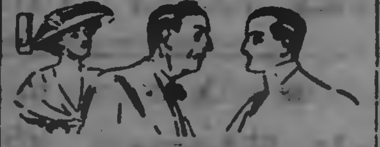
"All right. Send in your bill any old time," laughed Haines. "The sooner the better. Meantime I'm going to talk to Langdon."

He had started for the door when Carolina Langdon re-entered, followed by her brother Randolph.

"Wait a minute," said Norton, with unexpected quietness. "I wouldn't do what you're about to do, Mr. Haines."

"Of course you wouldn't," sneered Haines.

"I mean that you will be making a mistake, Haines, to tell the senator what you have learned," rejoined the southerner, struggling to keep calm at this critical moment when all was at stake. He realized, further, that now was the time to put Haines out of the way—if that were possible. "A mistake, Mr. Haines," he continued, "because, you see, you don't know as much as you think. I wouldn't talk to Langdon if I were you. It will only embarrass him and do no good, because Langdon's money is in this scheme, too, and Langdon's in the same boat with the rest of us."



"You can't refuse to believe Miss Langdon."

Haines stopped short at this astounding charge against his chief.

"Norton, you lie! I'll believe it of Langdon when he tells me so; not otherwise."

Norton turned to Randolph.

"Perhaps you'll believe Mr. Langdon's son, Mr. Haines?"

Randolph Langdon stepped forward.

"It's true, Haines," he said; "my father's money is in Altacoola lands."

Haines looked him up and down, with a sneer.

"Your money may be," he said. "I don't think you're a bit too good for it, but your father is a different kind."

Carolina Langdon stood at the back of the room, nervously awaiting the moment when, she knew, she would be forced into the unpleasant discussion.

"I reckon you can't refuse to believe Miss Langdon," drawled Norton, with aggravated deliberation.

"Of course, [illegible] believe it if Miss Langdon says it's so."

The congressman turned toward Carolina as he spoke and fixed on her a tense look which spelled as plainly as though spoken, "It's all in your hands, my fortune—yours."

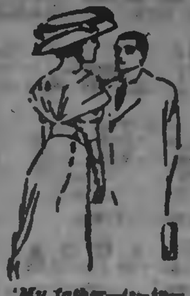
She slowly drew across the room. Haines could hardly conceal the tumult of his mind. The world seemed suddenly snatched from around him, leaving her figure alone before him. Would she affirm what Norton and Randolph had said? He must believe her. But surely it was impossible that she—

Carolina played for time. She feared the making of a false move.

"I don't understand?" she said inquiringly to Norton.

He calmly began an elaborate explanation.

"Miss Langdon, this secretary has discovered that there is a certain perfectly legitimate venture in Altacoola lands being carried on through certain influential people we know and by me. The blood of the young reformer is boiling. He is going straight to your father with the facts. I have tried to explain to him how it will needlessly embarrass the senator and spoil his own future. He won't believe me. He won't believe your brother. Perhaps you can make it clear."



"My father—is—in—the deal."

At last Carolina nerved herself to speak.

"You had better not go to my father, Mr. Haines. It will do no good. He—is—in—the deal! You must believe me when I tell you so."

The girl took her eyes from the secretary. He was plainly suffering.

CHAPTER XV.

CAROLINA LANGDON'S ADVICE.

"LET me speak to Mr. Haines alone," said Carolina to Norton and her brother.

Norton turned a triumphant grin at Randolph as he beckoned him out and whispered: "Leave him to her. It's all right. That New York dude has been riding for a fall—he's going to get it now."

"I am sorry, so sorry this should have occurred, Mr. Haines," Carolina said gently.

The secretary looked up slowly, his face drawn. It was an effort for him to speak.

"I can't understand it," he said. "I mightn't have thought so much of this a month ago, but I have come to love the senator almost as a son, and to think that he could be like the rest of that bunch is awful."

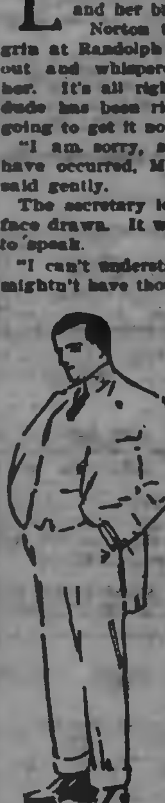
"You are too much of an idealist, Mr. Haines," said the girl.

"And you! What do you think of it?" he demanded.

The girl's glance wavered.

"Don't idealize me too much, either, Mr. Haines. I didn't think it was much. Perhaps I don't understand business any too well."

"But you see, now?" insisted the man.



"I can't understand it," he said.

The girl looked up at him sorrowfully.

"Yes; I see at least that you and father can never work together now."

Haines nodded affirmatively.

"I suppose so. I'm thinking of that. How am I to leave him? We've been so close. I've been so fond of him. I don't know how I could tell him."

In girlish, friendly fashion Carolina rested her hand on his arm.

"Won't you take my advice, Mr. Haines? Go away without seeing him. Just leave a note to say you have gone. He will understand. It will be easier for both that way—easier for him, easier for you." She paused, looking at him appealingly as she ended very softly, "And easier for me, Mr. Haines."

He looked at her thoughtfully.

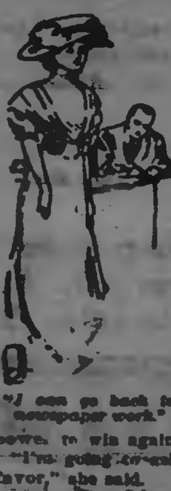
"Easier for you?" he said. "Very well, I'll do it that way."

The secretary stepped slowly to his desk, sat down and started to write the note. Carolina watched him curiously.

"What will you do," she asked, "now that you have given up this position?"

"Oh, I can always go back to newspaper work," he answered without looking up.

The term "newspaper work" gave Carolina a shock. She had forgotten that this man had been a reporter. Here he was turned loose with the knowledge of this "deal," which she knew would be popular material for newspapers to print. She must gain still another point, and she felt that she had enough power to win against him.



"I can go back to newspaper work."

"I'm going to ask you still another favor," she said.

Bud returned her look with a bitter smile.

"What is it?"

"You have learned about this—this land matter and"—

"Oh, yes! I can guess. You want me to keep quiet about it—to hush it up," a shade of scorn in his tone.

"I only asked this so that you would not disgrace me," she pleaded.

Disillusioned at last, robbed of his lifelong optimism, shorn of his ideals, even his love—for he began to despise this beautiful, misguided woman—Haines sat broken in spirit, thinking how quickly the brightness of life fades to blackness.

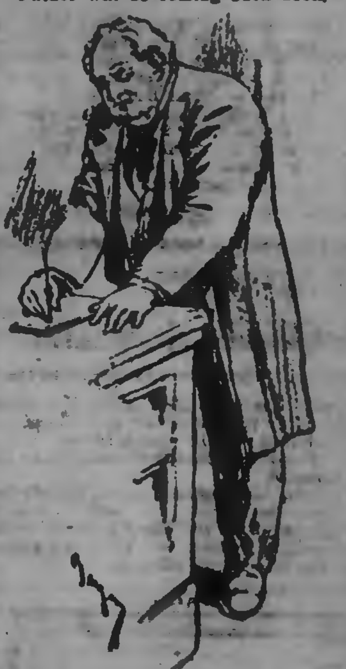
"Very well," he said sadly. "I suppose you are innocent. I'll save you. If they're all—your father, too—crooked, why shouldn't I be crooked? All right; I won't say anything."

"I only ask you not to disgrace me," pleaded the girl. "You will promise that?"

"It's a promise."

She sighed in relief.

"Father will be coming back soon," she said. "You won't want to see him."



"Don't forget there's some money coming to you."

Haines rose.

"No, I won't want to see him. Give him this note. I'll have to come back while he's away to clear up some things. Goodby."

Haines bowed and hurried from the room through a side doorway just as Senator Langdon came in through the main entrance.

"Bud, Bud," he called, but the secretary did not halt.

Carolina Langdon stood with Haines' note in her hand, wondering at what she had done. She regretted having become entangled in the wars of men in Washington. She saw that the man's game was played too strongly, too furiously fast, for most women to enter, yet she rejoiced that the coveted fortune had not been lost. She was sorry that her means of saving it had not been less questionable. She saw that ambition and honesty, ambition and truth, with difficulty follow the same path.

Senator Langdon's face was unusually grave as he came to greet Carolina. Lines showed in his face that the daughter had never noticed before.

She saw Norton and Randolph, who had followed him, exchange significant glances—jubilant glances—and wondered what new development they had maneuvered.

"He's gone without a word," the senator sighed. "Well, perhaps that's best."

"He left a note for you," said the girl, handing him the letter which Haines had given her.

Langdon opened it and read:

I am giving up the job. You can understand why. The least said about it between us the better. I am sorry. That's all.
BUD HAINES.

Slowly he read the letter a second time.

"And he was making the best kind of a secretary, I thought."

Divining that something against Haines had been told her father, Carolina glanced at Norton.

"I told your father how we caught Mr. Haines," he spoke as an answer to her.

The girl was startled. She had not thought that things would go this far.

"I told him how Haines wanted to get in some land speculation scheme with Altacoola, how we tricked him and caught him with the goods when he made the proposition to me and how we forced him to confess."

"You told father that?" gasped Carolina.

Norton nodded.

"I don't understand it," said Langdon. "To think that he was that kind!"

Son Randolph now took his turn in the case against the secretary.

"We were both here, father. I heard him—Carolina heard him," he said. "Didn't you, Carolina?"

"Yes," said the girl weakly. "I was here." Then she turned abruptly. "I must go," she said, "must go right away. Mrs. Holcomb is waiting for me."

The senator turned to his desk beat and discouraged.

"I suppose I should have taken a secretary who was a southerner and a gentleman. Well, Randolph, you'll have to act now. Take this letter"—

The young man sat down and took the following from the senator's dictation:

Mr. Haines.

Sir—I quite understand your feelings and the impossibility of your continuing in my employ. The least said about it the better. I am sorry too.
WILLIAM H. LANGDON.

"You boys run away. I've got to think," said the senator.

When the pair had gone the old man drew the letter to him, and below his signature he added a postscript, "Don't forget there's some money coming to you."

Walking across the room to leave, he sighed:

"He was making the best kind of a secretary."

CHAPTER XVI.

A RESCUE IN THE NICK OF TIME.

LATER in that never to be forgotten day Bud Haines ventured back to his desk in the committee room, after first ascertaining that Senator Langdon would not return. Some of the senator's papers must be straightened out, and he wanted personal documents of his own.

The secretary regretfully, sorrowfully performed these final duties and found himself stopping at various intervals to try to explain to himself how he had been deceived in both the Langdons, father and daughter. He had to give up both problems. To him neither was explainable. "I've known enough senators to know that I'd never meet an honest one," he muttered. "But as to women—well, there's too much carefully selected wisdom in their innocence to suit me."

This cynic, new born from the shell of the chronic idealist that was, suddenly was disturbed in his ruminations by a sound at the door. Looking up, he saw Hope Georgia Langdon standing shyly, embarrassed, in the main entrance.

"Mr. Haines," she said timidly.

Bud jumped to his feet.

To be continued.

CAUSE AND CURE OF RHEUMATISM
Due to Impurities in the Blood—Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

The most noticeable and immediate result of rheumatism is a marked thinning of the blood, and in no disease does it develop more rapidly. Not only does the blood become weak but it is soon filled with impurities, which the different organs of the body have been unable to throw off. One of the most harmful of these impurities is uric acid, which is formed from the waste products of the body. In health it is readily passed off by the kidneys with the help of oxygen from the red corpuscles of the blood. Without oxygen the kidneys are unable to rid the system of this acid and it is retained in the blood and distributed to all parts of the body. The weak back, pains across the kidneys and thin, scanty, highly colored secretions, which follow, show that the acid is already in the blood and often leads the sufferer to think he has kidney trouble. If the disease is not driven out of the blood, rheumatism can never be cured, and the sufferer will always be subject to attacks, whenever exposed to damp or cold. With each returning attack the pain becomes more severe and complications often arise making necessary the use of habit forming drugs to relieve pain.

It is readily seen that the only way to cure rheumatism is through the blood. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills afford such a treatment as they contain all the elements necessary to build up and purify the blood. They increase the oxygen carrying capacity, enabling the kidneys to pass the uric acid from the body and the other organs to do their work. Thus rheumatism is reached at its root and permanently cured. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are absolutely free from all habit-forming drugs, and are not an experiment as the following case will show:—Mr. W. Stodley Lewis, Pilot Mound, Man. says:—"I am a firm believer in Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and always keep some by me in case of need. A few years ago while teaching school I suffered so much with rheumatism in my arms and shoulders that I had the greatest difficulty in writing on the blackboard, and after trying a number of remedies without benefit, I was almost in despair, and felt inclined to abandon teaching. But one day I happened to pick up one of Dr. Williams' almanacs, and read of the cure of a number of severe cases of rheumatism through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. This decided me to give the Pills a trial, and I had only taken them a few weeks when I felt much better. In the course of a few weeks more the pains and stiffness had left me, and I had no more difficulty in doing my work. I cannot say enough in praise of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, for they, and they alone cured me of my rheumatism."

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

Have Eyes Tested at Intervals

Whenever you feel uneasy in your spectacles, don't hesitate to call and see us. We are always glad to help you.

TO WELCOME THE PASTOR

The congregation of George Street Methodist church gathered in the school room last evening to welcome the pastor, Rev. Mr. Couch. While he has been in harness since early in August, it was only seemly that he should be formally inducted, so to speak.

Mr. Dawson Kennedy made an able and affable chairman. During the evening the orchestra of the Sunday school contributed to the programme several selections which were much appreciated. Messrs. Miles, Walton, Cunningham, Epps, Miller, Huycke, Hockett and Dubreil, of the choir, gave a selection in good voice. Mr. Fred Miles gave "Love's Old, Sweet Song," Mrs. Routley sang "Hold Thou My Hand," Miss Lizzie Smith playing the accompaniments.

Mr. A. W. Cressman, as Recording Steward was to have spoken, but was unavoidably absent, being out of the city on business. Mr. D. W. Dumble said he was deputed by Mr. Cressman to say all he would have said, and in addition made some remarks on his own account. He spoke in most complimentary terms of Rev. Mr. Couch and his work in other cities before coming to Peterborough. He eulogized the work of the church, both as exemplified in that of the pastor and its influence in general; that our churches were the largest impelling force we had to make for civilisation, culture and progress. He referred to the relations of pastor and people, and urged that each and both should work for the common and ultimate good.

Mr. F. H. Dobbin spoke briefly, extending to Rev. Mr. Couch a hearty welcome, and Mr. J. J. Hartley, as identified with the interests of Grace church, gave a brief but strong address.

The members of the Ladies' Aid Society served refreshments, and after a pleasant half hour the meeting dispersed.

Miser's Hallowe'en

A unique piece of photography is to be seen in the show case of the Richmond studio. It is called the Misers Hallowe'en. The miser is seated in a large chair and by some clever work, an apparition is made to appear, much to the old man's terror.

The exhibit is well worth an inspection.

$12,500 COST OF NEW HOSPITAL

Dr. McPherson, M. H. O., informed the Property Committee last night that it would take about $12,500 to meet the expense in connection with the new isolation hospital. At least this was the figure arrived at from estimated of fittings, etc., supplied by the doctor.

He said 23 or 24 beds would be required, and besides those for five nurses and four domestic helpers.

The dishes and glassware will cost $100; the furniture, bed mattresses and pillows $375; tables and desks $200; dressers $100; chairs $90; pictures $10; bedding, linen and blinds $920; graniteware will cost $205, and electric heaters $20. Other incidentals bring the total, roughly, to $2,100. An expenditure of $1,500 would be sufficient for the start, the doctor thought.

As $9 200 has already been spent on the hospital the committee thought that a $12,500 by-law should be prepared.

On motion of Ald. Bradburn, seconded by Ald. Graham, the by-law will be prepared for that amount, and debentures will be issued at 4 1-2 per cent.

It will be endeavored to secure a local nurse as matron at $50 a month. She will have to take a three or four months' course in Montreal in contagious nursing.

JOINT MEETING OF PROPERTY COMMITTEE AND THE LIBRARY BOARD; FITTINGS DISCUSSED

A temporary fence will be built at King Edward Park. The chairman reported the park had been seeded.

The Library Board was authorized to appropriate the $600 set aside for the library at the first of the year.

"THE ALASKAN"

With Richard F. Carroll Here Next Tuesday October 25th

A popular attraction at the Grand for this coming Week, is William P Cullen's production of "The Alaskan" This splendid musical show, has been revised by two very clever comedians, Richard F. Carroll and Gus Weinberg, who themselves have parts suited to their humor in this new offering. The piece comes here after a phenomenal run of five months in Chicago, and while many of the original song numbers have been retained, many new and novel interpolations have been introduced. Amongst the latter is the now famous "Snowballing" number, in which the "Girly" chorus throw snowballs at the audience, while the audience pelts them back. It is very interesting while it lasts, no one enjoys the clever conceit more than Mr., Mrs. and Miss Audience. The weird dance of the "Totem Poles" the wonderfully realistic snow storm scene, and the many prismatic and electrical effects all go to form an entirely "somewhat different" departure in latter day musical comedy. The entire Chicago production will be brought here intact, and besides the principal comedians, Carroll and Weinberg, the large company consists of Detmar, Poppen, Leo Kendall, Al Rauh, Sidney Algiers, Jessie Stoner, Alice Keen, Etta Lockhart, Marcell Scott and an exceptionally large chorus.

INFORMATION FOR PUBLIC ON CHIMES FOR THIS CITY

Meeting of Subscribers Pass Resolution That Present Committee Appoint a Committee, with Themselves, to Place an Order for a Suitable Set of Chimes at Earliest Possible Time---The Offers Received.

Moved by Mr. Alex. Elliott, seconded by Mr. T. A. S. Hay; that this meeting expresses its satisfaction at the wide and generous support given to the movement to procure a chime of bells for the city, to be placed in St. John's tower and further express its strong conviction that this object will be for the great advantage of our city. That the general demand for bells of large size and best quality, necessitates a correspondingly large expenditure of money and accordingly in the public interests we ask that the subscription list be kept open and added to by all individuals and societies who may be willing and who have not yet joined in this effort, we being convinced that at least more than $5,500 is necessary for the purpose in view of the information laid before the meeting.

Moved by Mr G. W Hatton, seconded by Mr. G. O. Wainwright, that this meeting of citizens expresses its grateful appreciation of the splendid gen- [illegible] former citizens in support- [illegible] have done for erosity [illegible] ing this prospect as [illegible] the good of their old city.

Moved by Mr. Cowdy, seconded by Mr. Murray, that in the opinion of this meeting, it is important that all unpaid subscriptions be paid in to the treasurer at the earliest possible moment.

Moved by Mr. G. W. Hatton, seconded by Mr. Alex Elliott, that the present chimes committee appoint a committee with themselves to place an order for a suitable set of chimes at the earliest possible moment.

The above resolutions were carried at the general meeting of chimes subscribers at the City Council Chamber last evening. Over $5,000 has been subscribed and the greater part of this amount has been paid into the hands the secretary of the fund, Mr. G. O. Wainwright, manager of the Bank of Ottawa.

The meeting opened with an explanatory address by the chairman, Rev. Canon Davidson, and a comprehensive report of the secretary on four offers from firms for the purchase of a set of chimes for Peterborough and which are as follows:—

The German firm of Petit, Edelbrock Bros., offer a set of eleven bells of a total of 17,000 lbs., and the largest bell weighing 3,800 lbs. for $5,000. The question remains whether this set of bells would go in the tower.

Chimes manufactured by this firm are in operation at Denver, Col., and the clergyman in charge of the church there is greatly pleased with them. His is a fifteen bell chimes and has given the statement that he can purchase from Germany and pay the duty of 45 per cent and still secure chimes cheaper than in buying from the English or American firms. The question as to superiority in the sound of the bells is to a great extent a matter of taste, just as is the piano for instance.

Meneely & Co., of New York, who made the present bell, offer a chime of eleven bells, weighing 10,600 lbs., for $5,000 and the old bell, or $5,200 without the bell. This offer is accompanied with the promise of attending to every particular, of installation and a concert after completion. Cobourg has a set of their bells. For a smaller set the price is $4,740.

John Taylor & Co., another English firm, will supply a set of eleven bells of 14,000 lbs., for $5,200. This firm is installing chimes in Woodstock.

All these firms have high reputations and chimes installed by the New York and English firms are near at at hand, so that it is possible for a representative committee to visit some of the cities and towns and inspect and hear the bells so enable a suitable selection, if it is the decision to purchase from either of the three. With the goods of the German firm the situation is different, and while the Ger- [illegible] superior to the mind [illegible] it does not [illegible] manu- [illegible] that firm may [illegible] of the Denver clergyman [illegible] necessarily mean that the other [illegible] facturers put up an inferior bell.

Mears and Stainbank, an English firm, will supply a set of nine bells of a total of 10,000 lbs., the largest weighing 2,240 lbs., for $4,280, and a smaller set for $3,800. This firm has given satisfaction at Oakville and other places.

Rev. J. C. Davidson, in opening the meeting, stated that he had taken the responsibility of calling the subscribers together as the scheme to secure the bells had materialized to such a mark that a further step was necessary.

It was desirable to know first how the subscribers felt in regard to the purchase of the chimes, whether they thought enough money was subscribed or whether their opinion was that more money was necessary for the procuring of suitable bells, while certain citizens had advanced the fund to the present situation, they did not feel free to take further action, and the meeting was called to get the opinions of the citizens at large.

Mr. Davidson then called upon Mr. Wainwright to submit the offers received to the meeting, and gave much information regarding each offer.

Mr. Wainwright opined that the proper action to take would be to appoint a committee to go to Woodstock when the bells there are installed. That committee could inspect and hear the bells, and also call at other places. Thus they would secure valuable information which would enable them to say which chimes were preferable. If ordered from the English firm, the chimes could be installed by coronation day, next year.

Besides referring in a warm manner to the support given by the local press of the city, Rev. Mr. Davidson spoke enthusiastically of the interest former Peterborough people had taken in the movement. One case he cited was that of a young man who left here thirty years ago and now had sent in a subscription of $100. His name was Mr. Herbert Cottingham. Mr. Walter Cottingham, head of the Sherwin-Williams Paint Co., was another $100 subscriber.

Four months after the order, was asked by the firm for delivery.

Mr. G. W. Hatton said that so far as he was concerned he would like more time to look over the information supplied by the secretary. He was in favor of getting as large and expensive a set of chimes as the tower could retain. The matter of a few hundred dollars should not stand in the way of procuring good bells.

Mr. Alex. Elliott, too, held that it was preferable to get the very best. He understood that the tower was a strong one, and the order for the bells should be undertaken as a matter of business, not of sentiment.

It might be explained here that there had been some discussion as to which firm should get the order. Mr. Butcher, the present sexton, spoke [illegible] against purchasing a German [illegible] decidedly in favor of [illegible] bell. He [illegible] England. [illegible] the order [illegible] opinion Mr. Murray, too, held [illegible] of Mr. Butcher. There were [illegible] employed in England, he said, who would be benefited somewhat by the placing of the order in England.

Mr. T. A. S. Hay suggested that whatever was to be done it should be accomplished promptly. There was a feeling with some of the public that there had been too much hesitation. He held that there would be no trouble in raising $1,000 more if the public knew that the order was placed for the bells. He was strongly in favor of a committee being formed to make a decision at once.

Rev. Mr. Davidson explained that the claim of the present executive was that, for them to take the sole responsibility of ordering the chimes, would mean disaster. Public opinion was desirous, so that the present committee would have some backing.

Mr. E. L. Goodwill's opinion was that the committee had acted promptly, but that now the time had arrived to take up the matter of placing the order. He was in favor of the committee making the inspection trip. It had been shown that the whole public was interested in the movement, and if more money was needed it would be forthcoming.

The resolutions given above were then carried and the meeting closed.

AN INTERESTING DEMONSTRATION

Of Suitings and Overcoatings from Famous House of Hobberlin

Every man who can possibly do so, should attend the "Free Tests" of Hobberlin Suitings and Overcoats now in full swing at the store of H. LeBrun & Co. The machine used for this purpose is the same as that used by the British Government in testing the cloth for the army. The big tailoring house of Hobberlin makes use of it in buying their clothes from the mills.

LeBrun & Co have secured the machine in order to give the men of the city an idea of the textile strength of the cloths they are selling in the suitings and overcoatings for this fall. It is a splendid way to determine exactly the strength of the materials you are buying. An opportunity of this kind is decidedly rare and all who can possibly do so should visit the store while the "free tests" are in progress.

A GROWING IDEAL

As usual, the Guild of Goodfellowship will meet in the Princess Theatre to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock, but the session will be somewhat short to permit the members to participate in the big rally at All Saints'.

The subject under consideration will be "The Progress of Thought and Ideals During the Centuries," or, in other words, "How Have We Reached Our Present Vantage Point?"

All men of eighteen years or over will be heartily welcomed.

THIRD "POP" OF THE 57TH BAND NEXT FRIDAY

The third of the series of band concerts will be given in the armories on Friday night October 28th, by the 57th Regiment Band. Mr. Harry Bennett, of Toronto, the brilliant humorist, has been engaged for the occasion.

CHIMES

Curtis Bros., brick manufacturers and employees, have sent a united gift of $33.52 for the Chimes Fund. This subscription was noted at the general meeting last night by Rev. Canon Davidson, and was applauded. The fund to-day stands at $5,050.50.

AFTER OPTION ON THE BOATS ON STONEY LAKE

Rumour has it that the Canadian Pacific railway is negotiating with the Stoney Lake Navigation Company with the object of making a big change at Stoney Lake.

One story has it that the railway has secured an option on the boats of the Navigation Co. and also on Thompson's Hotel at Mount Julian, and the hotel at Oak Orchard, but so far as the latter business is concerned, the Review is informed by Mr. Perry Alexander, that he proposes to retain possession.

Another story is to the effect that the deal is practically closed with the Navigation Company. However no positive verification is at hand. There is no doubt that if the railway stretched out as stated above, Stoney Lake as a summer resort would receive a great boom.

FLUCTIATION IN IRISH FRUIT THE PRICES RAN THE SCALE; MARKET MURPHIES SELECT?

Farmers Didn't Plant as Many Potatoes This Year as Last and Rain Rotted Some of the Crop — Prices at Peterboro' Market To-day.

The chief topic of gossip this morning on the market was potatoes. The difference in price was the cause. At the Wolfe street wharf, potatoes brought up from down the river are being sold at 70 cents a bag. At the market 90 cents and $1.00 were the prevailing prices. What causes the difference is the question.

One farmer stated that the potatoes that are being sold from the scows at the wharf were a combination of good and bad, large and small, and that those who buy from the lot will regret it before the season is out. This is his opinion, of course.

He also stated that before potatoes grow again, sellers will be asking $2 a bag for them. If a man buys three bags of potatoes now, he will lose one bag through waste, he said.

Last year there was a surplus of potatoes, and farmers could not sell all. This caused them considerable financial loss. This year, determined not to make the same mistake, they planted fewer, with the result that the rain caused a large per cent of what they did plant to rot, and hence the scarcity this year. The same informant stated that there was no surplus of any agricultural produce this year.

MOVING PICTURES OF FUTURE

Comments by Evangeline on the Sunday School Lesson for October 23rd.

In the last review the miracles of Jesus passed before us in rapid succession like pictures on a canvas. In the fourteen lessons of the present quarter His prophecies have flashed before us in like manner.

The former were intended to convince skeptics of the first century of the truth, the latter to convince skeptics of the twentieth century.

They present mostly in the form of parables, a consecutive and continuous outline of events, which would take place in the Kingdom of heaven, or during the rule of the King from heaven, from the first coming to His second coming, in symbolic language which would veil the true meaning for a time, but would allow it to become progressively clear in the later stages of the world's history.

In the first lesson we saw the

FIRST GRADUATE

of the first Christian theological college receiving the first honor of D.D.

For three years Peter had been taught by One "who spoke as never man spoke" and as he stood before his alma mater to be examined as to his qualifications to preach, the question was put, "Whom say ye that I am?" and Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God."

He did not know Latin; still less did he know of Greek; he had never heard of Driver, nor Newman, nor Wellhausen, for Biblical criticism of the German rationalist school was not included in the curriculum of Christ's college. One thing he did know—Jesus Christ—and he was not ashamed to confess Him.

One can almost see between the lines how He must have slapped Peter on the shoulder as He said; "Blessed art thou, Simon Barjonah, for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but My Father who is in heaven. And I say unto thee, thou art Peter, and upon this Rock (pointing to Himself) do I build My Church."

Following the custom of the Jews in creating a Doctor of Law (when the keys of the chest containing the books of the law and the prophets were formally handed over, showing that he was authorized to open the truth to the people), Jesus said;

"I will give unto thee

THE KEYS OF—HEAVEN

No, no, the keys of "the kingdom of heaven," or the church.

A few months later we saw in Acts 2 how Peter opened the kingdom of heaven to the Jews, and Acts 10 we saw how he opened the kingdom of heaven to the Gentiles.

Fearing that the Lord's words might be twisted through some inconceivable process of mental gymnastics to mean something entirely different, Peter wrote a letter, in which he explained fully which rock was meant. Search for it in the dust-covered Book in 1 Peter 2.

In the second lesson we saw how Peter's testimony had the confirmation of heaven when, at the transfiguration, the Divine radium penetrated even His clothing with such dazzling brilliance that they could hardly look upon Him, and a voice from heaven was heard; "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased."

Search for it, but not in the Old Testament, of the grand old Book.

In the third we saw in the parable of the debtors how the kingdom of heaven or the Christian Church would be like a man in the insolvent court who, after getting a discharge in full of his sued a fellow who owed him seventeen dollars, thereby getting into difficulties. Illustrating how Christ would freely forgive in the coming age those hopelessly involved in sin, and how the answer to the petition, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," would mean hell to most people.

Read it. A little Bible now and then will do no harm to the best of men.

In the fourth we see a rising young capitalist trying to get into the true Church by the wrong door. "What can I do," he said, "to inherit eternal life?" Inheritances do not come by "doing," but by being born. As he seemed to want to get it by doing, Jesus said:

"Do the commandments."

"All these things have I observed," He replied, "what lack I yet?"

It was as though He said, "Really? Let me see. Do you love your neighbor as yourself? Then go and sell all that you have and give to the poor."

And the young man with great possessions showed how his possessions had possession for him, for he went away sorrowful.

Read Matthew's account of it. It is very interesting.

In the fifth or the parable of the laborers, we saw a strike predicted when non-union men left the Gentiles would be taken on at the eleventh hour and given equal wages with the old Jewish gang who had been first in the world's great harvest field.

Hunt it up and read how it was settled.

In the next we saw

TWO ASPIRANTS FOR POLITICAL HONORS

in the new kingdom, James and John, who planned to secure the Premiership and Speakership of the House in the new kingdom, or something of that kind, by getting their applications in early. We saw that their object in life was not others, but self, in contrast with the One whose chief object was not self, but others, and that the only greatness in the coming kingdom would be the greatness of service.

Read about it in Matt. 20

In the seventh we saw the fulfilment of Zechariah's prophecy given over five hundred years before. "Behold thy King cometh unto thee meek and sitting upon an ass." When the King started upon his triumphal march down through the ages we saw the little band of "about five hundred brethren" gradually increasing till in our day they number about five hundred million professed followers.

It is all in the grand old Book.

The eighth was an account of an extraordinary lawsuit, in which the defendant pleaded His own case in such a way as to make the plaintiffs the laughing stock not only of the court, but of the whole world, and stepping out of the prison dock into the judge's bench, constituted the plaintiffs a jury on their own actions and compelled them, in spite of themselves, to find a verdict against themselves.

It is extremely interesting and may be found in the same old Book, Matt. 21.

In the ninth we got a hint of

when a Royal Lover gave away the secret of His approaching marriage in a story, the true meaning of which is only beginning to be understood.

Invitations were issued by the King through the prophets, but the R.S.V.P. brought no response. Again He sent other servants, the apostles, with the invitation, but they made light of it, and slew the servants, and we read later in history how the King "destroyed those miserable men" in the awfullest siege of the world's history.

Now the invitations are going out in a hustle to whosoever will.

Look it up in the dust-covered Book. It is interesting when read in the light of history past, present and future.

In the tenth we saw how they tried to get our Lord sidetracked on to political, theological and legal lines, in the hope of getting from him an unguarded statement upon which to base a charge against Him. We saw how from start to finish He held to His point of revealing God to man and of bringing man back to God.

The eleventh was an account of between Me and Myself, or the new nature and the old, white and black, more exciting than Jeffries and Johnson to those who fighting for a trophy to lay at the feet of Him who gives victory, a fight in which more are interested than we know, for all we know, for all heaven is on tip-toe of expectancy to see who'll win.

We saw that when God takes a spiritual pugilist in training He does not leave him alone with no opportunity of resistance, but leaves him the old nature for the new nature to wrestle with. We saw that at times the work of the flesh would be the under dog in the fight and at times the works of the Spirit, but that it is our privilege always to triumph through Christ.

You will find it if you keep on looking in

PAUL'S LETTER TO THE FRENCHMEN

of the first century, the Galatians, where he speaks of "the flesh lusting against the Spirit and the Spirit against the flesh, for the two are contrary."

The twelfth was a cartoon of the Church, asleep to her evangelistic responsibilities, asleep to God's plans revealed in prophecy, asleep to the fact that Jesus is coming again, and while she sleeps the theological aviators carry her whithersoever they will in their

AEROPLANES OF RATIONALISM—THEIR DIRIGIBLES OF RITUALISM.

Read Matt. 25th and see how the divine negative when developed comes out just as He took it twenty centuries before.

In lesson thirteen we saw how 100 per cent dividends could be secured in the Father's business.

In lesson fourteen we saw the nations standing before God in judgment when wrong would be forever on the scaffold, right forever on the throne.

Such is a review of the views and foreviews of the lessons of the quarter which should arouse stale sinners and staler saints to search "that stalest of Books," which, after all, is not as stale as it seems to be when studied under the direction of the Spirit and in the light of current events.

WHOLE FAMILY WAS AFFLICTED

But Dodd's Kidney Pills Restored All to Perfect Health

Father, Mother and Daughter After years of suffering are made healthy and happy by Great Canadian Kidney Remedy.

St. Leon Standon, Dorchester Co., Que., Oct 21.—(Special).—That Dodd's Kidney Pills have no equal as a family medicine is proved conclusively by the statement of Mr. George Lacasse, a well-known resident of this place. His statement given for publication is—

"For twelve years I had pains in the small of my back. My head would ache and my muscles would cramp. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured me.

"My little girl had nervous trouble. She was so bad that she could not keep her hands and feet quiet. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured her."

Is it any wonder that Mr. Lacasse is shouting the praises of Dodd's Kidney Pills? He has learned through experience, as have thousands of other Canadians, that Dodd's Kidney Pills cure Kidney Disease, no matter where it appears, or in what form it is found. Dodd's Kidney Pills should always find a place in the family medicine chest.

SIMPSON TO PLAY?

Hamilton, Oct. 22.—The Tigers had their final brush-up Thursday afternoon for the Ottawa game on Saturday, which promises to be a big factor in deciding the Inter-Provincial championship. Captain Isbister may spring a surprise or two when the line-up is announced. Ben Simpson, the veteran half-back, has been working overtime at the practices since Saturday, and it has practically been decided to play him on Saturday, probably replacing Burton, whose ankle is in bad shape. Don Lyon, the great outside wing, will accompany the team and may play, as the team will be minus the services of Braemer, the big wing man. A big crowd of Hamilton sports are going down, and they will carry at least $5,000 to place at even money on the Tigers.

Mr. Frank Howard, of the Howard and Jordan's Stock farm, Northcott, Iowa, is in the city.

The farm is one of 600 acres and Mr. Howard says it is chiefly devoted to the raising of Holstein cattle. During the past year the thoroughbreds from the Howard-Jordan farm, have been very successful in American Stock Shows.

Mr. Howard also devotes attention to the breeding of thoroughbred horses but goes in for the raising of cattle on a much more extended scale.

WHO PAYS THE DUTY?—You or our foreign competitor.

You pay. About that there is no room for doubt.

And it's more than likely you believe in the necessity of the tariff.

But—of what earthly good is it if you pay the duty?

The foreigner laughs at duties imposed by our government as long as you are willing to cash up. Take beer, for instance.

"Salvador"

The Famous National Drink

is the purest and best beer brewed on this continent.

The formula and entire process of brewing "Salvador" is a secret and absolutely controlled, on this side of the Atlantic, by Reinhardts' of Toronto.

Beer, almost as good as "Salvador," is brewed by the big American brewers and sold in the States at exactly the same price as "Salvador" in Canada.

But—when you order an American beer in Canada there's 34% extra to pay—the duty—plus extra freight charges.

Is it rational to pay that duty—when you can get a better beer at the normal price? "Salvador" beer is rich in flavor, sparkling and charged with invigorating properties.

THE CAR TO BUY
Russell-Knight
The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance
Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind:—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,[illegible] users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

"I FEEL IT MY DUTY

To Give You a Statement In Regard To 'Fruit-a-tives'"

[illegible], MIRAMICHI, N.B., Jan. 17th. 1910.

"I feel it my duty to give to you and the world an unsolicited statement in support to the wonderful cure I received by taking 'Fruit-a-tives.' Chronic Constipation was the complaint I suffered with for years. My general health was miserable as a result of this disease, and I became depressed and alarmed. I was treated by physicians without the slightest permanent benefit, and I tried all kinds of pills and tablets but nothing did me any good.

I saw the strong testimonial in favor of 'Fruit-a-tives' by [illegible] 'Grand Old Man', the Hon. John Costigan, and I knew that anything he stated was honest and true and given only to help his fellow-man. I tried 'Fruit-a-tives' and the effects were most marvellous, and now I am entirely well from all my Chronic Constipation that I suffered from for so many years. My general health is once more excellent and I cannot say too much to express my thanks for the great benefit derived from taking 'Fruit-a-tives'."

A. G. WILLISTON.

"Fruit-a-tives" is not gotten up by druggists or expert chemists—who know nothing about disease and the needs of the human body—but is the scientific discovery of a well known physician, and is the only [illegible] made of fruit juices. 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size 25c. PEAT FUEL IS A SUCCESS

(THE GLOBE)

For many years there have been sporadic attempts by capitalists to find a way of treating peat that would enable it to compete with coal as fuel. Yesterday the welcome intelligence was circulated from Ottawa that the experiments made at a peat-treating plant maintained by the Dominion Government near Ottawa have proved completely successful. The product of the plant has been offered for sale during the past month at three and a quarter dollars a ton, and during that interval five hundred tons have been sold. The purchasers have testified that the new fuel is cheaper and more satisfactory than coal, and they have given proof of their good faith by sending in orders for further supplies.

The importance of this incident is due to the fact that there are in various parts of Canada immense deposits of peat, which is too much saturated with water to be combustible. One of the technical difficulties has all along been to get rid of the water without at the same time driving off some valuable inflammable ingredients. In all probability it will be found that the success of the experiments at the Government station is due to the fact that this difficulty has been at last overcome. This discovery goes to show the importance of Government experimental work, just as the electric smelting experiments did at Sault Ste. Marie. There are no patents on processes so invented or discovered.

A MOTHER'S ADVICE TO OTHER MOTHERS

Mrs. Nicholas Breau, Rogersville, N. B. writes:—"I can highly recommend Baby's Own Tablets to all mothers whose little ones are constipated. I gave my little girl the Tablets and they regulated her bowels, and now she sleeps well, eats well, is fat and good all the time. I am really delighted with the Tablets, and I always keep them in the house, and as soon as my little girl becomes troubled or feverish, I give her the Tablets and she is soon well again. Please send me another box, for they are the very best medicine I know of for little ones." The Tablets are sold under a guarantee to contain nothing injurious to even the youngest child. Sold at 50 cents a box by all medicine dealers, or from the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE NORMAL STUDENTS AGAIN WELCOMED TO CITY

The students of the Peterborough Normal school were extended the glad hand of welcome last evening in the school room of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. No longer need the students feel lonely and unacquainted. The best of fellowship reigned last night.

The Y.P.S.C.E. of St. Andrew's with their usual reputation for doing things well, provided an excellent programme and reception for the students, and their efforts towards making the evening such a success is worthy of comment.

Fully two hundred and fifty were present. The room was crowded. As the newcomers entered the room, each was provided with a slip of paper bearing their name, and another slip containing a question and a number and their duty was to find the party who possessed a slip with the answer to the question. The object of this was to get all on terms of mutual acquaintance. The idea was a success, and soon all were on speaking terms with each other, thus removing the feeling of restraint which often mars an occasion of this nature.

After partners had been found, the first part of the programme commenced. Mr Rutherford presided and made a few opening remarks.

Mr. Lees next addressed a few words of welcome to the students. He hoped that they would all feel at home during their sojourn in the city, and urged them not to sacrifice a reasonable amount of pleasure for study.

A piano solo by Miss Girven was the first number on the programme and was very creditably given.

A recitation by Mr. J. John was well received and he had to respond to an encore.

A piano duet by Miss Margaret Rae and Helen Henry was also encored and they were compelled to respond.

Miss Winslow sang "O Happy Day" with much charm and effect. She is the possessor of a rich clear voice which was heard to splendid advantage last evening.

The second part of the programme followed, that of the puzzles and other contests. The musical contest was very provocative of mirth, and the prize for the best worded song composed of the titles of other songs was awarded to Miss Stapleton and Miss Dixon.

A vocal solo by Mr. Miller was the next number.

Miss Olive Howell sang very sweetly and was heartily applauded.

A cornet solo "Star of the East," by Mr. Miller, was a decided novelty and took well with the gathering.

During the evening refreshments were served of apples, grapes and candy

Miss Lizzie Shearer and Miss Girvin played very effectively the different musical accompaniments during the evening

The gathering broke up about 10 30 with the singing of the National Anthem.

CONGREGATION WILL OCCUPY NEW EDIFICE

To-morrow the congregation of All Saints' Anglican church will occupy the new edifice, and interesting services will be held. At 8 o'clock there will be special communion service, and at 11 o'clock the Bishop of Toronto will officiate at the unveiling of the memorial window. At 3.30 o'clock the scholars of St. John's and All Saints' Sunday schools will be present for a children's service, at which the Bishop will speak. At seven o'clock the visiting clergyman will preach.

DAM COSTS $20,000 ABOVE ESTIMATES

At the meeting of the Finance Committee last night Mr. W. H. Moore, on behalf of the Water Commissioners, asked that the city issue debentures for $20,000 to meet unforeseen expenses which had arisen in connection with the waterworks dam. The amount voted by the ratepayers was $120,000, and $20,000 more is required.

Mr. Moore said $8,000 more than estimated was required in getting to the rock bed in the river, and $12,000 more in purchasing the Irwin and McCauley property, the possession of which will allow the commissioners to raise the water as high as required without protest. While the committee had no doubt that the commissioners had spent the money in the best interest of the city, some of the aldermen thought the people should have been consulted before the expenditure exceeded the appropriation.

The Council will take up the matter on Monday.

Y.M.C.A. PHYSICAL NOTES

Any men wanting to take that course, who have not yet enrolled would do well to hand in their names at the office at once. This is one very important line of work. The only one to be Johny on the Spot, is to know how to act in an emergency. Be sure to be present next Wednesday evening after Gym. Class.

THE WAY OF PUNISHING THE INNOCENT ALSO INTERESTING FACTS

(Christian Herald.)

One of the most important topics from a humanitarian point of view, discussed at the meeting of the International Congress in Washington to consider the suppression of crime and the treatment of the criminal, is the responsibility of the authorities for the families of prisoners whose bread winners have been taken from them for a more or less extended period. As things now stand, the prisoner is well housed, fairly well fed and put at some healthful occupation which gives him some exercise and keeps his mind from giving under the fearful monotony of his existence. His family meanwhile is thrown on its own resources and compelled to find shelter and food as best it may. It has often been the boast of our legal lights that our laws were intended to correct and punish with the least likelihood of inflicting pain upon the innocent; but in this way they have lamentably failed. One proposition made recently by a student of conditions in our penal institutions seems as if it might work well in practice to relieve, in part, the misery of the prisoner's family. In all of our institutions the prisoners are put at work in some cases are taught trades which would bring in good wages to a man working at them under the conditions of free labour. It is proposed that the man earn his own board and lodging—pay by labour, in other words, what it costs the State to keep him in confinement. This having been calculated, all that he earns above this amount to be paid him; that is, if he has a family, the extra amount he earns is to be paid over to them toward their support. If this were done, there would be less chance of the family "going on the town," to use a familiar expression.

The prisoner's wife and children have a claim to consideration, a claim which has been hitherto ignored in a way which ought to spur our sociologists and philanthropists to devising some practical way for their relief in future.

As an enlightened nation proud of our philanthropies, we cannot escape the conviction that we have punished more than the guilty in many cases, and that so far as it can be remedied in a physical sense it should be done.

CRIPPEN NOW UNDER SENTENCE OF DEATH FOR MURDERING WIFE

He Hears is Doom Quietly, But Looks Dazed as Sentence is Passed—Lord Alverstone Advises Prisoner Hold No Hope of Escaping the Gallows.

London, Eng., Oct. 24.—Dr. Hawley Crippen is now under sentence of death for the murder of his wife. The end came early Saturday afternoon, when the jury, after 29 minutes' deliberation, returned a verdict of guilty. Crippen took the decision quietly, but stood in a dazed way while Chief Justice Alverstone condemned him to die Nov. 16.

In pronouncing sentence, Lord Alverstone said: "The prisoner has been convicted on evidence that leaves no doubt in any reasonable mind that he cruelly poisoned his wife and mutilated her body."

Turning to the doctor, Lord Alverstone then said impressively:

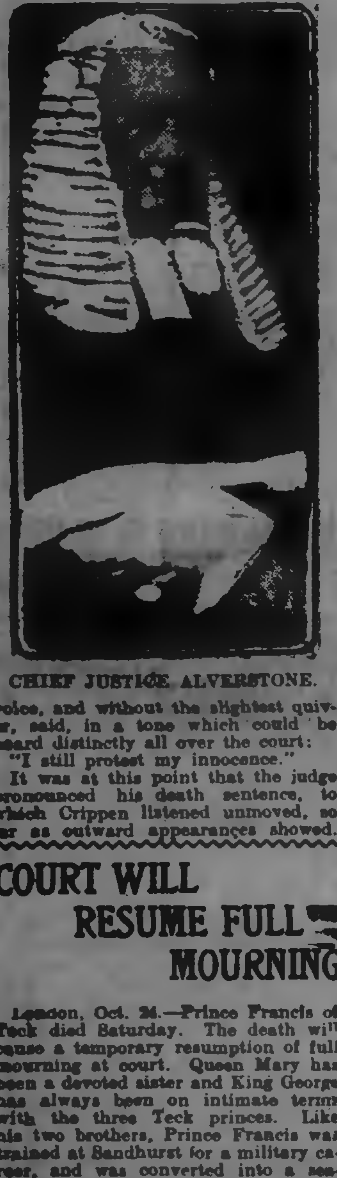
"I advise you to entertain no hope of escaping the gallows. I implore you to make your peace with God."

Before the sentence Crippen had shown only slight evidence of nervousness. His collapse commenced when the clerk read the sentence, and asked Crippen if he had anything to say.

Then, having regained complete control of his nerves, Crippen, in a clear voice, and without the slightest quiver, said, in a tone which could be heard distinctly all over the court:

"I still protest my innocence."

It was at this point that the judge pronounced his death sentence, to which Crippen listened unmoved, so far as outward appearances showed.



CHIEF JUSTICE ALVERSTONE.

After this there was a dead silence in the court-room, which was broken by the judge saying: "Members of the jury, you are excused for ten years."

There was a murmur of thanks from the jury, the judge rose, and Crippen left the dock with tottering and faltering footsteps.

"No hope," rang in Crippen's ears, and his cheeks blanched and his eyes started. He shifted uneasily, his tottering form from one foot to the other. His lips twitched, and, as Lord Alverstone delivered himself of the court's decree, he raised his eyes toward the court for an instant only.

After delivering his declaration of innocence, his head again sank on his breast, and his eyes sought the floor. He was led to the cell, leaning heavily on his keepers' arms. When he reached the cell, Crippen threw himself upon the cot and refused even to look at his keepers. His utter collapse is expected.

When court convened Saturday morning Richard Muir made the closing speech for the prosecution. He declared that the crown had proven beyond a reasonable doubt that the body found in the cellar of the Crippen home was that of the doctor's wife. No one else, he said, had a chance to murder the woman and bury the body as it was found to have been buried. He said that the defence had relied largely on the theory that Crippen was too kind-hearted to commit murder. Counsel pointed out that the defendant had, however, lived for months a life of hypocrisy, mocking the grief of his wife's dearest friends.

Lord Chief Justice Alverstone immediately began his summing up of the case.

The justice described Crippen as an extraordinary man, whether guilty or innocent. If guilty he had covered up a ghastly crime in a ghastly way, and it was believed in a most brutal and calloused manner. If he was innocent, it was impossible to fathom his mind, as he was absolutely indifferent to the charge of murder. He had taken no steps whatever to prove his innocence. Crippen, the justice declared, undoubtedly was a liar, and had lived an immoral life, but, he added, the jury could not convict the defendant on that score. It must be quite convinced that the human parts found were from the body of Belle Elmore, and that her death was caused by a wilful act of the prisoner.

The trial moved quickly. It opened at 10.30 o'clock last Tuesday morning, and before the lunch hour the indictment had been reached, the prisoner's plea taken, the jury drawn, the opening address of the prosecution made, and two witnesses examined.

The case was considered of such importance that Lord Chief Justice Alverstone presided. Crippen's chief counsel was Alfred A. Tobin, a distinguished barrister. Richard Muir led the prosecution.

COURT WILL RESUME FULL MOURNING

London, Oct. 24.—Prince Francis of Teck died Saturday. The death will cause a temporary resumption of full mourning at court. Queen Mary has been a devoted sister and King George has always been on intimate terms with the three Teck princes. Like his two brothers, Prince Francis was trained at Sandhurst for a military career, and was converted into a seasoned soldier by service in India, Egypt and South Africa. He was the best sportsman in the Teck family, and cared less for the pleasures of society than either of his brothers. Since his retirement from the army he had spent much time in Ireland and Scotland, where he could get fine shooting.

Queen Mary, after the prince's throat had been operated on for an obstruction, insisted on having him visit her at Balmoral, where he could regain his strength in the bracing air. When he caught a severe cold in the Highlands the King's own physician took charge of the case, and he recommended the removal to a nursing home, where he could have scientific treatment.

The Queen is overwhelmed with grief over the loss of her favorite brother. There is a full measure of public sympathy, for the Teck princes have been respected as gallant soldiers who have not shirked their duty to the state. The prince was born at Kensington Palace in 1870. After serving in the army in Egypt and South Africa, he retired in 1903 with the title of major.

New It's a Wine Trust.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—A rumor was afloat in the city on Saturday that six of the largest native wine manufacturing concerns in Canada are about to be merged in a single trust, with a capitalization of about two and one-half million dollars. It was stated that the deal would be engineered by Toronto and Montreal men, and that the headquarters of the new company would be in the latter city.

No French Loan for Turkey.

Paris, Oct. 24.—The French Government considers the negotiations for a loan of $30,000,000 to Turkey as ended, Turkey having refused the financial guarantees requested by France.

A Big Power Company.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—The Manitoba Power Co., with a capital of five million dollars, has been incorporated, with headquarters in Winnipeg.

MINISTER BEAT THE SOCIALIST

Fernie, B.C., Oct. 24.—Hon. W. R. Ross, Minister of Lands in the B. C. Government, was returned at Saturday's election by a majority of 200 over J. W. Bennett, Socialist. The vote was light. Fernie City gave the new Minister 11 majority, the only two precincts giving Bennett majorities being Coal Creek, where he received 33 over Ross, and Michel, which he carried by 72 votes.

Four-Year-Old Killed by Car.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—The little four-year-old daughter of Robert Fouler, Waverley street, died on Saturday, as the result of being run over by a street car on Elgin street. Both hands were severed and both legs broken. She rolled off the fender beneath the wheels of the car.

GIRL CHARGED WITH PERJURY

Quebec, Oct. 24.—Detective Walsh received a telegram from Inspector Begin of the N.W.M.P. at Prince Albert, Sask., to be on the look-out for a young girl named Helen Seimer, who is charged with perjury and who was supposed to leave this port for England. Detective Walsh went down to the C.P.R. wharf Friday afternoon shortly before the Empress of Britain left port, and spotted the young girl as she was landing from the incoming western train. The accused will be kept in the Good Shepperd's Convent, until the arrival of an officer from Prince Albert. The prisoner is only 18 years of age.

Meat and Fish Standards.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—Meat and fish standards have been adopted by order-in-council. They are of highly technical nature, and refer to constituent parts of meat and fish, as well as of meat and fish products. The standards prescribe the chemical composition of lard, bacon, sausage and so forth.

Improved Winter Service.

Port Arthur, Oct. 24.—The passenger train service heretofore applying only to summer on the C.N.R., between Port Arthur and Winnipeg, will be continued through the winter, with practically no change, and the service between Port Arthur and Duluth will be improved, by the addition of through sleepers both ways.

AERONAUTS HAVE TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE IN WILDERNESS

America II. is Now the Only Balloon Missing, and She is Believed to Have Been Seen Travelling Towards Ungava—Dusseldorf Lands at Kiskisink

Toronto, Oct. 24.—Only one of the St. Louis balloons is now missing, the America II.; and according to the crew of the Germania, it was probably seen by a gang of railway navvies along the G.T.P. cnstruction in northern Quebec on Wednesday, heading for Ungava.

Lieut. Andrew Drew of the Missouri signal corps, and hydrographic expert of the Aero Club of St. Louis, gives the distances traveled by the aeronauts unofficially as follows:

Dusseldorf II. (Germany), landed at Kiskisink, Que., distance about 1,100 miles.

Germania (Germany), landed at Coocoo Cache, Que., about 1,040 miles.

Helvetia (Switzerland), landed at Ville Marie, Que., about 850 miles.

Isle de France (France), landed at Pogamasing, Ont., about 725 miles.

St. Louis IV. (American), landed at Hillman, Mich., about 550 miles.

Condor (France), landed at Two Rivers, Wis., about 410 miles.

Eighteen Thousand Feet Up.

Quebec, Oct. 24.—The German and Swiss balloons Germania and Helvetia came down some miles away from a G.T.P. construction camp in Northern Quebec, and their crews were lost for thirty hours, suffering greatly from cold and hunger. Capt. Hugo Von Obercron tells of the story of himself and August Blanckertz reaching Coocoo Cache on the Transcontinental, the cold driving them almost insane before reaching the camp fire.

The experience of hour after hour, almost running into days, that followed their landing, as related by Mr. Blanckertz, can only be equalled by tales of the early voyageurs in the trackless wilds of the Northland, and with the advantage very much in favor of the voyageurs, in that they had some knowledge of bush work. Half an hour's groping through the woods brought them to the edge of a small lake, from which rose myriads of wild ducks and geese, probably startled from their hounts for the first time by man.

When almost at their last gasp they saw the railway track and construction gang, which they reached at six o'clock Thursday afternoon, 32 hours after leaving the balloon. The construction gang were Bulgarian and Italian navvies, but Mr. Blanckertz says they were like princes to him, and their bunkhouse, where he slept that night, was cozier than any palatial hotel he had ever been in.

The navvies had seen the Germania descend, and were expecting the aeronauts. They also claim to have seen a yellow balloon, Mr. Blanckertz thinks probably the America II., one of the still missing balloons, proceding the Germania by half an hour, and heading in the same direction. She was very high up, and maintained the same altitude until she passed out of sight toward the Ungava wilderness.

Missing Balloon Lands.

Kiskisink, Jue., Oct. 24.—The balloon Dusseldorf II., which landed on Wednesday 17 miles north of Lake Kiskisink, which is 130 miles northeast of Quebec, had a perilious journey of 1,240 miles, attaining a speed at one time of seventy-five miles an hour.

Gericke and Perkins, the aeronauts, state they could have floated 36 hours longer, having fifteen bags of ballast still in store, but feared going further into the wilderness. Their route was from St. Louis to Milwaukee, then almost northeast. After crossing Lake Michigan, with a good wind, they were becalmed for five hours. Then they struck a tempestuous storm belt, and flew across the continent at great speed, making the landing very dangerous.

The shore of Lake Kiskisink was decided upon as a favorable point to land, but the valve refused to work when the Dusseldorf was 10,000 feet high, and the descent was made in nine minutes.

The balloon was rolled up, and the party started to walk toward the railway at 3 p.m., but by six o'clock only half a mile was made through the dense underbrush, and camp was struck for the night. In the morning it was decided to return to the balloon for extra provisions. On Thursday afternoon a second attempt was made to get out of the wilderness and on Saturday noon the balloonists were discovered, when only two miles from the starting point, by Theo Boivin, guardian of the Penn Fish and Game Club, who was making his fortnightly trip up the Kiskisink River.

The balloonists' whole trip was thrilling and interesting, many times hovering over the tree tops, and then to a height of 17,000 feet in quest of a favorable air current.

TO STOP MAN-SMUGGLING

Buffalo, Oct. 24.—Believing that an extensive traffic is being done in smuggling undesirable aliens over the river from Buffalo and Tonawanda, the Canadian immigration department has despatched special officers to watch the shore of the Niagara River between Bridgburg and Chippawa.

Chippawa will be the principal scene of the special officers' activities for it is believed that the chief landing place of the smugglers is a short distance above that village. The plans of the department in laying its trap were kept a close secret, but the fact that several officers had been sent to watch the border became known in the village along the river and caused a good deal of comment.

It is reported that the reasons which caused the department to watch the whole river front was the discovery of foreigners at inland points who had not passed at any of the regular ports of entry. This led to the conclusion that they must have been smuggled across the river.

Enquiry along the frontier produced stories of strange lights seen at lonely points at late hours, and of motor boats which made their way cautiously through the waters under cover of darkness. There were also statements of the foreigners caught which pointed to river smuggling, but none of the men who fell into the hands of the immigration officials would tell who had brought them across or where.

ANOTHER CRIMEAN VETERAN DEAD

Brockville, Oct. 24.—One of the few surviving Crimean veterans passed away at his home in this town, Edward Buckingham, aged 72, a conspicuous figure in Brockville for forty years.

When the Crimean war broke out, Buckingham, though only 16 years old, was accepted for service, being then almost six feet tall. He participated in many of the leading battles of the campaign, and, after peace was declared, came to Canada with the 37th Regiment, serving at Montreal and Quebec. He was a Fenian raid veteran also.

Buckingham contracted an illness while attending the recent Toronto Exhibition, from the effects of which he never recovered. His wife is dead, and there is no family.

FIRST WOMAN PREACHER DEAD

Elmira, N.Y., Oct. 24.—Rev. Annie Ford Eastman, who, with her husband, Rev. Samuel E. Eastman, held the joint pastorate of the Park Church (Congregational), made famous by the late Rev. Thomas K. Beecher, died here Saturday from uranic poisoning. Mrs. Eastman took great interest in the equal suffrage movement, and was the first woman to be ordained to preach in the Congregational Church.

HON. A. B. AYLESWORTH TELLS OF FISHERIES DISPUTE

Minister of Justice Says Humiliating Domination From Washington Would Have Been Canada's Lot if Britain Had Not Stood Faithfully by Colonies.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—"No separation" was the dominant note in the speech of the Minister of Justice to his constituents in North York at Newmarket on Saturday afternoon. It was Mr. Aylesworth's first public appearance since his return from The Hague, and naturally he turned to his experience there for a text. When Mr. Aylesworth, who was accompanied by Hon. George P. Graham, Minister of Railways and Canals, reached Newmarket he was tendered a complimentary luncheon. The Town Hall would not accommodate all the people who had assembled for the public meeting afterwards. An engrossed address signed by several hundred of his constituents was presented.

In replying to the welcome accorded him, Mr. Aylesworth's voice shook with emotion. He thanked them for their reception. After all that he had seen abroad he was glad to get back to the Province of Ontario with its kind hearts and kind faces.

Proceeding to his subject, Mr. Aylesworth reviewed the history of the fisheries' dispute. "Senator Turner, counsel for the United States at The Hague," said Mr. Aylesworth, "went the length of the contention that not only had the United States a right to be consulted and have a voice in the laws which governed the exercise of fishing operations in this Canadian territory, but they had a right to a part in the enforcement of those laws, if they did not agree to something which the Canadian Parliament might want to do, they had a perfect right, according to Senator Turner's argument, to enforce their own view by sending an armed force into these waters—by sending men-of-war. Because they had the right to a voice in the making of the laws, they had the better right to make the law, as, according to his contention, the effect of this treaty had been to make Canada or Great Britain subservient to the dominant power of the United States, of which the right to fish had been by treaty given."

Continuing Mr. Aylesworth declared, "any such contention, if it had prevailed, would have been intolerant in its humiliation, and would have left us in this respect governed from Washington. This was no fanciful possibility that was before us. This was a real and actual thing, in peril of which this country stood." He did not know how far the United States would have gone, but such was the principal of their whole position."

In conclusion, Mr. Aylesworth said that he had heard murmurs of dissatisfaction among Canadians that Great Britain was not at one with her colonies and was lukewarm toward them. He stepped forward to the edge of the platform, his eyes opened, the man seemed to grow larger, and exclaimed:

"And all the might and prestige and power of Great Britain stood by us, and the British Government has defended us with the strength of their right arm. We have gone through this strenuous struggle as a united community, refusing to be separated. Nevertheless, more than one effort on the part of the representatives of the United States was made before the tribunal to persuade the tribunal that these were little colonial difficulties, in regard to which the Government of Great Britain did not sympathise, in regard to which the Home Government was not with its colonies.

"I am glad to be able to tell you that from the first to the last of this dispute no spirit of wavering has even been exhibited, but that the Government of Great Britain, and Great Britain herself, in every way in which it could be done, has backed us on this side of the Atlantic; has stood by us and supported us in precisely the same way in which we in Canada tried, to the limit of our ability, to stand by our own colony of Newfoundland.

"Just as in every storm and every stress, these men stood firm by British institutions and British loyalty, so we, their sons, stand to-day. And so let me persuade myself that long after we, here, are gathered unto our final rest, that those who come after us will stand true to Great Britain and British institutions, until time itself shall make an end."

STEAMERS HELD FOR CHOLERA

New York, Oct. 24.—Five steamers were detained Saturday morning at quarantine, where rigid measures have been enforced for some time, in the effort to exclude cases from the cholera infected districts of Europe. The steamers were the Roma, from Marseilles; the Columbia, from Trieste; the Campania, from Liverpool; the Taormina, from Genoa and Naples, and the Irisbrook, from Huelva. The Irisbrook had lost her chief engineer, who died of dysentery during the voyage; the Campania had a second cabin passenger ill; and the Taormina had lost a steerage passenger, who died on Oct. 18 of gastroenteritis.

The Roma, not having stopped at any infected ports and all being well on board, was released. The Campania was held, to await examination in the case of the sick passenger; the Irisbrook, Taormina and Columbia were held for further investigation.

Welland, Oct. 24.—Miss Jennie Haren, a young woman residing at Stevensville, was picked up unconscious near the M.C.R. tracks just east of here yesterday morning. It is supposed that in returning from Buffalo she missed getting off at Stevensville, and in attempting to get off the train Saturday night, fell, being stunned, lying where she fell all night. It is expected she will recover.

ACQUITTED OF MURDER

Sweetsburg, Que., Oct. 24.—The jury in the case of William Richards, on trial here for the past two days on the charge of having murdered Leonard Dougherty of St. John, N.B., July 24 last in a drunken brawl, returned a verdict of "not guilty" yesterday afternoon. Both men had been drinking heavily the night of the tragedy in a shack owned by the Missisquoi Marble Co., and a quarrel arose, in which Richards, it was alleged, struck Dougherty a bow which caused the man's death.

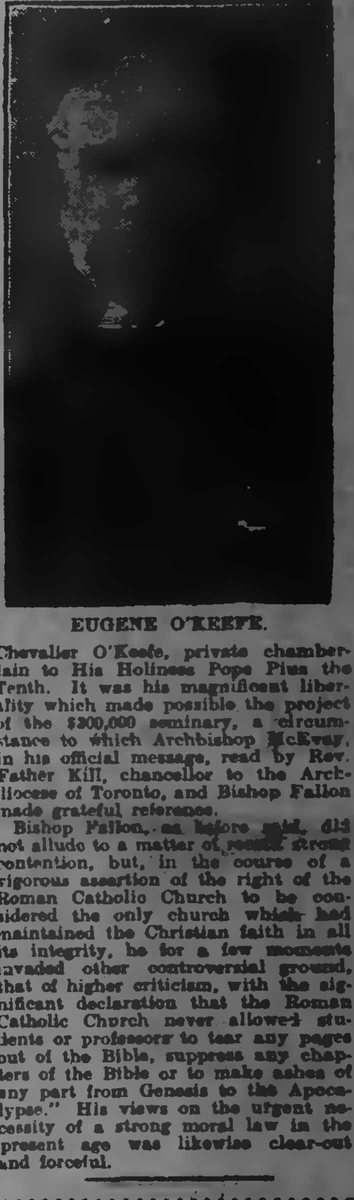
CORNER-STONE LAID YESTERDAY

Work of Eugene O'Keefe's Seminary Inaugurated at Toronto.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—In the presence of a gathering well representative of the Roman Catholic clergy and laity of the Archdiocese of Toronto, the elaborate ceremonial of laying the corner-stone of St. Augustine's Seminary, Scarboro Heights, was carried out by His Grace, Archbishop McEvay yesterday afternoon. The occasion was one of double thankfulness, in that it marked not only the founding of an institution which will undoubtedly be potent in augmenting the ranks of the priesthood, but that it signalled the return of the archbishop to official activity after a long illness, which has caused no slight anxiety.

There were two outstanding figures at the ceremonies in addition to his grace. Bishop Fallon of London was there, a stately and impressive personage in his robes, but easy of poise and of genial aspect with all. It was he who preached the dedicatory sermon, but he made no reference to bilingual schools. Then there was Chevalier O'Keefe, private chamberlain to His Holiness Pope Pius the Tenth. It was his magnificent liberality which made possible the project of the $300,000 seminary, a circumstance to which Archbishop McEvay, in his official message, read by Rev. Father Kill, chancellor to the Archdiocese of Toronto, and Bishop Fallon made grateful reference.



EUGENE O'KEEFE.

Bishop Fallon, as before said, did not allude to a matter of recent strong contention, but, in the course of a vigorous assertion of the right of the Roman Catholic Church to be considered the only church which had maintained the Christian faith in all its integrity, he for a few moments invaded other controversial ground, that of higher criticism, with the significant declaration that the Roman Catholic Church never allowed students or professors to tear any pages out of the Bible, suppress any chapters of the Bible or to make ashes of any part from Genesis to the Apocalypse." His views on the urgent necessity of a strong moral law in the present age was likewise clear-cut and forceful.

THE MURDERER

Luccheni, who killed Empress Elizabeth, of Austria, fourteen years ago, was sentenced to solitary confinement. He suicided the other day. Death is merciful, compared to solitary confinement. Crippen will be hung. If he is innocent a higher Judge will square matters. If he is guilty he is better dead. There is, however, one murderer who is never hung, and who thrives in every place where men and women gather. That is the murderer with the tongue. The murderer of a good name, the speaker of scandal and gossip. These people are scarcely ever apprehended. They get hold of one side of the story and commence to repeat it. It makes no difference whether the relator is a woman, arms akimbo, talking over the back yard fence, or a lady in evening dress at the home of her well-to-do friend. The poison's the same; the result's the same, and it's the same devil that prompts it. We kill those who kill others, we entertain those often who will later go out and, by the artillery of their tongue, kill us.

IN HOPES OF LARGER DIVIDENDS

Interstate Commerce Commission statistics give the alarming number of 8,722 persons killed on American railways in a year. The number of injured is reported, as being 86,000. These figures create an average of 24 deaths and 202 injuries for every day of the year. Still further reduced, the alarming fact is revealed that one person is killed for every hour of every day of the year. Reducing the number of injuries it is shown that 10.9 persons are victims of railway accidents in a single hour, an average of almost one victim for every five minutes of time. Until one studies these figures it does not seem possible, but the fact remains that one person is killed for every hour, and one person injured for every five minutes, all the victims of railway mishaps. Of the number killed and wounded only 259 of the dead were passengers, leaving about 8,500 railroad men the victims of these disasters of the rail.—St. Thomas Times.

Well, what odds, what are 8,500 railway men? They are only common clay, and so are the 15,000 widows, orphans and mourning sweethearts. THE DIVIDENDS MUST BE KEPT UP, EVEN AT THE COST OF LIFE, AND IT IS CHEAPER TO KILL MAN THAN TO RENOVATE A SYSTEM WITH SAFETY DEVICES.

Yes, perhaps here and there a man is careless, but its only here and there. Most of the killed were sacrifices offered at the shrine of the God Gold, a mangled offering in the hopes of receiving bigger dividends.

And the sixty-five thousand injured. Oh that army of cripples, one eyed, one legged, one armed, footless, toeless, earless ones. Well, they are alive, but the army of eight thousand five hundred railway men who are dead, what of them? It would make a ghastly grave, wouldn't it, if these 8,500 bodies were buried at once.

And how would a monument, with these letters read:

"SACRED DUST LIES HERE. AN OFFERING OF 8,500 HUMAN BEINGS IN HOPES OF LARGER DIVIDENDS."

THANKSGIVING

Thanksgiving is coming. Are we thankful, or are we of the opinion that this is a damn mean world? Let's be glad and thankful. Thankful for our friends and for our enemies. Our friends won't hurt us and our enemies can't. So what odds, let's be happy and glad. May we be thankful that we are living in this day. Our ancestors read by the light of the tallow dip. We turn a button and night is robbed of its terrors. Our forbears travelled in the ox cart or by the stage. We retire at night and awake in New York, Chicago or Montreal. They feared the storms on the ocean, the Indians, the wolves, the bears. The wildest wave the fiercest gale is turned to day by the ingenuity of man. The Indians, the bear, the wolf—we read of them in story books. We see the Indian painted and feathered in the moving picture shows. Thanksgiving, and what are we thankful for? We are glad we are alive. We have seen the slow procession, we have read the obituary. We might have been in the hearse, the obituary might have been ours. We are thankful that we live in Canada. We might have been born in Russia and been lashed by Cossacks, or in India, or in Africa. But we are here in Canada, the brightest spot in the world. We are proud that we are here. Some day, and not too far distant at that, the whole world will watch us, the whole world will envy us. We have the land, we have the temperature, the heat of summer, the cool of autumn, the cold of winter and rains of spring. We are rugged, we are hopeful, we are a great people, and one week from to-day will be Thanksgiving.

Some will go on a visit home, some will go shooting, some will watch road races, some will attend the theatre. The world will forget it is Thanksgiving. But a few will remember and a few will withdraw a while apart.

Thanksgiving Day, 1910. What will it be in 1920?

LAURIER'S TWO VOICES

On August 8th last, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, speaking at Regina, on the navy, said; "But if the time ever comes that the old land is in stress, in danger, no matter from what source, we will remember your pledge and count on you for flag and King and Empire."

Speaking at Prince Albert on July 27th, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, according to the report of the 'Globe,' said; "In the event of necessity the Motherland would find Canada a leader among her daughters in coming wholesouledly to her aid. It was a true Canadian plan, and, being a true Canadian plan it was a true British plan."

Contrast the foregoing utterances of the Prime Minister in the west with what he said in Quebec at the meeting in Montreal on October 10th. He said; "I have simply to call your attention to two things provided for this naval law. It simply decrees this, that the Government of Canada should organise another naval service, and that this service should remain entirely under control of the Government of Canada. Outside of this there is not a single word which would give to Great Britain that which she demanded in 1902—the organization of a war service to be put at the disposition of the War Office. Not one word."

And again, "But is it true to-day that according to this naval law our fleet once organised would be obliged to take part in all wars of the Empire? According to law the control of the Canadian marine would at all times belong to the Government of Canada. Clause 23 provides—in critical times the Governor-in-Council may put the marine or any part of it at the disposal of His Majesty for general service in the Royal Marine.'

"The Government, the Parliament, the people of Canada, can put our marine at the service of the King, but no one else can do so, and anyone who says to the contrary to the express provision of this law simply mocks the public."

And once again, "Does it follow that because we are exposed to attack we are going to take part in all the wars of the Empire? No. We shall take part if we think proper."

Thus we see that Sir Wilfrid Laurier uses remarkably different language on the prairies and in Quebec.

DRIFTWOOD

Last night Rev. Robert Pogue speaking in St. Paul's church, said that on the Alaskan coast was a spot that was known as Driftwood Coast. Here was to be found wood from China, South America, from all parts of the world. Parts of vessels, parts of trees, anything that would float, that had no rudder, that was the victim of the peculiar current that eventually landed them there. Driftwood lives are seen everywhere. Some men have to beat before the storm, some men tack, but they get going again. There are hosts of men however, who live DRIFTWOOD LIVES. They have no ideal in life, no port to attain, no goal, no object. They see other chaps passing them. They wonder why. There are hosts of young women, who also live this DRIFTWOOD LIFE. They too have no ambition; no purpose. The next dress, the next dance, the next show. So they likewise wonder when they see a friend once their equal, now mentally and socially outstripping them in the race.

THE DRIFTWOOD LIFE most of us are living it. Rare indeed is the man who doesn't pull down his sail some time or other, let go the rudder, and take a snooze. Look at the bunch on the street at night, hither, thither, anywhere. But from some room you find the light shining solitary, late into the night where some student, some one is studying.

THAT ONE IS STEERING FOR SOMEWHERE, SOME POINT IN LIFE.

"The heights by great men reached and kept,
Were not attained by sudden flight,
But they, while their companions slept
Were toiling upward in the night."

REASONS WHY WE DON'T SEEK RECIPROCITY

Authorities say that free trade in coal would greatly cripple the Nova Scotia government by depriving it of a large proportion of the income it now derives from coal royalties.

We cannot afford to give up a stable market in Great Britain for an uncertain opening in the United States that may be closed by a sudden revolution of political feeling such as that which occurred forty-four years ago. The average Canadian still remembers the wormwood and the gall of the succeeding years.

There is a growing suspicion that some of the advocates of reciprocity may be in the pay of those wealthy interests across the line which could afford to subscribe almost any sum to secure a free run of the Canadian markets.

A great majority of Canadians, whether they be Liberals or Conservatives, are opposed to further tariff concessions to the United States.

Many American advocates of reciprocity frankly regard it as a step towards political fusion.

National and Imperial interests demand that we make no entangling trade treaty with our neighbor, that we stand by the Empire and our own industries, transportations, systems and seaports, and that we do any necessary tariff tinkering with a view to our own position and without regard to the United States.

It is important not to confuse the movement for reduction of duties with that for reciprocity. If the country so decides we can lower duties without any entangling agreement with the United States. If Washington desires better trade relations with Canada, Congress has only to reduce the customs taxes to the level of the Canadian tariff.

WOMEN MURDERERS

We notice in an American paper that American women—society women, especially—are taking to the nursing of toy babies. The new toy, which is known as the bisque baby, had its origin in Paris, of course, and is designed as a doll for grown-ups, it is said to be most properly displayed at receptions and automobile parties. "When brought into the domestic circle, judiciously wrapped in a blanket and correctly cradled in a motherly arm, it produces an undeniable impression." No doubt it will help to serve the purpose of keeping alive some traces of the maternal instinct in fashionable circles where children are unfashionable. — Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

WOMEN MURDERERS we would call these women. And as sure as God is in His heaven they will suffer for their sin. Yes, and they do suffer—operations, withered frames, premature decay, divorces, unrequitted love, the empty home in life's later hours. What more pitiable object could be seen than the woman who, refusing to be a mother, longs for the child when outraged Nature denies her! There was a SODOM, but no mention of BISQUE BABIES is made by even the most remote historians.

A FAIR CALLER

A lady called into the Review Office the other day offering tickets for sale for a local function. She was a charming lady, but we made our minds adamant and did not buy. Now, how is it that people will come to a newspaper office and offer tickets for sale? The newspapers are everlastingly giving free write-ups and elaborate reports also free of charge to affairs far out of proportion to their news value. The Review does it, so do the other papers. So do the papers in Hamilton, in London, in Ottawa, Brantford, St. Thomas, Toronto, Havelock, Jericho and Jerusalem. We think that when we have to attend these things, good bad and indifferent, we should at least have tickets provided.

J. RANSOM HOWITT, M.L.A.

J. Ransom Howitt, M.L.A. for South Wellington, is a clever young fellow. He has a wealthy and clever father and a very clever brother. His father is a doctor, one of the best surgeons in the province, and his brother seems to follow in his dad's footsteps. J. Ransom has only one fault, he parts his name in the middle, but he is a whole souled chap. He will be a man for the masses and not for the classes. He is not a fellow who will make a lot of promises and not keep them. We know Ransom Howitt well, and we have no hesitancy in saying that he will be heard from. Howitt is a lawyer by profession.

OUR BOARD OF TRADE

We are glad to know that when the weather gets cold the Board of Trade of Peterborough gets warm. This body has many resolutions to its credit, and will doubtless deal with many more important questions before Spring.

WE DENY IT

Harmsworth, the man who runs the London Mail, says we all over America are a bunch of imitators, that we all dress alike, wear our hair alike, eat the same food and live in the same kind of houses. He says we are simply imitative and without creative originality. That's a joke, isn't it. Harmsworth stole his ideas when he commenced running the London Mail. He poses as being original when he swiped the very idea from the New York papers that made him great and won him a title. He is a shrewd, sharp fellow. Yes we all wear the same clothes, pants, vest, coat, collar and shirt, and socks and boots. In England some chaps have no vest or coat. They go around in a shirt and trousers and boots, but no socks. They are not non-imitators, nor are they creative, they are damn poor, that's all. We eat the same thing, bread and butter and potatoes, meat and eggs and butter. We drink tea, coffee and milk. They eat from garbage barrels. Their children follow the workmen as they leave the great shops and works, pleading for a few crumbs from the workmen's boxes. This is, however, original. Let Harmsworth direct his thoughts to his own constituency if he wants to see something novel creative and not imitative.

SIDE LIGHTS

I AM YOUR WIFE

(Old Clipping)

Oh, let me lay my head to-night upon your breast,
And close my eyes against the light, I fain would rest,
I'm weary and the world looks sad; this worldly strife
Turns me to you; and oh, I'm glad to be your wife!
The friends may fail and turn aside, yet I have you,
And in your love I may abide, for you are true—
My only solace in each grief and in despair;
Your tenderness is my relief; it soothes each care.
If joys of life could alienate this poor, weak heart
From yours, then may no pleasure great enough to part
Our sympathies fall to my lot. I'd e'er remain
Bereft of friends the true or not, just to retain
Your true regard, your presence bright, thro' care and strife,
And, oh! I thank my God to-night, I am your wife!

Life Insurance

Many a father is going to mortgage the house in town or the farm in the country this Fall that the son may go to college. Possibly that "rainy day" fund is going to be drawn upon for this purpose. I have enough faith in Canadian youth to believe in such investments. The son intends to pay back to his father every cent just as soon as he gets into business for himself. With but an exception now and then, he will—IF HE LIVES. It is the latter point I want to emphasize. Life is not a certainty. A glance at any college catalogue will show the asterisk in the list of students and the word "deceased" at the bottom of the page. Frequently there is added to the loss of the son the LOSS OF THE COST OF HIS EDUCATION. The latter may mean the loss of the home. One of the legitimate uses of life insurance, it seems to me, is to take care of just such cases. The cost of life insurance for the son is very slight, because he is young and a good risk. It adds but little to the financial burden. In return it gives full protection to the parent, and in later years—after college debts are paid—it safeguards the home which the son sets up for himself. No son who can get insurance has the right to mortgage his father's or his mother's future happiness when there is such a good way to avoid it. One word more, young man. Be sure that your insurance is in a well established, responsible company.

Someone has said, "The true value of a life assurance policy must be gauged by the security of the protection given; if it proves to be a good investment, all the better; when both are shown, there is nothing on earth to equal it."

The security of the protection afforded by the SUN LIFE OF CANADA needs no comment, and the profits paid—let the figures within tell their own forceful story.

A Gentleman From Mississippi

By THOMAS A. WISE

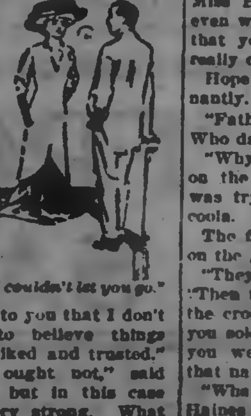
Novelized From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY THOMAS A. WISE

"Yes, Miss Hope Georgia."

As the senator's younger daughter came toward him he noticed that she was excited over something, and for a newly made cynic he took altogether so much notice of her youthful beauty, her fresh, rosy complexion and her dancing, sparkling eyes. The thought occurred to him, "What a woman she will make—if she doesn't imitate her sister!"

"I couldn't let you go, Mr. Haines, without telling you goodby and letting you know that, no matter what the others say, I don't think there has been anything wrong."



"I couldn't let you go."

Before Haines could reply the young girl rushed on excitedly.

"That's why I came. I know father and Carolina won't like it—they won't think it's nice—but I wanted to say to you that I don't think one ought to believe things against one you've liked and trusted."

"You think one ought not," said Haines. "So do I, but in this case the proofs were very strong. What are you going to do when people you can't doubt pledge their word?"

The girl tossed her head.

"Well, the only one's word I'd like to take would be the person accused. I know I'm only a girl, Mr. Haines, and I'm not grown up, but you've made a mistake. Do try to clear things up. Why don't you see father and talk to him? Please do, Mr. Haines."

Little realizing that the girl was speaking in his own favor, for he knew not the need for such speaking, he believed her to be defending her father. He grasped her hands impulsively.

"You have grown up very much since you came to the capital, haven't you?" he said. "And you are right, Miss Hope. I ought to have known even when the facts were against him that your father couldn't have been really crooked. He can't be."

Hope Langdon's face flushed indignantly.

"Father crooked? Who said so? Who dared say that?" she exclaimed.

"Why, they told me he had sold out on the Altacoola bill. They said he was trying to make money on Altacoola. That's why I quit."

The flame of anger still was spread on the girl's face.

"They said that!" she exclaimed. "Then they lied. They said you were the crooked one. Why, father thinks you sold out on Altacoola. They said you were trying to make money on that navy yard."

"What! They said I was crooked!" Haines fairly shouted. He rushed around the desk and caught the girl by both hands.

"I see it!" he cried. "I see it! There's something I'm not just on to. You thought it was I; your father thinks"—

"Of course," exclaimed Hope, quite as excited as he. "I couldn't believe it. That's why I came back to get you to explain. I wanted you to disprove the charge."

"I should say I would," cried the secretary.

"I knew it, I knew it! They couldn't make me believe anything against you. I knew you were all I thought you. Oh, Mr. Haines, prove you are that for my"—

Then Hope Georgia abruptly stopped. She had lost her head and in the enthusiasm of the moment had revealed her real feelings—something she would never do presumably when she grew more wise in the ways of women.

She suddenly thrust Haines' hands from her own and stood staring at him, wondering—wondering if he had guessed.

Strangely enough, under the circumstances, the girl was the first to recover and break the awkward silence.

"Come to our house tonight, Mr. Haines. There's to be a dinner and a musicale, as you know, but that won't matter. No matter who says no, I promise you that you shall see father. There shall be an explanation."

"Thank you, Miss Hope. You don't realize all you've done for me," said Bud seriously. "It's a wonderful thing to find a girl who believes in a man. You've taught me a lot, Miss Hope. Thank you."

"Goodby, Mr. Haines. Come tonight," she said as she turned and hurried away.

Bud Haines stood looking after her thoughtfully.

"What a stunning girl she is! I've seemed to overlook her, with the rush of events—and Carolina," he murmured softly. "We never were such very great friends, yet she believes in me. What a beauty she is!"

A messenger boy broke in on his musings with a letter for Senator Langdon marked "Important."

"Guess I'm secretary enough yet to answer this," he thought, tearing it open.

"Great heavens!" he exclaimed as he read it. "Here's the chance to get to the bottom of this Altacoola proposition. It's from Peabody."

Hope Georgia Langdon, girlish and vivacious.

Haines read the following:

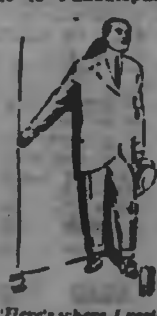
Dear Senator Langdon—I am going to Philadelphia tonight. Urgent call from a company for which I am counsel, so I probably won't be able to confer with you regarding the committee's choice for the naval base. But I know you are for Altacoola and trust to you to do all you can for that site. I of course consider the matter definitely settled.

"This situation will enable Langdon to bluff Peabody and draw out of him all the inside of the Altacoola business—ought to anyway. Guess some Gulf City talk will smoke him out."

Haines rushed out and across the hall, to reappear literally hauling in a stenographer by the scruff of the neck. "Here, you, take this dictation—record time," he cried:

Senator Horatio Peabody, Louis Napoleon Hotel:
You are going to Philadelphia tonight, I know, leaving the report on the naval base to me. I have just come on various aspects of the situation which make me incline very favorably toward Gulf City. I am looking into the matter and, of course, shall act according to my best judgment. That is what you will want me to do, I know. Sincerely yours,
WILLIAM H. LANGDON.

"I don't think Senator Peabody will go to Philadelphia tonight," laughed Haines grimly as he addressed the envelope, "and I think that when the 'boss of the senate' hurries around to the Langdon house instead there will be more than one kind of music, more than one kind of food eaten—perhaps crow—before the evening is over."



'Here's where I resign as senator.'

Seizing his hat, Bud rushed to the door to look up a messenger.

"It's all in Langdon's hands now," he cried. "Here's where I resign my position as United States senator."

CHAPTER XVII.

THE CONSPIRATORS OUTWITTED.

SENATOR LANGDON'S dinners had well won popularity in Washington. Invitations to them were rarely answered by the sending of "regrets." He had brought his old Mississippi cook from the plantation, whose southern dishes had caused the secretary of state himself to make the senator an offer for the chef's services. "No use bidding for old General Washington," said the senator on that notable occasion. "He wouldn't leave my kitchen, sir, even to accept the presidency itself. Why, I couldn't even discharge him if I wanted to. I tried to let him go once, sir, and the old general made me feel so ashamed of myself that I actually cried, sir."

Peabody and Stevens were the dinner guests tonight, as they were to confer afterward with Langdon and settle on the action of the naval affairs committee regarding the naval base. The three, being a majority, could control the action of the committee.

Senator Peabody had finally postponed leaving for Philadelphia until the midnight train in order to be present, he assured Langdon as the trio entered the library. The girls, Norton and Randolph were left to oversee preparations for the prominent Washingtonians invited to attend the musicale to be given later in the evening.

Carolina and Hope Georgia were in distinctly different moods—the elder, vivacious, elated over the bright outlook for her future; the younger, cast down and wearing a worried expression. Norton and Randolph in jubilant spirit tried to cheer her and, failing, resorted to taunts about some imaginary love affair.

The courage of the afternoon, which had enabled her to speak to Haines as she had, was gone; girlish fears now swept over her as to the outcome of the evening. Haines had not come! Was he really guilty and had promised to come merely to get rid of her? Why was he late? If he did come, would she be able to have her father see him, as she had promised? If she failed, and she might, she would never see this young man again.

To be continued.

CZAR OF HIS SHIP

The Captain of an Ocean Liner Is a Real Autocrat.

HIS WORD IS ABSOLUTE LAW.

He May, If He Deems It Necessary, Put a Passenger in Irons or Clap Him in a Cell, and in Cases of Emergency Is Empowered to Take Life.

Imagine a mayor or a judge of a circuit court or a county sheriff or a town marshal of a village of 3,800 population stepping out into the street and on general and self imposed authority picking up a citizen, ordering him to a cell and clapping irons on him for safe keeping!

Wouldn't the bird of American liberty set up a scream? Wouldn't the old and badly cracked Liberty bell resonate in discord?

After one of the great transatlantic passenger steamships leaves the three mile limit of New York the passenger is in foreign territory on the high seas. English, French, German—whatever the flag at the masthead—the ship is a section of its fatherland, floating in the high seas, where only maritime laws regarding its transit in times of peace may hold check upon the czardom of the ship's commander, on or off the bridge.

No czar has more power within his territory than has the captain of the great Atlantic liner on the high seas. He is on an island of his country's ownership—a floating island, having a population of 800 employees and looking after the welfare and safety of perhaps 3,000 passengers. He is practically the administrative, executive and judicial single individual, such as exists rarely on the map of present day civilization. Aside from his authority over mankind, he may have $7,000,000 of vessel under him, to say nothing of the international mails and millions in gold in transshipment.

"There's the captain," is a whispered bit of comment made a million times a year in the beginning of the passages of great ocean steamships. And generally the captain looks the part.

It is not so much his uniform either. Ordinarily the captain is not young. There is gray in his hair, mustache or beard. That young man in his twenties, no matter what his schooling for beginning the work, isn't called at a moment's notice to the captain's bridge. He must have his maximum of training for six or seven numbers below before he is called to the foot of the ladder.

On the British passenger vessels most of the beginners at navigating an ocean vessel of the first class will have had a lieutenant's commission from the navy. It is from the royal navy reserves that the lowest officer's vacancy is filled. Filling it, he has his chance to rise to the position of captain.

As to the captain's authority: One midnight, when in a fog the White Star Baltic struck the German oil steamship Standard, the Baltic needed its captain, and he was there. His ship carpenters were rushed to the bow of the vessel and began the work of patching up the hole in the Baltic's steel sheathing.

Suppose that in a stampede of the Baltic's crew its employees had rushed up to fill its boats? It was within the captain's power to have shot down the leader—to have brought about war to the knife, revolver and rifle in the interests of his vessel and its passengers. Or had some passenger or passengers become panic stricken and against orders menaced the welfare of the majority on the ship death would have been dealt with the same rigid discipline which requires of the captain that he be the autocrat at his post.

There are no forms of writs or warrants necessary. There is no court at which the passenger or the seaman may give bond. In that instant of sudden great emergency which arises the captain's word is more than written law; it is the unwritten common law of the high seas, in the spirit of which the vigilance committee of the wild west of the United States rose, lawlessly lawful.

Today the captain of the great liner may step into the palatial cabin and command order. He may go into the smoking cabin and stop the game of cards at which the sharper is playing for his stakes. In case of refusal that ancient land right of "no deprivation of liberty without due process of law" becomes a farce. The cell room or even the iron manacles of the captain's authority may be used upon the individual who has paid $500 or $1,000 for his suit of rooms and his passage. On the high seas the captain's ship becomes an autocratic democracy. The individual in the first cabin and at the captain's table must share with the immigrant far below those equities that are granted to each in his place.

"Don't buck the captain," said an official in the offices of a great steamship line. "He is all there is of authority. He is the supreme entity of his ship. He is dressed for it; but, more than that, he is trained to it. He is empowered to take life if he must, and on land this is the most serious of all things in the statute books."

"Commodore of the fleet" is one of the offices toward which the old sea captain looks, not enviously, not with disdain. It is a naval number in the passenger service which marks the age of retirement. There is honor in the title. It does not descend to his children. He gives half his life to the gaining of it, and it means that his activities and powers are at an end.—Chicago Tribune.

In Prince Rupert, B. C., the mayor is paid $2,000 a year, and the eight aldermen $350 each.

THE ANGLE OF REPOSE.

Depends Wholly on the Friction of the Materials in Contact.

The angle of repose is a well known term in the science of mechanics, but, besides being used in purely theoretical problems, is taken into account by railroad and other engineers. Suppose that we take a brick and lay it on a board and then gradually raise one end of the board. There will be a certain angle reached in time where the brick will not remain at rest on the board, but will start to slide down.

This is termed the angle of repose of the brick on the board. It is at that point where the component of force due to gravity overcomes the resistance due to friction between the two surfaces. Therefore the angle depends entirely on the friction. Friction varies with the materials in contact. So the angle of repose of a brick on a pine board would be different than its angle of repose on an iron board, say.

Now for the application of this in ordinary life. When a railroad cut has to be made the sides have to be sufficiently slanting to keep the earth or clay from caving in. The same applies when a ditch is dug or when fortifications are built in time of war. The angle necessary for this is of course the angle of repose of the particular kind of material through which the cut is made as measured by itself on itself, as it contains millions of individual particles in contact. The angle in this instance is determined with utmost ease and simplicity. A pile of the material is put into an open cylinder, packed down slightly, and the cylinder is then removed. Of course the pile immediately slumps down into a mound with slanting sides, the angle of which is the one wanted. This angle is somewhat smaller than the one that would be taken by compact earth and therefore allows a good margin of safety.

There are tables got out for the engineer to refer to, but it is always wiser to make a trial for every particular condition of the soil, for there are hardly two cuts made through exactly the same kinds of material in exactly the same condition.—Chicago Record-Herald.

BAIT FOR SARDINES.

Bretons Coax the Tiny Fish With Salted Eggs of the Cod.

Sardine fishing forms the chief industry of Brittany. In an average season the Brittany sardine fishermen catch 100,000,000 to 150,000,000 pounds of sardines, for which they receive anything from £200,000 to £600,000, while the shore industries dependent upon this fishery give employment to 20,000 other persons, mostly women and girls. So important is the sardine that in many communities in Brittany every person is directly or indirectly supported by it, and the failure of the fish to come means ruin, starvation and death to many people in the more isolated places.

Sardines are found on the coast of Brittany throughout the year, but flourish in greater abundance in summer and autumn. As many as 100,000 have been taken at one time in one net from one school. One remarkable feature of sardine fishing in Brittany is the enormous amount of bait which is used. The bait in general use is the salted eggs of the codfish, and it is estimated that the Breton fishermen pay £70,000 every year to Norway for cod roe for use as bait.

The casting of the bait, on the proper use of which a great deal of the success of the fishing depends, is always done by the captain of the boat, who stands on a little platform in the stern and while directing the movements of the boat and the manipulation of the net throws the bait to attract the fish to the surface and around the boat. When the fish are on one side of the net or on the other his next move is to cast the bait in such a way as to cause them to rush against the net and thus become gilled.—London Tit-Bits.

Deaf as an Adder.

The expression "deaf as an adder" is from the Psalms of David, where it appears in the following form: "Their poison is like the poison of serpents. They are like the deaf adder that stoppeth her ear, which will not hearken to the voice of charmers, charming ever so wisely." East Indian travelers tell us that there is a widely prevailing superstition in the east to the effect that both the viper and the asp stop their ears when the charmer is uttering his incantations or playing his music by turning one ear to the ground and twisting the point of the tail into the other.

His Favorite.

"Which is your favorite Wagnerian opera?" asked the musician.

"Lemme see," said Mr. Cumrox, appealing to his wife. "There are several that I never heard yet, aren't there?"

"Yes."

"Well, I reckon it's one of them."—Washington Star.

Poor Little Goose!

"Seems as if I can never find a decent quill in the house," growled the eighteenth century author.

"I think it would pay you to keep a goose," sharply retorted his wife.

"You mean one that would be of some help to me, don't you?" chortled the brute.—Detroit Free Press.

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

AN ELABORATE MUSICAL SHOW

Conservatively estimated, "The Midnight Sons" is said to be the most mammoth musical production ever seen on the American stage and this statement takes into account the elaborate pantomimes of a few years back and the stupendous summer shows which have since followed "The Midnight Sons" at the Broadway Theatre, New York. Over a year ago, Lew Fields, in conjunction with Messrs. Shubert, arranged for an elaborate musical show, which would be suited to fill the spacious stage of the Broadway Theatre which they had just recently acquired. "The Midnight Sons" was the result.

Doubtless the play will be longest remembered for its realistic theatre scene which makes use of nearly 500 people on the stage. Think of half a thousand people on the stage at one time. That is actually what occurs when the curtain goes up on the scene of the Merri Murry theatre in "The Midnight Sons" There is a miniature stage, then tiers of boxes, orchestra seats, with slanting aisles, balcony and even a gallery with the proverbial "gods" perched high up. This scene lasts for about 35 minutes and even then the audiences never seem to tire.

There are eight scenes and two acts thirty musical numbers; a chorus of 60, a stage crew of over 75, a special company of vaudeville artists and over 25 principals, singers and comedians.

As the Boston Globe observed: " 'The Midnight Sons' is a mad medley of mirth" Certainly, its equal has never been seen. It has aptly been described as America's modern Arabian Nights' Entertainment.

REV. C. CARPENTER'S ADDRESS ON "A GROWING IDEAL"

At the Princess Theatre men's meeting yesterday afternoon the Rev. C. Carpenter gave an address on "A Growing Ideal." He commenced by saying that a review of the centuries was necessary to comprehend the vantage point at which we had arrived by centuries of struggling. He showed that the Roman Empire was entirely Imperialistic; that Caesar was an autocrat of the first order, an absolute Imperial master, that the doctrine of the Empire was the survival of the fittest, and that the prominent ideal, was the idea of power on might, not right. Caesar is Caesar, all others are slaves. All the functions of civil government, finance, law and morals were in his hand.

Then there was the little kingdom of the Jews, their form of government was not imperialistic, but theoretical, or government by God as opposed to the Roman view that the greatest should rule, and the few should govern the many. The Jews fell away from their ideal, but law is eternal and therefore the ideal still kept working in this little Israel and four centuries later, Caesar humbled himself before the Son of Man, and realised that he was nothing more than an ordinary man in the sight of God.

The ideal set by Christ was that the rights of man should be observed and that all men are brothers in God's sight. The first victory over the Imperialism of Caesar was the teaching that man was a supernatural being.

After this came the Imperialism of the Church. The great mistake made was crediting one man with supreme power, calling him the vicar of Christ, and teaching that God would not deal with the individual man. The second victory for the growing ideal was when man rose, and said all men are brothers.

Martin Luther's teaching was "God made all things, and God is in all things, therefore God is in me." And how he pointed out the power of choice, and the right of private judgment. This brought down the autocracy or Imperial policy of the church, and allowed men to come into close contact with God, and to deal with him at first hand. Then the invention of printing, the progress of learning and science, made men begin to realize that knowledge was unfanthamable. Galileo demonstrated that the world was not a flat plain, but a globe and only a part of a marvellous planetary system, and man saw that he had only got a little way on the path of knowledge. The rev. gentleman wound up his subject by declaring that slavery degrades, oppression crushes, but liberty makes man master of his own convictions and just to others. God's laws have been given to us to uplift and enoble. Christ made men realize that they should no longer be self centered, but be really our brother's keeper, and uplift others by uplifting one's self.

The inherent power of manhood will conquer the world. To take man from slavery and degradation and to make him free for the uplifting of the world at large. This is the growing ideal.

Instrumental music and a sacred song was given by several friends during the afternoon.

A cordial invitation was given to all to visit the club room at 161 Antrim street any evening from 7 to 10.

BOARD OF WORKS MEETING

The Board of Works met Saturday night.

A letter was read from A. McDonald estate regarding water on George st. in front of their property. A report was read from the City Engineer on the matter. On motion of the Mayor and Alderman Graham, the City Engineer was instructed to have the matter remedied in accordance with his report.

The Street Commissioner was instructed to report on a complaint that the north side of Wolfe street held water on Mr. Carsliale's property and on a request for an approach on Rubidge street at Knox church.

A letter was read from W. H. Denham, superintendent of the Quaker Oats Co., regarding repairs needed to the sidewalk in front of the mill. Part of the walk will be reconstructed with cinders and the Quaker Oats Company will pay half of the cost, $84 is the cost, and supply the cinders.

Two catch basins will be put on Perry street between George and Aylmer street, at a cost of $35.

YESTERDAY AT THE Y.M.C.A.

(Was a Busy Day)

Yesterday was a busy day at the Y.M.C.A. At 9.30 there were two Bible classes being held simultaneously, one for boys taught by Mr. Tait, and one for men in the parlor. The lesson in the men's class was the old story of Christ and the Woman of Samaria.

The men's meeting at 4.15 was addressed by Mr. Gilchrist on the theme, "What's the use!" dealing with the spiritual indifference of the men of to-day. The cause of this indifference the speaker found to be not in the modern tendency to controversy, though that was frequently made as an excuse, nor in the fact that the church does not give what men want, but the secret is to be found in the fact that the vast majority of men are shallow in thought and that the cares of business and professional life, and the love of pleasure crowds out all thought of spiritual things.

The Mechanical Drawing Class held a good session on Saturday night. The available space at the tables was all taken up. The first lesson was intensely interesting. The next session will be held on Wednesday night.

The class in First Aid will meet for the first time on Wednesday evening at nine o'clock.

TWO MORE ARRESTS IN EDGAR ROBBERY CASE

The police have made two more arrests in connection with the robbery at James Edgar's premises on the night of October 6th.

Both appeared before the magistrate this morning, and Mr. G. N. Gordon, as counsel, declined to elect or plead. This brought the statement from his Worship that Mr. Gordon would not get another chance to elect in police court.

The case was enlarged till Tuesday, November 1st.

Bail to the amount of $500 and a surety of $250 in each case was demanded by the court.

EXECUTIVE OF RETAIL ASSO'N TO MEET THANKSGIVING

Preparations Well Under Way for the Big Convention to be Held at Peterborough Next February—Only a Few Spaces in Armories Not Yet Allotted.

(Hardware and Metal.)

The Executive Committee of the Ontario Retail Hardware and Stove Dealers' Association is to hold meetings in the parlors of the Queen's Hotel, Toronto, on the morning and afternoon of Monday, Oct. 31, Thanksgiving Day.

Committees are at work at Peterborough preparing for next February's convention and work will soon commence on the signs and decorations required for the Exhibition hall. A card is to be printed with a map of the business section of the city, showing the depots, hotels, armories, collegiate institute, city hall, hardware stores and hardware factories, and everything possible done to make the visiting hardwaremen comfortable during their stay.

At the meeting on Thanksgiving day, the details of the convention program will be decided upon, the arrangements for the exhibition completed and convention headquarters chosen. Some interesting features under consideration will also be discussed.

The exhibition is an assured success, as already about 60 of the 70 spaces have already been allotted. Several Peterborough hardware manufacturers have taken one end of the convention hall, about 80 feet in all, while several Galt manufacturers have reserved the opposite end for a "Made in Galt hardware exhibit." The Taylor-Forbes Company, Guelph, have taken 60 feet of space for an exhibit and definite word is expected pected during the coming week as to whether or not five Philadelphia firms will take up an option on a similar space. In addition to these special exhibits, 42 of the 61 booths in the body of the hall have been allotted to the following firms:—

Metallic Roofing Co., Toronto; Steel Trough & Machine Company, Tweed; Boeckh Bros., Toronto; Cummer-Dowswell, Limited, Hamilton; International Varnish Company, Toronto; Canada Paint Company, Montreal; James Robertson Company, Toronto; Dunlop Tire & Rubber Goods Company, Toronto; D. Maxwell & Son, St. Mary's; Standard Paint Company, Montreal; Dover Manufacturing Company, Canal Dover, Ohio; Moffat Stove Company, Weston; Gendron Manufacturing Company, Toronto; Supreme Heating Company, Welland; Pittsburg Fence Company, Hamilton; Lewis Bros., Montreal; Clare Bros., Preston; Onward Manufacturing Company, Berlin; Gillette Safety Razor Company, Montreal; Lufkin Rule Company, Windsor; McClary Manufacturing Company, London; Ferro-Steel Company, Bridgeburg; D. Moore Company, Hamilton; Brantford Roofing Company, Brantford; Tobin Arms Manufacturing Company, Woodstock; Dominion Register Company, Toronto; Carborundum Company, Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Imperial Varnish & Color Company, Toronto; Oneida Community, Limited, Niagara Falls; S. F. Bowser & Co., Toronto; Northern Aluminum Company, Toronto; Brandram-Henderson, Limited, Montreal; Pinchin-Johnson Company, Toronto; Gutta Percha & Rubber Company, Toronto; Benj. Moore & Company, Toronto; Metal Shingle & Siding Company, Preston, and F. W. Bird & Son, Hamilton.

It is expected that the remaining spaces will be allotted during the coming week and with practically all the available space taken up four months in advance of the convention the exhibition is certain to be an attraction worth going a long way to see, coupled, as it is, with a retailers' convention with many features of particular interest to merchants.

Wm. Magladery, Liskeard, has consented to act as chairman of the committee in charge of the Question Box discussion, and this end of the program will be particularly strong at the Peterborough convention.

A window dressing competition has been suggested in Peterborough hardware store windows during the convention, an opportunity being given visiting merchants to see the window trimmers assembling their displays. This and any other suggestions forwarded to the secretary will be considered by the executive.

The New House of Worship of th

Services--Largely Augm
Sunday

Sunday, October 23rd, marked the most important stage in the history of All Saints' church.

Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeney, of Toronto, emphasized this in the concise but comprehensive summary which he gave in the course of his sermon yesterday morning of the progress of All Saints' from the day of small things to the splendid position it has attained, as represented by the occupancy of the fine new church in which the first service was held yesterday.

The new church is a substantial edifice of Stoney Lake brown granite with dressings of Stanstead granite, heavily buttressed and fronted by a square tower. It is handsomely finished within in quiet, ecclesiastical style, and is seated for about seven hundred. When the sanctuary is completed it will accommodate a thousand worshippers.

At the services yesterday the seating capacity was employed to its utmost.

The morning service was conducted by Rev. Canon Davidson and the rector, Rev. H. R. Trumpour.

WHAT THE NEW CHURCH STOOD FOR.

The Bishop began his sermon by expressing his pleasure at being present on the occasion of the opening of the beautiful new church, which was an evidence both of the zeal of the rector and of the liberality and energy of the congregation. RULES FOR WIVES.

To Which Is Added Some Feminine Advice to Husbands.

Some presumptuous Frenchmen published a list of commandments for wives, one of which ran: "Now and then acknowledge gracefully that thy husband knows more about some things than thou. After all, thou art not infallible." A second and still more daring rule for wives was, "Never be aggressive in thy arguments with thy husband, but always consider him as superior to thee." This was too much for French feminists, and no wonder. One lady answers the presumptuous man indignantly:

The weaker sex has not merely duties; it has also rights. Feminism is advancing, and nothing will stop it. The weaker sex is the equal of the sterner. Equality forever! Here are the commandments which women oppose to those of men.

The lady then gives her rules for husbands with more spirit than logic:

Woman has a right to have whims; it is a privilege of her sex. Never put her out. She might have hysterics, which would impair her health and cost the money in doctor's bills.

Another commandment runs:

Remember, good man, that thy wife is thy superior by her grace, her beauty and refinement. Therefore always worship at her feet.

Where, then good lady, does "equality forever" come in, if woman not only has privilege because she is a woman, but is decidedly superior to man? Surely, the strong minded suffragist would spurn privileges of sex. In another rule the lady seems to show some sly knowledge of her sisters.

If, good man, thou desirest mountain air ask thy wife to come to the seaside; she will immediately propose a holiday in Switzerland.

But this is a very mild gibe at her own sex compared with her final thrust at the other in her last rule for husbands:

Man was created before woman as a preliminary sketch for the masterpiece. Remember, then, O husband, that thou art but a rough draft.

This ought to shut any husband up finally.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

Mrs. Jane White, the first white born in the township of Mara, died, aged 80.

TRAVELERS' TALES.

Some That Were Discredited and Vindicated Long Afterward.

Travelers' tales have often been accused of being mere flights of imagination, and in the past stay at home people have sometimes erred in treating travelers' tales with scorn. There was, for instance, the description by James Bruce in 1770 of the barbarous Abyssinian custom of eating raw meat cut from the living animal, which was ridiculed by everybody. Yet Bruce has even recently been proved right. When Paul Du Chaillu explored equatorial Africa in 1861 and described the wonderful gorillas and also the nation of dwarfs there he was discredited none too politely by the British Royal Geographical society. Yet subsequent explorers amply vindicated his veracity.

In the matter of discredited travelers' tales vindicated long afterward it will never be possible to beat the classic instance in Herodotus. He tells how King Neco of Egypt commissioned certain Phoenician mariners to circumnavigate Africa if they could. They did it, starting from the Red sea and returning by the straits of Gibraltar after very many months. And they reported, says Herodotus, that in rounding the southern end of Africa they had the sun on their right hand. "I, for my part," he says, "do not believe this, but perhaps others may."

In modern times that detail is precisely what proves that the Phoenicians did achieve the wonderful voyage. Such an "improbable" fact could never have been invented in an age which was not familiar with the equator.—Chicago News.

Two Cheerful Liars.

Two Americans were disputing as to which had experienced the greatest cold in winter. Said one: "In the part of Iceland where I was last summer the ground is frozen so hard all the year round that when they want to bury a man they just sharpen his feet and drive him in with a pile hammer."

The other replied: "Yes, I know that place. Didn't stay there long—found it not quite bracing enough for me. Went on to a small town farther north. The hotel where I was staying caught fire. My room was on the top story. No fire escapes or ladders in that primitive settlement. Staircases burnt away. Luckily, kept my presence of mind. Emptied my bath out of the window and slid down the icicle."—Truth.

Funny Stories.

"Ha, ha!" said the jovial man as he slapped an acquaintance on the back. "I'm glad to see you. I have one of the funniest stories on record, and you are just in time."

"I don't care for it," was the candid reply. "You see, there is often a pathetic side even to humor. I have just been out with my architect, and he showed me three of the funniest stories I ever saw. If I hadn't been paying for them I'd have laughed myself silly."

His Little Comeback.

Miss Neverstop, seating herself between two much engrossed senators, exclaims, "A rose between two thorns!"

"Nay, madam," retorts one irate old gentleman; "say, rather, a tongue sandwich."—Life.

TRIUMPHIANT

The New House of Worship of th
Lordship Bishop Sweeney, of Services--Largely Augm
Sunday

Sunday, October 23rd, marked the most important stage in the history of All Saints' church.

Rt. Rev. Bishop Sweeney, of Toronto, emphasized this in the concise but comprehensive summary which he gave in the course of his sermon yesterday morning of the progress of All Saints' from the day of small things to the splendid position it has attained, as represented by the occupancy of the fine new church in which the first service was held yesterday.

The new church is a substantial edifice of Stoney Lake brown granite with dressings of Stanstead granite, heavily buttressed and fronted by a square tower. It is handsomely finished within in quiet, ecclesiastical style, and is seated for about seven hundred. When the sanctuary is completed it will accommodate a thousand worshippers.

At the services yesterday the seating capacity was employed to its utmost.

The morning service was conducted by Rev. Canon Davidson and the rector, Rev. H. R. Trumpour.

WHAT THE NEW CHURCH STOOD FOR

The Bishop began his sermon by expressing his pleasure at being present on the occasion of the opening of the beautiful new church, which was an evidence both of the zeal of the rector and of the liberality and energy of the congregation. It indicated an historic epoch in the progress of the church and the religious interests of the parish.

In a sketch of the development of All Saints' he defined the various stages of the parish's growth. This had taken place in obedience to the law of expansion, which obtained in human as well as Divine affairs. His Lordship hoped that the achievements of the past would be continuous, and that All Saints' would long remain a centre of benevolent religious influence and a potent factor in upbuilding the highest interests of the community.

THE INSPIRATION OF THE NAME.

Referring to the name of the church—All Saints'—he spoke of the importance of names, instancing Solomon, the prince of peace, and the Savior of mankind, whose name, as the scriptures said, should be called Jesus, for He should save the people from their sins.

The name of All Saints' recalled the memory and life of those who had "departed this life in His faith and fear." The principles and practices of their lives in the church militant, which had brought them to the joys of the church triumphant, should be an inspiration to the ambition on the part of the congregation of All Saints' to emulate their lives, achieve their goodness and reap the rewards they were now enjoying.

MEMORIAL WINDOW DEDICATED.

During the service the bishop, assisted by Rev. Canon Davidson, dedicated and unveiled a beautiful memorial window in the north side of the church, representing our Lord's sermon on the mount. The window was erected by Mrs. T. E. Fitzgerald, the case, should not our spirits b raised in thankfulness!

"Let us thank Him for the gift of this splendid church, for the generous contributions this morning, for the feelings that influenced the donors of the large subscriptions, for the completion of this beautiful house of God. Praise God because there are those in our midst who have made sacrifices of time and money to promote the building of the church.

"On the other hand, it was a matter of regret that there were a few who did not respond, whose hearts were not as thankful as they should be. If all those of the congregation and parish had responded with uniform generosity there would be more than enough to furnish every portion of the church, and the whole congregation of All Saints' would praise God with one accord.

THE SOUL LIVES BEYOND.

"Do not make the mistake that all of life is the allotted three score years and ten. No. The soul does not go to darkness after death. God made us spiritual, and has met the responsibility well in providing for our future life. The supreme gift of God was to give His eternal Son for eternal salvation to eternal man.

"The main gift of God, notwithstanding what scoffers, infidels and atheists may say, is the gift of eternal life."

THE QUESTION TO ASK.

Do not be content with outward effort. Put all your heart and earnestness in it. Every day return thanks to God for what He has done

As a mat of fact, the King and Queen have nitely made up their minds that here shall be no formal investiture of their eldest son at all, and that he shall not take any part in public functions of any description until he is eighteen. At the same time His Majesty is very keenly interested in the discussion that is now taking place for the valuable sidelights that it sheds on Welsh history, and in following the claims of the rival towns most carefully. He is extremely cautious, however, not to express any opinion in favor of any one place, though he has been directly invited to do so by those who are at liberty to approach him upon the terms of intimacy.

The attempt to defraud was plain. The matter was at once put into the hands of the secret service division, and a man was sent west to investigate. The man who had made the affidavit confessed at once. He had cut the bills in halves and for one-half of them obtained $25. The other half he singed and attached to his affidavit. The gross profit of the swindle could not have been more than $25, and for that trifling sum the man forfeited his liberty for a year and a half.—Washington Star.

Calais and Its Lighthouse.

Calais is rather an untidy place for a French town. The Place d'Armes, where the tower of the Hotel de Ville has remained since the fifteenth century, is the center spot. Here Calais meets its friends and has its cafe noir. In the square, towering out of the roofs of surrounding houses and dwarfing them, is the old watchtower. Since 1848 it has been superseded as a lighthouse by the magnificent one at present in use. Never shall I forget the effect of this lighthouse as I stood under it that night. The revolving spokes of light cast away into filmy space in all directions, looked like the ribs of a huge umbrella being turned by the white handle, which was the lighthouse tower. So tall is this that its revolving light can be seen from a distance of twenty miles at sea.—Wide World.

Helping Him Along.

"What is all this straw doing in the roadway? Somebody sick?" asked the man passing.

"Easy!" said the man at the gate, holding up a warning finger. "There's a young man calling on my daughter tonight who has been coming to see her for six years. He's very easily frightened. We hope he's going to propose tonight, and we are taking every precaution against his being startled!"—Yonkers Statesman.

"Have you seen the barefoot burglar?" asks the Florida Times-Union. We have. THE CAR TO BUY

Russell-Knight

The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance

Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind :—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no value motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,[illegible] users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out-product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

The Human Frame

A WONDERFUL MACHINE

Edinburgh Scotsman.

There is nothing in the world so wonderful as the human body, nor so perfectly furnished for the work it has to perform.

The human skin is one of the most wonderful fabrics in the world. Flexible as silk, resistant as steel, tinted like the petal of a flower, tough as leather and almost translucent, it is the most superb non-conductor of electricity known. Its vitality is unconquerable, its power of repair almost unlimited. With a vascular mesh capable of containing half the blood in the body, it can adjust itself to almost any body, it can adjust itself to almost any extreme of temperature. With nearly three million flushing sweat glands it is absolutely self-cleaning. Practically nothing can get through the skin; and even most of the medicines which are rubbed in and supposed to be absorbed are volatilized by the heat of the body and inhaled by the lungs, or else act on the imagination by their color and odor.

But the wonders of the skin are as nothing to those of the nervous system. In the brain alone it has been calculated that we possess between five and ten million cells of various shapes and sizes, and these are only a small proportion of the total mass of the brain. Everywhere, all over the body, these little 'live wires' travel carrying the mandates of the will. Strange as it may seem, nerves are exceedingly bad conductors of electricity—so bad that they may be said to be absolute non-conductors.

Every part and organ of the body has its appropriate need. Even the eyebrows serve a useful purpose. Apart to their use in adding to the beauty of the face, they prevent perspiration from running down the forehead into the eyes. The tiny hairs in the nose prevent the ingress of solid particles, which would otherwise gain admission, and cause trouble in the breathing apparatus.

The wax in the ears, thought by some to be useless or dirty, is of great value. It gathers up solid particles and retains them; it prevents the entrance of insects, which might otherwise attack the eardrum and cause great trouble. As it is, they get their feet caught in the wax, as they do in 'tanglefoot fly paper,' and are easily extracted. The eyelashes add beauty to the face and prevent all sorts of small objects from entering the eyes. The hair and the nails are of almost identical composition and structure—though so unlike apparently; and while the former protect the fingers, the latter keeps the head warm, and should protect the neck if our hair were worn long, as it should be.

Nothing is useless. It may be thought that the outer layer of the skin—composed as it is entirely of dead cells, cast off from the lower layers—is useless. Not at all! Without this layer of dead cells we should be so sensitive that the slightest touch would cause us agony. We should even be unable to wear our clothes. More than that, we should be open to every blood disease which touched us with its virus. We know that, as it is, we are safe until the skin is punctured, and the poison finds its way into the blood stream. But without this top layer of cells we should be in constant danger of poisoning, and the race would become extinct before many moons had passed.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—The low water this year is a cause of alarm to the power users of the Otonabee River in Peterborough. There is no excuse for this low water except wastage and bad management. If there is let Supt. McClellan come forward with a statement from the power users that they are satisfied with what he has done for them. Last spring the weather was cool and more than the usual quantity of water fell all season, but Stoney Lake and the river seem not to have benefitted and now the water is so low that power users are becoming alarmed. Representations ought to be made to the Government at once. An inquiry might show what ought to be done to rectify matters. If the season had been a dry one there would have been worse trouble here than there was a few years ago. What is the use of spending the people's money on dams if they do no good.

Yours, &c.,
INQUIRER.

Dandruff Causes Falling Hair and Baldness

Baldness and Itching Scalp are Caused by Microbes.

There is no doubt about it. Doctor Sabouraud proved it when he infected a guinea pig with dandruff germs and all its hair disappeared in a short time. The entire medical world has accepted Dr. Sabouraud's discovery as final. Ask any worthy physician.

Paris leads the world in knowledge of diseases of the hair and remedies for the same.

And Parisian Sage which can now be obtained at leading druggists all over Canada is the one great remedy that kills the dandruff germs.

And that is why Wm. Madill says to every reader of the Review if Parisian Sage does not banish dandruff, stop falling hair or itching of the scalp in two weeks he will refund the purchase price.

Dandruff is the forerunner of baldness. Take care of your hair while you have hair to take care of. Kill the dandruff germs now before the dandruff germs kill your hair.

Use Parisian Sage, the guaranteed dandruff cure and hair dressing.

It is used extensively by ladies of refinement because it keeps the scalp absolutely clean and gives a bewitching lustre to the hair. Price 50 cents at W. Madill's and leading druggists everywhere. Girl with Auburn hair on every package. Made in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Company, Fort Erie, Ont. Mail orders filled, all charges prepaid.

"I was told of your great remedy, Parisian Sage, that it would grow hair on bal heads so I got a bottle and tried it, and it is fine. I am a young man and only 35, and was completely bald on the top of my head, and now I have hair one inch long, with the use of only one bottle. I shall certainly keep on using it until I have a good head of hair, which I have no doubt it will bring."—Oscar Armstrong, engineer, Belleville Horseshoe and Rolling Mill Co., Belleville, Ont., Aug. 31, 1909.

ANCIENT LUXURIES.

Silver Lined Cooking Utensils Used Twenty Centuries Ago.

While the housewife of today may reasonably pride herself on the conveniences which her kitchen affords, she need not smile too superciliously at the thought of the makeshifts of days long gone by. She would certainly not do so were she to spend a little time inspecting the kitchen and other household utensils that were in use 2,000 years ago, as exhibited in the national museum at Naples. Saucepans lined with silver, pails richly inlaid with arabesques in silver and shovels handsomely carved figure among the household goods of those times.

An egg frame that would cook twenty eggs at once and pastry molds shaped like shells suggest luxuries of the kitchen of 2,000 years ago. Gridirons and frying pans, tart dishes and cheese graters were in use then as now.

The Roman lady's toilet table was well supplied. Ivory combs, bottles of perfume, pots of cosmetics, buttons, hairpins and even a hair net of gold wire figure in the museum.

Bronze thimbles and spindles are to be seen among the relics. The Roman lady even had her safety pin, for there is a specimen of this little convenience which, before the one in the Naples museum was found, was believed to be a strictly modern invention.

The Roman lady, however, apparently lacked one essential. She had no hairbrush. Neither had she a glass mirror. All the mirrors in the museum, with one exception, are of silver or some other white metal. The exception is a dark purple piece of glass let into the wall of a bedroom at the house Specchio in Pompeii.

In surgical instruments the ancient world was rich. Those found at Pompeii deprive modern science of the credit of more than one invention. Needles, probes and forceps resemble closely those in use at the present day.—Harper's Weekly.

THE CZAR'S LEAVINGS.

A Doubtful Honor That Was Rejected by a Polish Girl.

In Russia royalty is so revered that to the loyal subject it seems a great honor to follow the czar. The government is eminently patriarchal—in theory, at least—and the emperor must supervise as well as patronize the schools. At the Easter festival the pupils are treated with especial favor. Young girls of the upper classes of the Imperial Girls' school are driven in a long procession through the streets in the imperial carriages. The pleasure for them is only that of being allowed to take a drive in a stylish court carriage, with coachman and footman in the imperial livery. There is nothing special to be seen.

The theory of this is that the czar stands in a sort of higher parental relation to all these children. When he once a year visits one of these schools—to which only the children of the nobility are admitted—it is a custom that as a sign of his favor he drops his pocket handkerchief, and the girls all scramble for it, tearing it in pieces, so that each one can get a fragment.

He takes the most brilliant girl to the table and tastes of the food of the institution. It is valued as the highest distinction when he gives one of the girls his plate with what is left upon it. It is the custom and usage for her to eat it with delight shown in all her features. Great was the astonishment of Alexander II. when a young girl, a Pole, whom the czar had taken to the table as being the most distinguished scholar of the institute and to whom he had passed what was left of his meat and potatoes, nodded to a servant and calmly gave him the czar's plate to take away.

An Unfair Attack.

Pietro was working with a gang at railroad construction. He had been told to beware of rattlesnakes, but assured that they would always give the warning rattle before striking.

One hot day he was eating his noon luncheon on a pine log when he saw a big rattler coiled a few feet in front of him. He eyed the serpent and began to lift his legs over the log. He had barely got them out of the way when the snake's fangs hit the bark beneath him.

"Son of a guna!" yelled Pietro. "Why you no ringa da bell?"—Everybody's.

Forget Once in Awhile.

The health of the body as well as of the mind depends upon forgetting. To let the memory of a wrong, of angry words, of petty meanness, linger and rankle in your memory will not only dissipate your mental energy, but it will react upon the body. The secretions will be diminished, digestion impaired, sleep disturbed and the general health suffer in consequence. Forgetting is a splendid mental calisthenic and a good medicine for the body.

First and Foremost.

"My wife has a great deal to say to me about her first husband."

"Nonsense! Your wife was never married before."

"I know it. That's what makes her reflections so painful."—Puck.

His Class.

"I say, my man, is that dog of yours a mongrel?"

"No, sah; ain't no class to 'im. Jes' common dog, sah."—Baltimore American.

The great mass of people have eyes and ears, but not much more, especially little power of judgment, and even memory.—Schopenhauer.

Wesley Hetham, of Shallow Lake, had his hand severely crushed in a factory.

RULES FOR WIVES.

To Which Is Added Some Feminine Advice to Husbands.

Some presumptuous Frenchmen published a list of commandments for wives, one of which ran: "Now and then acknowledged gracefully that thy husband knows more about some things than thou. After all, thou art not infallible." A second and still more daring rule for wives was, "Never be aggressive in thy arguments with thy husband, but always consider him as superior to thee." This was too much for French feminists, and no wonder. One lady answers the presumptuous man indignantly:

The weaker sex has not merely duties; it has also rights. Feminism is advancing, and nothing will stop it. The weaker sex is the equal of the sterner. Equality forever! Here are the commandments which women oppose to those of men.

The lady then gives her rules for husbands with more spirit than logic:

Woman has a right to have whims; it is a privilege of her sex. Never put her out. She might have hysterics, which would impair her health and cost the money in doctor's bills.

Another commandment runs:

Remember, good man, that thy wife is thy superior by her grace, her beauty and refinement. Therefore always worship at her feet.

Where, then, good lady, does "equality forever" come in, if woman not only has privilege because she is a woman, but is decidedly superior to man? Surely, the strong minded suffragist would spurn privileges of sex. In another rule the lady seems to show some sly knowledge of her sisters.

If, good man, thou desirest mountain air ask thy wife to come to the seaside; she will immediately propose a holiday in Switzerland.

But this is a very mild gibe at her own sex compared with her final thrust at the other in her last rule for husbands:

Man was created before woman as a preliminary sketch for the masterpiece. Remember, then, O husband, that thou art but a rough draft.

This ought to shut any husband up finally.—Paris Cor. London Telegraph.

TRAVELERS' TALES.

Some That Were Discredited and Vindicated Long Afterward.

Travelers' tales have often been accused of being mere flights of imagination, and in the past stay at home people have sometimes erred in treating travelers' tales with scorn. There was, for instance, the description by James Bruce in 1770 of the barbarous Abyssinian custom of eating raw meat cut from the living animal, which was ridiculed by everybody. Yet Bruce has even recently been proved right. When Paul Du Chaillu explored equatorial Africa in 1861 and described the wonderful gorillas and also the nation of dwarfs there he was discredited none too politely by the British Royal Geographical society. Yet subsequent explorers amply vindicated his veracity.

In the matter of discredited travelers' tales vindicated long afterward it will never be possible to beat the classic instance in Herodotus. He tells how King Neco of Egypt commissioned certain Phoenician mariners to circumnavigate Africa if they could. They did it, starting from the Red sea and returning by the straits of Gibraltar after very many months. And they reported, says Herodotus, that in rounding the southern end of Africa they had the sun on their right hand. "I, for my part," he says, "do not believe this, but perhaps others may."

In modern times that detail is precisely what proves that the Phoenicians did achieve the wonderful voyage. Such an "improbable" fact could never have been invented in an age which was not familiar with the equator.—Chicago News.

Two Cheerful Liars.

Two Americans were disputing as to which had experienced the greatest cold in winter. Said one: "In the part of Iceland where I was last summer the ground is frozen so hard all the year round that when they want to bury a man they just sharpen his feet and drive him in with a pile hammer."

The other replied: "Yes, I know that place. Didn't stay there long—found it not quite bracing enough for me. Went on to a small town farther north. The hotel where I was staying caught fire. My room was on the top story. No fire escapes or ladders in that primitive settlement. Staircases burnt away. Luckily, kept my presence of mind. Emptied my bath out of the window and slid down the icicle."—Truth.

Funny Stories.

"Ha, ha!" said the jovial man as he slapped an acquaintance on the back. "I'm glad to see you. I have one of the funniest stories on record, and you are just in time."

"I don't care for it," was the candid reply. "You see, there is often a pathetic side even to humor. I have just been out with my architect, and he showed me three of the funniest stories I ever saw. If I hadn't been paying for them I'd have laughed myself silly."

His Little Comeback.

Miss Neverstop, seating herself between two much engrossed senators, exclaims, "A rose between two thorns!"

"Nay, madam," retorts one irate old gentleman; "say, rather, a tongue sandwich."—Life.

FINE ADDRESSES ON TOPICS OF VITAL IMPORTANCE

Brigadier Hargrave, of Montreal conducted all services at the Salvation Army Temple yesterday and gave excellent addresses.

In the morning he spoke on the topic of "Lukewarm Christianity."

The speaker dwelt on the necessity of Christians living out and out in their convictions and lives, and living what they professed. He spoke of the force of example for the purpose of convincing others as well as living a Christian life for one's personal welfare.

At the afternoon meeting Brigadier Hargrave took as his subject the rich young man, Nicodemus. He brought out many commendable traits of the young man's character, and held him up as nearly perfect as a man could be in human qualities. And yet, when he came to the question of love for God he was sadly lacking and this nullified all of his other virtues. The lesson drawn was the necessity of the works of our lives springing from the love for God and of our willingness to deny ourselves in the promotion of the kingdom.

"Christ Crucified," was the subject of the address in the evening. In this the speaker emphasized the difference between mere religious formality and intellectual development, as contrasted with real spiritual life. He used Nicodemus as an illustration of how well a man might be instructed in religious matters and yet be a stranger to experimental religion, also how fully a man might be enlightened intellectually and yet how grossly dark he might be in spiritual things.

UNDER ORANGE AUSPICES WAS THE FUNERAL OF LATE MR CROWE

The funeral of Mr. Joseph Crowe on Saturday last, was in charge of members of the Orange Orders. It was largely attended, both by friends and members of the order.

The late Mr. Crowe was 70 years of age, being born in the County Monaghan Ireland, on Jan. 14th, 1840. In 1862 he was united in marriage to Miss Mary J. Agnew, and in 1863 came to Canada with their infant son, Charles, and settled in the vicinity of Peterborough, where he had resided until about four months previous to his death, when he removed to the home of his daughter, Mrs Robert Lewers, lot 14, con. 7, Cavan. His wife predeceased him in 1900. The deceased was a prominent and active member of the Royal Black Preceptory, 261, and Loyal Orange Lodge, No. 80. He was also a consistent member of St. Luke's Anglican church, since it was first built. In politics he was a Conservative.

In his illness he had the sympathy of a host of friends, both in Peterborough and in Cavan township, and the Christian forbearance and patience he manifested have made his life and death an example to all who came in contact with him.

The sons and daughters who are left to mourn him are:

Charles, of Peterborough; Joseph, of Winnipeg, Man.; John A., of Virginia, Wis.; Mrs. Robert Lewers, Cavan township; Mrs. W. J. Thompson, Preston, Ont.; Mrs. J. E. Marshall, Smith, township.

YOUNG LAD FROM DENVER DIES IN THE HOSPITAL

Particularly pathetic are the circumstances surrounding the death of little Arthur John Gale, a nine year old lad, which occured in Nicholl's hospital, Saturday night.

The boy's parents reside at Denver, Col. Some time ago, the boy while at home, had the misfortune to have the thumb injured by getting it caught in a cream separator. The wound though properly attended to, never seemed to heal altogether and intermittent blood-poisoning set in. The physician in Denver advised his parents to bring the boy to a climate where the altitude was lower.

His parents acting on the advice brought the young boy to Canada. While in Peterboro he was taken very ill with the disease. He was taken to Nicholl's Hospital, where after being confined about two weeks, and despite best medical attention, he succumbed. To make the case even more painful, his mother is also ill at the hospital.

The boy was a very bright, handsome young lad and much-loved by all who knew him.

The funeral will take place on Tuesday afternoon at 2.30 from the residence of Mr. Price, 87 Crescent Street to Little Lake cemetery. The service at the house and grave will be conducted by Rev. Mr. Riddiford.

CRIPPEN WILL HANG NOVEMBER THE 16TH

Wants His Rights Not a Priest—Lawyers to Appeal—Ethel Leneve Fainted When She Heard the Decision of the Jury—She Will be Tried To-morrow.

(Special Cable.)

London, Oct. 24.—Following a [illegible]ference with prison auth[illegible]rities Lord Chief Justice Alver[illegible]stone definitely fixed the dat[illegible] for the hanging of Dr. H. H[illegible] Crippen, convicted on Saturday of the murder of his wife, Belle Elmore, for Wednesday, November 16th. Crippen's attorneys are already preparing their appeal to the Court of Criminal Appeal, although there is admitted to be not the slightest chance that this body will interfere with the decision of the lower court.

Crippen had recovered his composure to-day and continued to protest his innocence When religious consolation was offered he became indignant and said he was more interested in getting his [illegible] rights than in listening to a priest.

Crippen will be hanged in Pentonville prison should his appeal fail, as it is expected, unless the Home Secretary intervenes and recommends to the Crown that he be reprieved.

Miss Leneve is prostrated to-day. She had fully expected Dr. Crippen would be acquitted. Thus necessitating her own release.

When she heard Crippen had been convicted and sentenced to death her nerves failed and it was some time before the prison director could restore her to consciousness. The girl is now apprehensive of the outcome of her own trial on a charge of accessory after the fact, which will begin to-morrow.

TRUNK DISAPPEARED AND OWNERS ARE ANXIOUS

There is a party composed of Englishmen and Germans who would like to get a little light on the strange disappearance of a trunk containing their clothes.

Early this morning they started to walk from Lakefield carrying the trunk on a pole. When some distance from this city they left the trunk on the road while they went into a farmhouse and got some refreshments.

On their return the trunk was missing and despite all efforts no trace of it could be found.

On their arrival here one of the party made known the facts to County Magistrate Edmison but it is just possible that a passing farmer picked the trunk up thinking it had dropped unnoticed from another waggon.

PRESENTED WITH CASE OF PIPES

Mr. Wilfrid Fitzgerald is leaving shortly to accept a position as clerk in the Cavendish Lumber Company.

On Saturday he was the recipient of a presentation from his fellow-employees at the Canadian General Electric Company, where he has been timekeeper for several years.

Mr. Stanley Ecclestone read an address, and Mr. R. Rose presented him, on behalf of the staff, with a case of pipes.

LAID TO REST

The body of Miss Maude Mason, the sad details of whose death were noted in the Review, came in on the one o'clock train Saturday night from Morden, Man.

The body was conveyed to D. Belleghem's undertaking parlors, and from thence to the family residence, at the corner of McDonnell and Aylmer streets.

The funeral service was conducted at the house at 2.30 this afternoon by Rev. Mr. Couch, pastor of George street church, and interment took place at Little Lake cemetery.

A PLAY IS ITS OWN ADVERTISEMENT

And "The Midnight Sons" Ran 36 Weeks on Broadway—The Biggest Scene Outside New York Hippodrome

Lew Field's prodigious musical success "The Midnight Sons" with its cast of 100 people, and tremendous scenic equipment, will be the attraction at the Grand Theatre, next Thursday, Oct 27, when this biggest of all spectacles makes its first and what will prove its last appearance in this city. "The Midnight Sons" doubtless is the most widely advertised musical play ever staged. This is largely due to the fact that it remained 36 weeks at the Broadway Theatre, New York, where it attracted the attention of every visitor to the city. The play so strongly appealed to these visitors, that Mr. Fields and the Shuberts' are sending "The Midnight Sons" on tour in spite of the enormous expence attached to the transportation of such heavy and massive scenery. For one scene alone, which takes over 15 hours to put in place, nearly 100 carpenters, stage hands, scene shifters and electricians are required to operate the scenery and properties. This scene shows the interior of a theatre, with an audience of nearly 500 people.

It is the biggest scene outside the New York Hippodrome.

IN LOW SWEET VOICE MISS LENEVE SAID "NOT GUILTY"

(Special Cable.)

London, Oct. 25.—Stylishly attired in a modish gown of deep blue and wearing a jaunty automobile bonnet and a heavy veil, Miss Ethel Clare Leneve, the sweetheart of Dr. H. H. Crippen, was arraigned in Old Bailey court this morning, charged with being an accessory after the fact in the murder of Belle Elmore Crippen.

Miss Leneve in a sweet low voice replied to the court's interrogations as to how she would plead, "Not Guilty, my lord."

It was believed by solicitors who have followed the case of Crippen that Miss Leneve will get off with a light sentence.

Barrister Arthur Newton appeared as chief counsel for the girl.

(LATER)

A FREE WOMAN

Miss Leneve is Pronounced "Not Guilty" ---Fine Sample of British Celerity.

Special Cable to the Review.

London, Oct. 25.—Miss Leneve was this afternoon found innocent of being an accessory to the murder of Belle Elmore.

There was the stillness of death when the verdict was about to be made known. The suspense was intense.

When the decision was declared a wave of emotion swept over the court.

Had it been in America the audience would have cheered.

Miss Leneve has, it is understood, received an offer of $1,000 a night to appear on the stage.

Her friends who had deserted her are now rallying to her support.

NINETEEN MEN DROWNED AT SHOAL BAY, NEWFOUNDLAND

Storm Overwhelms Steamer Regulus While Lying Maimed Off Bay of Bulls and Nineteen Members of Crew Lose Their Lives Trying to Reach Shore.

St. John's, Nfld., Oct. 25.—News of the wreck of the steamer Regulus, bound from Belle Island to Sydney, with the loss of 19 men of the crew, was received here yesterday.

The wreck occurred at Shoal Bay, nine miles from this port.

The Regulus has been running between Newfoundland ports, Sydney, C.B., and New York and Philadelphia. She broke her tail shaft off the Bay of Bulls, 36 miles from here, during a heavy storm on Sunday, while bound from Belle Island to Sydney. The accident was reported here, and a tugboat went to her assistance and picked her up. The storm increased and four hawsers parted, and the Regulus was lost in the fog and darkness.

The tug found her at daylight a total wreck at the entrance of Shoal Bay. The tug learned that 19 of the crew were swept into the sea and drowned in attempting to reach shore. When the tug left the steamer she appeared to be breaking up.

The Regulus was 850 net tons burden and was owned by Harvey & Co. of St. John's, Nfld.

Fears for Safety of Vessels.

Kingston, Jamaica, Oct. 25.—Fears are entertained for the safety of several schooners that left American ports weeks ago with cargoes of lumber, consigned to Kingston.

The schooner Earl of Aberdeen arrived Sunday night from New Orleans. Her sail, steering gear and the taffrail were carried away during the hurricane off Cuba and the water tanks were damaged. The captain reports that he did not sight any of the other schooners which left gulf ports before he sailed and were bound for Kingston.

Fishing Schooner Sunk?

Boston, Oct. 25.—An unconfirmed rumor says that the Lucania, a fishing schooner owned by Sylvanus Smith & Co. of Gloucester, has gone down at sea, with her crew of 24 men.

The Gloucester Board of Trade has heard the report, but doubts its accuracy, as do mariners here.

Mail Steamer Wrecked.

London, Oct. 25.—The Portuguese mail steamer Lisbon has been wrecked with a loss of three lives, according to a cablegram to Lloyds from Cape Town, South Africa, yesterday.

Man Fell Overboard.

Port Stanley, Oct. 25.—Joseph Fanley, a fisherman on the tug Hattie Berry, Capt. William Berry, fell overboard and was drowned yesterday, while the boat was about eight miles off here. It is thought that while stepping from the pilot house on to the deck, the boat lurched to one side, and threw him over, although there was not a heavy sea running.

Every effort was put forth to save him. The boat swung around as quick as possible and went back, but, when about 100 feet from him he was seen to go down.

Fanley's home is in Trenton, N.J. He came here about two years ago. He was about 30 years of age. Not three weeks ago one of his brothers was killed in a railroad wreck.

Steamer Langham Burned.

Duluth, Oct. 25.—The steamer Langham, 300 feet long, owned by the I. Adams Co. of Detroit, and with a grain carrying record, burned to the water's edge off Keweenawa Point Sunday afternoon. She was bound up the lakes for Port Arthur with a cargo of coal, and passed the Soo last Tuesday, but had not been reported since then.

When the fire broke out on the Langham, the anchors caught, and it was impossible to beach the ship. The crew, seventeen men and one woman, took to the yawls, after opening the safety valves to prevent the boilers blowing up. The sailors kept near the burning craft until it sank.

Capt. J. H. Sinclair of Port Huron was in charge. Most of the crew lost their personal effects. The boat is a total loss.

BISHOPS IN CONFERENCE

The question of who will be Bishop of Kingston which is one of the Ontario dioceses, was also under consideration. Those present were his Grace Archbishop McEvay, Bishop Dowling, Hamilton; Bishop O'Connor, Peterborough; Bishop Scollard, North Bay, and Bishop Fallon, London.

DEVELOPMENTS EXPECTED IN ANDERSON INQUEST

George Tate Blackstock Will Make an Effort to Wind up the Proceedings as Soon as Possible—Many New Witnesses Have Been Called.

Goderich, Oct. 25.—That an arrest may follow the conclusion of the inquest into the murder of Lizzie Anderson to-night is the general impression here, and, though Provincial Inspectors Greer and Boyd will make no positive assertions in this direction, they hint that a re-examination of some of the witnesses by George Tate Blackstock, must connect a person or persons so closely with the tragedy as to require some explaining.

More than twenty new witnesses have been added to the list since the last adjournment was made on account of the absence of Mrs. Jardine and her son Frank, for whom bench warrants were issued, to secure their testimony as material witnesses. All told, about forty witnesses have been summoned, according to Coroner Holmes.

The tremendous examination will still be along the line of ascertaining precisely the movements of Edward (Punk) Jardine and his elder brother, Thomas, on the fatal night.

One very significant thing is alleged to have been brought to light by Inspectors Greer and Boyd in the past week, namely, that Edward Jardine was in possession of a knife on the day that Lizzie Anderson must have been murdered. The crown investigators have secured several witnesses who will swear to this, though young Jardine himself has sworn that he did not have a knife, nor was in the habit of carrying one. A knife has been found near the abandoned cellar, in where the mutilated girl was found, but to this circumstances not much weight it attached, as it is believed it was placed there since the tragedy.

Evidence will also be put in to show that Edward Jardine was seen with the Anderson girl outside the fair grounds on the night she was missed from home, while witnesses, who swore to seeing them together between 8.15 and 9.50, will also be re-examined. This is in rebuttal of Jardine's and his relatives that he was home at 8.

Mr. Blackstock is going to try and finish up the enquiry in one day.

A Bold Threat.

Denver, Col., Oct. 25.—Prediction by a national official of a labor union, that the buildings of three local newspapers, whose pressmen are on strike, will encounter destruction before the publishers win, has startled the Denver Trades and Labor Assembly.

The speaker was Albert B. Kreitler, third vice-president of the International Printing Pressmen and Assistants' Union of North America, who appeared before the assembly, asking aid in the strike.

"I tell you the buildings will blow up before this thing is settled the way the publishers want to settle it," he said. He finished his speech amid silence.

Philadelphia, Oct. 25.—E. A. Van Valkenberg, editor of The Philadelphia North American, was arrested yesterday because of accusations he had printed against John K. A Pathetic Case.

Kingston, Oct. 25.—A pathetic case is reported of an insane patient released from Rockwood Hospital a few days ago. He returned to his old home in Tweed, but, at the sight of old friends and scenes went insane again and was taken back to the asylum yesterday.

William Meagher escaped from the asylum a week ago and cannot be located. The authorities believe that friends in Kingston are hiding him.

Brockville Boy Scouts.

Brockville, Oct. 25.—The boys' scout movement has taken definite form in Brockville and bids fair to be a decidedly popular organization. There were walking in the general procession 200 members of the rifles. Trumpeters sounded the last post, and the hero of Hart's River was left to sleep with his kindred dust.

Rev. Dr. MacGillivray of Chalmer's Presbyterian Church conducted the ceremony. The streets were lined with citizens as the cortege passed along, and business was suspended. The pall-bearers were: Majors Robertson and Wolfe, R.M.C.; Major Panet, R.C.H.A.; Major Hundel, district signaler; Captains Dawson and Mowat, 14th Regiment, P.W.O.R.; Major Ross, Army Medical Corps, and Capt. A. De M Bell, C.P.A.S. corps.

Set Her Dress Afire.

New York, Oct. 25.—A three-year-old girl, locked up in a Mott street tenement with her baby sister, set her dress afire while playing with matches yesterday. The screams of the children alarmed the women neighbors, but they were not strong enough to force the door, and the children could not open it. One woman finally crawled out along the fire escape and entered through a window. She found the little girl ablaze, and she died before help reached her. The baby was not burned.

Their father, Michael de Luca, is locked up in the Portchester jail, charged with larceny. The mother is obliged to work, and their aged grandmother left the little ones to go in search of food.

Secularizing the Schools.

Lisbon, Oct. 25.—The secularization of the schools involves the replacement of religious instruction therein by systematic teaching of individual and civic morality. This is strongly favored by the reformers heading the Government, who argue that the greatest peril to the young republic would be passed, if they succeeded in educating the children so that they would apply the same honesty to political as to private life. It has been decided to suppress the faculty of theology at the University of Coimbra, and abolish the taking of oaths by professors and students.

The Portuguese embassy to the Vatican has been reduced to a legation.

WANTS BIT OF MAINE

Canada May Negotiate to Purchase it For Railway Line.

Ottawa, Oct. 25.—The story is again revived that one of the things that will be discussed between the United States representatives and the representatives of the Canadian Dominion, if they enter into negotiations with regard to reciprocity will be the sale by the United States to Canada of a small portion of the State of Maine, so as to give an improved all-Canadian railway route between the Quebec and New Brunswick systems. For instance, a much better line for the Canadian Transcontinental could be secured in this way at a very considerable cut-off in distance. The territory that would be involved is hardly settled at all, and if settled is by French-Canadians, so that there would be no change of flag as far as the people are concerned, and a substantial benefit would be acquired by Canada and no loss sustained by the United States.

Panama Canal Purchase.

Washington, Oct. 25.—The final effort by the Federal Government to uphold the validity of the indictment in the New York federal courts of the Press Publishing Co., on a charge of libel, growing out of the publication of an article in The New York World, on the purchase of the Panama Canal, was made yesterday in oral argument before the Supreme Court of the United States.

The article in question was printed in the heat of the Presidential campaign of 1908. It charged that Charles P. Taft, Douglas Robinson and Wm Nelson Cromwell, with J. Pierpont Morgan and others, obtained control of the Panama Canal route for $3,000,000, and, through their intimacy with Theodore Roosevelt, then President of the United States, and Wm. H. Taft then secretary of war, sold the property to the United States at a profit of $36,000,000. Much attention was paid to the case by President Roosevelt, during his campaign and it was even made the subject of a special message to Congress by him.

The court took the case under advisement.

Survey Schooner Back.

Halifax, Oct. 25.—The Dominion Government surveying schooner, Chrissie G. Thomey, has arrived from Hudson Bay, where she spent two months in the waters adjacent to the Nelson River. The captain reports a fine summer. The weather was clear and mild, and during the two months' stay in the bay there was no ice whatever. The vessel approached to within six miles of Nelson River, in sixteen feet of water. That was the nearest to the land a vessel of her draft could get.

Mr. Parizan and his staff of engineers accomplished a large amount of work, but, on account of the shortness of the season, it will be necessary for the vessel to spend another summer there. When the Thomey left, it was necessary to escape being caught in the ice for the winter.

C.N.R. to Build Road.

Edmonton, Oct. 25.—That the Canadian Northern is going to take over and build the Alberta and Great Waterways Railway, that stormy petrel of Alberta politics, is confirmed by the return of several parties of surveyors, who have gone over the route for Mackenzie and Mann, presumably to estimate the cost and practicability of the original plans. Settlers along the line say that the Canadian Northern will either purchase it outright or obtain a long lease from the Government. Premier Sifton has had several conferences with Mackenzie and Mann.

Killed on the Track.

Glencoe, Oct. 25.—Sunday morning the section men picked up the mangled form of a well-dress man three miles west of Newbury. By the money found on him and the cut of his clothes it is thought that he is an American. He is about thirty years old, five feet eight inches tall, fair complexion, blue eyes, smooth face, and apparently was using his handkerchief as a cap. The latter had an ink mark J.S. His four upper teeth were gold on gold plates. Dr. J. Walker will hold an inquest.

Strike-Breakers Beaten.

New York, Oct. 25.—The first trouble between strikers, their sympathizers and the men who have been engaged by the U. S. Express Co. to fill their places, occurred at the Jersey City stables yesterday, when three strike-breakers were set upon and beaten with clubs, black-jacks and other implements, by about 300 men. PROF. MATTHEWS SATISFIES CONVENTION OF ORTHODOXY

McMaster University Professor Explains His Position on Certain Points and Baptists Decide to Leave Theological Teaching in the Hands of the Senate.

Toronto, Oct. 25.—Prof. I. G. Matthews yesterday confronted the Ontario and Quebec Baptist Convention and vindicated his three logical teachings at McMaster University, as to which for some two years now, there had been a series of attacks. He prefaced a straight avowal of his beliefs by a long and carefully prepared address, in which he dwelt on the necessity for careful Bible examination that did not, however, carry with it any fact of heresy.

The discussion on the report of McMaster University Senate and Board of Governors, which precipitated the Matthews hearing, occupied the entire afternoon session and was resumed at 7.30 p.m., and at fifteen minutes past midnight the convention by a practically unanimous voted to adopt the following amendment, submitted by Rev. John MacNeil:

"That the senate and the board of governors be entrusted with the maintenance of the theological curriculum as submitted in the report."

When the afternoon session began, Bloor street Baptist Church was crowded, President Holman remarked that "the university is to be congratulated on being so popular." He asked that personalities should be avoided in the discussion and that a spirit of harmony should prevail.

Chancellor McKay then submitted the university report, which has already been made public. He continued:

"I believe it is my duty to make a full, frank statement of all matters dealing with the theological controversy. I agree that the debate should be kept on a high plane. But I am not the one responsible for bringing the matter here, nor is the senate. It will be necessary to refer to some persons by name," said the chancellor, and he mentioned the pamphlet issued by Rev. Elmore Harris. Six years ago the theological curriculum had been revised, giving a place to the study of Old Testament introduction, and this was placed in Prof. Matthews' hands, which he held for three years. Chancellor McKay then came to the written report, the charges first made in 1908 by Dr. Harris, based on rumors, reports, conversations, etc. Then Dr. Harris, Dr. Hughson and Hon. John Dryden were appointed a committee, who found Prof. Matthews "sound on all the fundamentals of Baptist faith and practice," and the matter dropped.

"Dr. Harris' pamphlet, which has been sent into every Baptist house in the convention, so far as I know," declared that the statement in the report was "without foundation," said Dr. McKay, who quoted Dr. Hughson's report and said: "I ask this convention if Dr. Harris is right."

Later, Dr. McKay quoted such a conservative theologian as Dr. Strong of Rochester, as having approved the Matthews' views, though not in every detail. The senate had adopted the committee report which exonerated Prof. Matthews by 13 to 4, and he believed that 30 out of 37 members approved.

"It is not Prof. Matthews alone," the chancellor pointed out, "it is now a question of the theological faculty."

Rev. Elmore Harris stated that throughout the controversy he had endeavored to steer clear of any personalities.

"I want to say, as I ought not to say, that I have put into the treasury over $5,000 of my own money. Does that look as though I had the interest of McMaster University at heart? My controversy is not with Prof. Matthews."

Mr. Harris considered that his pamphlet should have been put before the convention, because, as he stated, his side of the argument had been shut out from the public press. He also remarked that the chancellor could only find two or three points on which to attack the statement.

Granted Free Site and Exemption.

Harriston, Oct. 25.—The Town of Harriston voted yesterday on a bylaw to grant a free site and factory building to the Canada New Shoe Co., Ltd., also for exemption from taxes. The bylaw carried, 632 in favor, and only four votes against it. The company will shortly begin operations, and expect to employ over 75 hands.

Training Ship to Visit Quebec.

Quebec, Oct. 25.—A message was received by James O'Sullivan, harbor master, from the captain of H. M. S. training ship Caldwell, that the vessel will arrive here on Wednesday next.

BACK FROM CONVENTION

Those who were present as delegates from the Baptist Churches of Peterboro yesterday, when the climax came were Rev. J. R. Webb, Porter, White Dr. Scott, Mr. Riddell, Rev. W. C. Riddiford.

The climax of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec came yesterday afternoon, when chancellor MacKay read the report of the Senate of McMaster University.

The Senate supported Proffessor Matthews in his position, and thought that his worth and usefulness to McMaster was just beginning instead of finished as Dr. Elmer Hams had stated.

The report provoked the most lively discussion of the Convention.

The chairman, Mr. J. C. Holman, K. C. had his hands full regulating the proceedings. A spirit of seriousness prevail'ed, and the discussion was still on last night when Rev. W. C. Riddiford and others from Peterborough left for home. It is expected that the convention will support and carry the report of Senate.

THE PLAGUE OF TYPHOID; SIXTEEN DEATHS TAKE PLACE

Thirty-One Cases Now—No Sign of Let up—Visit to Orono Said to be Cause.

No less than 16 deaths were reported last week. It has also spread to Garden Hill, having been carried there by visitors to the Orono Fair. 31 cases have been reported from Garden Hill, while one death, that of Mr. Wm. Dean, the well known horse buyer, occurred last week. Drastic precautionary methods have been adopted to stamp the disease out.

An Expensive Fire.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Six billion feet of lumber, valued at $15,000,000, were destroyed in the recent forest fires upon the national forests in Montana and northern Idaho. The total area burned over in this one district was put at 1,250,000 acres.

NOT GUILTY

Victim of Alleged Black a Free Man.

Special to the Review.

Bracebridge, Ont., Oct. 25.—Joseph Pizanni, an Italian, was tried at the assizes here this morning, charged with the murder of Domecilli, a fellow countryman, on June 16th, at Foote's Bay, Lake St. Joseph.

The alleged murder of Domecilli was the result of a row in an Italian camp of railway navies.

Comecilli is said to have belonged to the Black Hand.

The jury returned a verdict of "not guilty."

MORE REASONS AGAINST RECIPROCITY

Reciprocity would have the effect of turning over much trade and traffic to United States railways and ports. American railways would gain at the expense of Canadian; American steamship companies at the expense of Canadians; Boston and Portland at the expense of Halifax and St. John.

Reciprocity in manufactures would depopulate our industrial centres, while reciprocity in natural products would check the new national and conservation movement, and conflict with the efforts of Ontario and Quebec to compel the manufacturer of crown land timber and pulpwood in this country.

Reciprocity and tariff reform are not necessary linked. The duties of farm implements can be reduced independently of any dangerous understanding with Washington.

The United States Steel Trust's absolute control of the Canadian galvanized wire and barbed wire market prevents the farmers reaping any benefit from the removal of the duty on these articles. The effect of the removal is simply to transfer the work of manufacture to the Republic. It may be expected that the same thing would happen in other industries under a reciprocal trade treaty.

Canada is under no obligation to go to the assistance of the Republican party and pull its fat out of the fire.

If the United States movement for tariff revision downwards has any vitality we shall get a more favorable entry for our goods into the Republic without yielding anything in return.

The signing of a reciprocity treaty treaty with the United States would lessen the Canadian preference on British goods and ruin the broad movement for inter-imperial preference towards which the Empire has been working steadily for some years. Once admit United States wheat to Canada free of duty and we must abandon the hope of obtaining a preference in the British market for Canadian farm products.

START RIGHT

Young fellow START RIGHT. There is all the difference in the world just how you commence life. The rummy who holds you up on the corner for the price, or who staggers off to his poorly furnished room DIDN'T start right. He commenced with the social glass. He said, "Oh, I'm all right. I can leave it alone." He may come back. He wants to, and it is to be hoped he will, but unless he leagues himself with an infinite power he will never succeed. The gambler whose very existence is wrapped up in betting, didn't start right. To-day he is never happier than when he is PLAYING. Perhaps it is shooting craps, or playing poker, betting on a horse race or a game. Don't be deceived, man. THERE ARE NO HONEST GAMBLERS. Gambling is a dishonest disease. Never learn HOW to gamble.

Start right. Were you ever at an athletic meet? The men line up. The pistol fires. But one man gets away a little ahead of the bunch. They are called back. They all get away together. The start is right. We all come into the world a bundle of possibilities. We wonder at our crib, at the size of our room, at the length of our street, at the houses in our block. Then we are dazzled by the town. We leave home and COMMENCE TO PICK AND CHOOSE.

Start right, young man, young woman.

Let them deride you, let them call you soft and say that you are tied to your mother's apron string. BETTER THAT THAN TIED TO A BAD BAD HABIT.

Start right. There are plenty of good people who will help a man in his start for right. Young fellow, young woman, to-day would you escape sorrow and tears. Would you bring honor to your mother and joy to your father's heart. START RIGHT. Wellington said "Habit is ten times nature." Start right NOW. Form the habit of admiring the good and emulating the noble, and you will become a citizen of whom we will all be proud.

SHELVED

The garbage by-law is shelved. So will some of the aldermen be next election day. Meanwhile they are burying the garbage, and so will some of the aldermen be buried—on election day.

HOLIDAY

Braceville, Ill., Oct. 21.—A coal mine has just been closed here because the workers celebrate too many holidays and attended too many funerals. Explaining why this shaft was closed for good, the owners declared it was short handed so many days it would not be run at a profit.

It was stated that the mine was idle on account of funerals, religious holidays, feast days, legal holidays and other occasions.

Braceville is an old town where nearly every one belongs to a lodge and on funeral days the lodge members attended.

We have too many holidays. They disorganize society. The average holiday entails more real work than a day at the bench, or the office, or at one's every day work. Holidays are the occasion for people eating too much, drinking too much, smoking too much, spending too much money. The man who enjoys his work isn't all the time craving for a holiday. It's like a bit of paper flying across the splendid race track—it sets the trotter off his feet and makes him break. Christmas and New Years, Good Friday, Empire Day, the first of July, Civic Holiday, Labor Day, Thanksgiving Day. Then there's the day when we must attend the funeral of the friends, or the wedding. Holidays—we have too many of them.

HE HAS LEFT US

A noteworthy old gentleman left us this morning. James Stevenson, ex-M. P., has gone. In the passing of Mr. Stevenson is the removal of a remarkable old man. His life was an eventful one. He saw all sides. From the pinnacle he looked down. From the valley he looked up. He knew success in a large way. He felt in common with us all the sting of defeat. He was a many sided man. Battling with an incurable disease and endowed with tremendous vitality he fought death grimly. His father, a centenarian, he bid fair to reach the age of his parent, but this morning, October 25th, he passed away at an early hour. A member of Parliament, mayor, member of the board of education, prominent in business, in social life he has left us. Not the present decade, nor the present generation knew Mr. Stevenson when his light burned its brightest. Mr Stevenson is gone, one of the old-time stalwarts is now missing.

MILK INSPECTION

Last night at the Council Dr. McPherson, M.H.O., recommended that the milk supplied to the citizens be tested, also that the premises and utensils be inspected before a license be granted. This is timely. Peterborough milk tastes as good as Toronto milk; Hamilton milk, Guelph milk and the buttermilk is appetizing. But it is not so much the taste as is the test. We believe that Peterborough milk men are NO FRIENDS OF THE PUMP, and for this reason we think that they will be glad to have the milk inspected. We believe also that Peterborough milk dealers ARE A CLEAN BUNCH OF MEN, and for this reason as well they would say to that gentleman from Missouri, the inspector, "Come in, we will show you." In some places water has been known to creep into milk, and skimmed milk has been found in the can. Dirty surroundings have also been discovered, places where one would not like to eat breakfast on a gold plate. But, of course, this was not in Peterborough.

HIS BUSINESS—NOT OURS

The other day Carnegie gave his usual sum for a public library. It was announced in headlines so that all who had eyes could see, and thank the kind powers for such liberal men. About the same time, in tiny type, with an unobstructive headline, was this paragraph: "Mrs. Diana Greenstreet, a cousin of Andrew Carnegie, died in poverty at the county home of Alameda, Cal. She had an allowance of $25 per month from the steel magnate which was the interest on an amount he had deposited in an eastern bank. She was born in Scotland fifty-four years ago." Too bad he could not have placed on interest for his Scottish cousin his monumental library gifts. Just for the sake of the "Land of the Heather" he loves so well.—"The Trail," Regina, Sask.

However much we are opposed to the hoarding of great wealth we cannot find fault with Andrew Carnegie. The money is his own. He secured it by his brains. He made the people sweat and shared the large end of the profit. If he wants to give thousands for a library and a few cents for his cousin, that's his business, not ours.

A Wonderful Achievement
Discovery of "Fruit-a-tives" has meant health for all

Canada's fame does not rest solely on her furs and wheat fields. Her rise in the esteem of the world is not due to her Cobalt mines. It is the work of her great men that has made her great. A graduate of McGill University has won lasting renown for his original researches in the realms of Physics.

Everyone knows that fruit is wholesome, when eaten judiciously. Physicians generally recognize the fact that fruit juices have a beneficial effect on the various organs of the body.

It remained for a Canadian physician to discover a process whereby the medicinal action of fruit could be so increased as to make the intensified juices a wonderful cure.

"Fruit-a-tives" is this combination of fruit juices and tonics. Since its introduction to the public, "Fruit-a-tives" has met with a success accorded to no other medicine in the world. The reason is plain. "Fruit-a-tives" is the one remedy that is actually made of fruit, and is the only remedy that naturally cures Constipation, Biliousness, Indigestion, Headaches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Backache, Kidney and Skin Troubles. At all dealers at 50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c., or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

GO IT ALD. MORGAN

Ald. Morgan, you are right. We understand that you are going to inaugurate a movement to have poultry and eggs sold by weight. Why should Mrs. Browser pay 30c. for a dozen of bantam eggs when Mr. Fowser can secure a dozen of buff orphington production for the same price. The hotel man is the only man who has this privilege.

"A small beer." You lay down 5c. and get a couple of sups.

"A big beer," You lay down 5c. and get a pint.

But in poultry it's different, and in eggs it's different also. When Mrs. Bowser or Mrs. Browser pay 30c. they should get decent eggs, not marbles. Keep at it Ald Morgan. You have the sympathy of the housewife and the man who enjoys an egg in the morning.

A FORTUNE SQUANDERED

George McClure, who inherited $20,000 worth of property, turned it into money and then squandered it all in riotous living in less than a week, died penniless the other day in Alleghany General Hospital at the age of 48. No comment necessary.—Hamilton Times.

We have plenty of George McClures right here in Peterborough. They don't squander the $20,000, but they blew the interest on it. That's about the same thing, isn't it? They work hard till pay day, blew it all and go broke till next pay day. Then they wake up with a big head and repeat the performance. They are bigger fools than McClure. He didn't have to give the strength of his arm or the sweat of his brow for the money he blew. These other fellows do.

SIDE LIGHTS

HOW DO YOU FIGHT?

Did you tackle that trouble that came your way
With a resolute heart and cheerful?
Or hide your face from the light of day
With a craven soul and fearful?
O, a trouble's a ton or a trouble's an ounce,
Or a trouble is what you make it,
And it isn't the fact that you're hurt that counts,
But only, how did you take it?
You are beaten to earth? Well what of that?
Come up with a smiling face.
It's nothing against you to fall down flat,
But to lie there—that's disgrace.
The harder you're thrown, why the higher you bounce;
Be proud of your blackened eye.
It isn't the fact that you're hit that counts,
It's how did you fight—and why?
And though you be done to death, what then?
If you battled the best you could,
If you played your part in the world of men,
Why the critics will call it good.
Death comes with a crawl or comes with a pounce,
And, whether he's slow or spry,
It isn't the fact that you're dead that counts,
But only, how did you die?

A DAILY THOUGHT.

Halifax Herald.

With every rising of the sun
Think of your life as just begun.
The past has shrivelled and buried deep
All yesterdays. There let them sleep,
Nor seek to summon back one ghost
Of that innumerable host.
Concern yourself with but to-day,
Woo it, and teach it to obey,
Your will and wish. Since time began,
To-day has been the friend of man;
But in his blindness and his sorrow
He looks to yesterday and to-morrow.
You and to-day! A soul sublime,
And the great pregnant hour of time
With God Himself to bind the twain
Go forth, I say, attain! attain!

A MASTER OF METAPHOR.

It Must Have Relieved Him to Get This Out of His System.

A water consumer in a certain city, whose supply had been turned off because he wouldn't pay, wrote to the department as follows:

"In the matter of shutting off the water on unpaid bills your company is fast becoming a regular crystallized Russian bureaucracy, running in a groove and deaf to the appeals of reform. There is no use of your trying to impugn the verity of this indictment by shaking your official heads in the teeth of your own deeds.

"If you will persist in this kind of thing a widespread conflagration of the populace will be so imminent that it will require only a spark to let loose the dogs of war in our midst. Will you persist in hurling the cornerstone of our personal liberty to your wolfish hounds of collectors thirsting for its blood? If you persist the first thing you know you will have the chariot of a justly indignant revolution rolling along in our midst and gnashing its teeth as it rolls.

"If your rascally collectors are permitted to continue coming to our doors with unblushing footsteps, with cloaks of hypocritical compunction in their mouths, and compel payment from your patrons this policy will result in cutting the wool off the sheep that lays the golden egg until you have pumped it dry, and then farewell, a long farewell, to our vaunted prosperity."—Everybody's.

When to Eat Fruit.

To obtain the most benefit from the succulent fruits they should be eaten at the end of the chief meal. Bananas are an exception and may be eaten with any meal. They are very acceptable cut in thin slices and eaten with bread and butter. Stewed fruits often have their virtues wasted through being eaten at the wrong time. Six or eight stewed prunes half an hour before breakfast are beneficial; so are stewed figs or stewed apples eaten before breakfast. Peeled oranges cut into thin slices so that the juice is set free, with sugar strewn over the slices, are not unlike pineapple and form a highly efficacious aid to digestion. Grapes should never be eaten except after the chief meal of the day. Taken when the stomach is comparatively empty, they are a specially harmful fruit.—Family Doctor.

WHEN AILING ASK YOUR NEIGHBORS

That's How Magnus Johnson Got Relief From Kidney Troubles

They told him to use Dodd's Kidney Pills—He did and his Backache and other Sickness Speedily Vanished.

Lac La Nonne, Alta., Oct. 24. (Special)—If you have Kidney trouble of any kind, from Backache to Bright's Disease, and don't know how to cure it, ask your neighbors. They will tell you to use Dodd's Kidney Pills Such is the experience of Magnus Johnson, a well-known farmer residing near here. In an interview Mr. Johnson says:

"In the year 1907 I took a pain in my back due to a strain and hard work. I kept getting worse. In the fall of 1908 I was unable to do any hard work, and began to suffer a great deal. I did not know what to do, and told one of my neighbors. He handed me a Dodd's Almanac. After reading it I concluded to try Dodd's Kidney Pills, and after using five boxes I feel fine and able to do any kind of hard work. Dodd's Kidney Pills cured my kidneys, and I cannot praise them too much."

You don't experiment when you use Dodd's Kidney Pills. They have cured the Kidney Ills of thousands of people all over Canada. If you have Kidney Disease in any form they will cure you.

A Gentleman From Mississippi

By THOMAS A. WISE

Novelized From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THOMAS A. WISE

"If I looked as unhappy as you, Hope, I'd go to bed and not discourage our guests as they arrive," Carolina suggested. "Our floral decorations alone for tonight cost $700, and the musical program cost over $3,000. The most fashionable folks in Washington coming—what more could you want, Hope? Isn't it perfectly glorious? Why"—

"Mr. Haines is below, asking to see Senator Langdon," announced a servant, entering.

"Oh, I knew he'd come! I knew it! I knew it!" cried Hope Georgia in pure ecstasy, clapping her hands.

The three plotters turned on the girl in amazement; then they stared at each other.

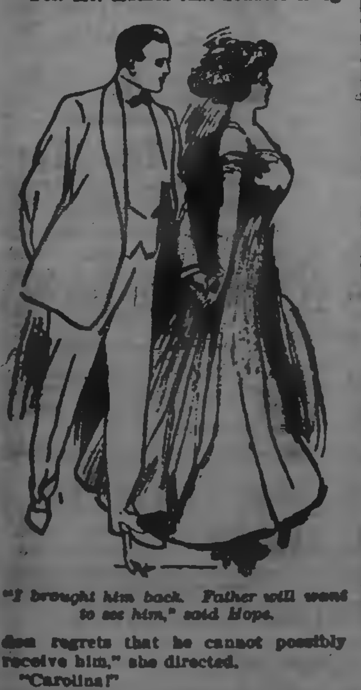
"Mr. Haines!" ejaculated Carolina.

"Haines!" exclaimed Randolph, hurriedly leaving the room.

"Haines!" sneered Norton. "We can take care of him. The senator won't see him."

Carolina caught the suggestion.

"Tell Mr. Haines that Senator Langdon regrets that he cannot possibly receive him," she directed.



"I brought him back. Father will want to see him," said Hope.

"Carolina!"

There was a ring of protest and pain in Hope Georgia's voice as she darted out of the door after the servant.

"What's the matter with that girl?" asked Norton, trying to be calm.

Carolina shook her head.

"I don't know. She's queer today. I believe she imagines herself in love with Mr. Haines."

"Aren't you afraid she'll make trouble?"

The other sister laughed confidently.

"Little Hope make trouble? Of course not. If she does, we can always frighten her into obedience."

The door reopened and Hope entered, followed by Bud Haines. The girl's head was high; her cheeks were red; her eyes glittered ominously.

"I brought him back, Carolina," she said coolly. "Father will want to see him. I know there has been some mistake."

"Yes," supplemented Bud, "there has been a decided mistake, and I must refuse to accept the word that came to me from Senator Langdon."

Carolina Langdon drew herself up in her most dignified manner.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Haines, but you must accept it," she said.

"Exactly," seconded Norton. "Senator Langdon entirely declines to receive you."

"I don't trust anything you say, Congressman Norton, and I may say also that I recognize no right of yours to interfere in any affair between me and the Langdon family."

"Perhaps I can explain my right, Mr. Haines," Norton said coolly, stepping beside Carolina. "I have just had the pleasure of announcing to Miss Hope Georgia Langdon my engagement to Miss Carolina Langdon."

Haines, entirely unprepared for such a denouement, shot a searching glance at Carolina. She bowed her head in affirmation.

"So that's why you tried to ruin me!" he cried. "You're both from the same mold," turning from Carolina Langdon to Congressman Norton, then back to the girl.

They stood facing each other when Randolph Langdon returned. At sight of Bud Haines he started, stopped short a second, then came forward quickly.

"Mr. Haines, my father has declared that he will not see you, and either you leave this house at once or I shall call the servants."

Bud looked at young Langdon contemptuously.

"Yes. I think you would need some help," he sneered, feeling in his veins the rush of red blood, the determination in his heart that had a few years back carried him through eighty yards of struggling Yale football players to a touchdown.

The senator's son drew back his arm, but the alert, confident look of the New Yorker restrained him.

"Mr. Haines, in the south gentlemen do not make scenes of violence before ladies."

The cold rebuke of Carolina cut into the silence.

Haines stood in perplexity. He did not know what to do or how to get to the senator. It was Hope who came to his rescue.

"I'll tell father Mr. Haines is here."

"I'll tell father you are here. I'll make him come, Mr. Haines. He shall see you."

With the air of a defiant little princess she started for the door.

"Hope, I forbid you doing any such thing," exclaimed her older sister, but the younger girl paid no attention. Randolph caught her arm.

"You shall not, Hope," he cried.

Hope Georgia struggled and pulled her arm free.

"I reckon I just got to do what seems right to me, Randolph," she exclaimed. "I reckon I've grown up tonight, and I tell you—I tell all of you"—she whirled and faced them—"there's something wrong here, and father is going to see Mr. Haines tonight, and they are going to settle it."

Norton alone was equal to the situation, temporarily at least.

"I'll be fair with you, Hope," he said reassuringly, and she stopped in her flight to the hall door. "I'll take Carolina and Randolph in to see the senator, and we'll tell him Mr. Haines is here. Perhaps we had better tell the senator," Norton suggested, beckoning to Carolina and her brother. "Let Mr. Haines wait here, and we will make the situation clear to the senator."

"You'd better make it very clear," exclaimed the younger girl, "for I'm going to stay here with Mr. Haines until he has seen father."

The guilty trio, fearful of this new and unexplainable activity of Hope Georgia, slowly departed in search of Senator Langdon to make a last desperate attempt to prevent him from meeting this pestilential secretary that was—and might be again.

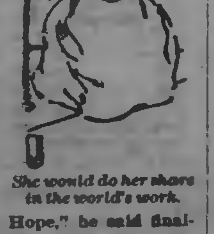
When the door closed after them Hope came down to the table where Bud Haines was standing.

"Won't you sit down, Mr. Haines?" she said. "I'll—I'll try to entertain you until father comes," she said weakly, realizing that again she was alone with the man she loved.

CHAPTER XVIII.

HOPE LANGDON'S HOUR OF TRIUMPH

HAINES sat at a table in the reception room, across from Hope Georgia, and his gratitude for her battle in his favor mingled with a realization of qualities in this young lady that he had never before noticed. Probably he did not know that what he had really seen in her that day and that evening was the sudden transition from girlhood to womanhood, her casting aside of thoughtless, irresponsible youth and the shouldering of the responsibilities of the grown woman who would do her share in the world's work.



She would do her share in the world's work.

He stared across in astonishment at this slip of a girl who had outwitted two resourceful men and an elder sister of unquestioned abilities.

"I do not recognize you, Miss Hope," he said finally.

"Perhaps you never looked at me before," she suggested archly, feeling instinctively that this was her hour; that the man she loved was at this moment thinking more about her than of anything else in the world.

Haines made a gesture of regret.

"That must be it," he agreed. Then he leaned forward eagerly. "But I'm looking at you now, and I like looking at you. I like what you've done for me."

"Oh, that was nothing, Mr. Haines," she exclaimed airily, her intuition telling her of her sway over the man.

"Nothing!" he exclaimed. "Well, it's more than any one ever did for me before. I've known lots of girls"—

"I don't doubt that, Mr. Haines," Hope interjected, with a light laugh.

"Yes, I say I've known lots of girls but there's never been one who showed herself such a true friend as you have been. There's never been any one who believed in me this way when I was practically down and out."

"Perhaps you've never been down and out before, Mr. Haines, so they never had a chance to show whether they believed in you or not."

"That may be one reason," he answered. "I wonder why"—he paused—"I wonder why your sister Carolina did not believe in me."

"You were quite fond of her, weren't you?" the girl began, then stopped and turned away her head.

Haines gazed curiously at Hope.

"I was, yes. I even thought I loved her, but I soon saw my mistake. It wasn't love. It was only a kind of"—

Suddenly pausing, Bud Haines shot a swift glance at the girl.

"What wonderful hair you have, Miss Hope."

The girl smiled invitingly.

"Think so?"

"Yes," he declared earnestly. "I know so. I never noticed it before, but I guess lots of fellows down in Mississippi have."

Hope's tantalizing smile worried him. "I hope you are not secretly engaged too," he exclaimed.

"No, oh, no!" she answered quickly before she thought.

"Or in love?" he asked seriously.

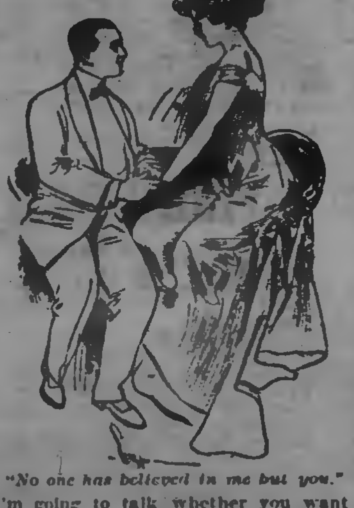
Haines had stood up and was now leaning intently over the table. He realized the difference between the feeling he had had for Carolina and the tender emotion that thrilled him as he thought of the sweet girl before him. This time he knew he was not mistaken. He knew that he truly loved Hope Langdon.

"Or in love?" he asked again, anxious at her silence.

Hope looked at him slowly. A faint blush illumined her face.

"Oh, don't let's talk about me," she exclaimed.

"But I want to talk about you," he cried. "I don't want to talk about anything else. I must talk about you, and I'm going to talk whether you want to hear or not. You've believed in me when nobody else believed. You've fought for me when everybody else was fighting against me. You've shown that you think I am honest and worthy of a woman's faith. You fought your own family for me. Nobody has ever done for me what you have, and—and"—



"No one has believed in me but you."

He faltered, full of what he was about to say.

"And you're grateful," she ended.

He looked her squarely in the eyes as though to fathom her thoughts. Then he reached toward the girl and seized both her hands.

"Grateful nothing!" he cried. "I'm not grateful. I'm in love—in love with you. I want you—want you as I never wanted anything or anybody before, and I tell you I'm going to have you. Do you hear?"

Hope could not hide her agitation. The light in her eyes showed she was all a woman.

"Oh, nothing in the world could happen as quickly as that, Mr. Haines," she protested, with her last attempt at archness.

"Nothing could?" he threatened. "I'll show you."

He advanced quickly around the table, but the girl darted just beyond his grasp. Then she paused—and her lover gathered her in his arms.

"Hope, my dear; you are my own," was all he could say as he bent over to kiss the lips that were not refused to him.

Hope released herself from his fervent grasp.

"I love you, I do love you," she said fondly. "I believe in you, and father must too. You've got to straighten this tangle out now, for my sake as well as your own. Father will listen."

I tried doctors but got no relief. I began to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and after three weeks I was feeling much better, and now I am well again."—Mrs. BESSIE BILY, Dovedale, Sask., Canada.

Another Woman Cured.

Christiana, Tenn.—"I suffered from the worst form of female trouble so that at times I thought I could not live, and my nerves were in a dreadful condition. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me and made me feel like a different woman. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is worth its weight in gold to suffering women."—Mrs. MARY WOOD, R.F.D. 3.

For thirty years this famous remedy has been the standard for all forms of female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, fibroid tumors, ulceration, irregularities, backache, and nervous prostration.

DUELS BETWEEN ANIMALS.

Fight of a Tiger and a Crocodile With Native For a Spectator.

It is said that the most common form of duel between animals is that afforded by the instance of two stags, which, while fighting, interlocked their antlers so tenaciously that they could not separate them, and so starved to death.

One of the most interesting of animal duels was that told of a swan and a pike, which occurred in a body of water situated on an English estate. A laboring man, who passed this pond every morning on his way to work, observed a swan with its head under water. The next morning the bird was in exactly the same place and position. Still, that was not remarkable, however, when he saw that the swan was in precisely the same position, he called the attention of the keeper to it. The keeper found that the swan's head had been swallowed by a large pike. Both were dead.

In India a native went to bathe in a ravine. He was in the water up to his neck when a tiger on the hill above gave a leap toward its prey. But the tiger had not calculated that, since his victim was much lower than himself, a leap of the right strength for a horizontal range would carry him far beyond his mark; consequently he fell some ten feet on the other side.

Now it happened that a hungry crocodile was at the same time drawing a bee line under water toward the native. When the crocodile had almost come upon his prey, he heard a splash just in front, and made a dash bringing his enormous jaws down on the tiger's paw.

The bather nearly fainted with fright when he saw the tiger fall into the water, and for a few moments he could not understand why the creature did not devour him. Why did he persist in keeping one of his paws under water beating savagely with the other. And the water turned red!

Then all at once the assaults of the tiger became more furious and his growls developed into roars. The huge tail of a crocodile reared up out of the water. The obvious intention was to pull the tiger under water and drown him and the tiger understanding this purpose, tried to frustrate it by beating the snout of the crocodile with his other paw. But the snout was too far down, and he left much of his force on the surface of the water. His struggles became more and more feeble and at length he disappeared altogether, only a cluster of bubbles remaining to show where he had been.

His fight, however, had been a game one, not entirely in vain; for, when the bodies of the two beasts finally came to the surface, it was seen that the tiger had literally torn away the whole front of the crocodile's face and had blinded it so that its victory was a useless one.

Story of a Royal Residence.

It is not generally known that King George almost purchased a residence in the North of Ireland a few years ago, and the true story why he did not do so has never previously been told. The residence in question was one that particularly appealed to him. The estate was extensive and possessed excellent fishing and shooting rights, while the scenery in the neighborhood was among the most picturesque it would be possible to imagine. Both the Prince and Princess of Wales (as their Majesties then were) fell in love with the place, and negotiations for its purchase were well advanced when the matter came to the ears of the leaders of the Irish party. A protest was at once entered with the Prime Minister of the day, and a significant hint was given that if the Heir-Apparent took up his residence in Ireland matters would be made pretty awkward for the Government in the House of Commons. The Premier was consequently in something of a dilemma, and sought an audience of the late King.

King Edward listened to what his chief political adviser had to say, and then consulted the Prince of Wales, and pointed out the objections that had been raised, and the awkward position in which the viceroy would be placed every time the prince or princess appeared in Dublin. King Edward further added reasons of his own for opposing this plan chiefly on account of the distance from London that his heir would be when residing upon his Irish estate. His present Majesty at length agreed to forego his project, and to accept Frogmore as his country home.

Far Too Official.

During a portion of the South African war, Lord Kitchener had as an orderly a young scion of a noble house who had joined the Imperial Yeomanry as a trooper. He could not quite understand that he was not on terms of perfect equality with the members of the staff, and having been summoned one morning to carry despatches for the commander-in-chief, he entered the room with a jaunty air. "Did you want me, Kitchener?" he asked calmly, while the rest of the staff gasped for fear of what would happen next. Kitchener, however, merely looked at him with a quiet smile. "Oh, don't call me Kitchener," he remarked gently, "it's so beastly formal. Call me Herbert!"

Irish Avoid the Navy.

In proportion to its population, Ireland supplies very few sailors to the royal navy. The number of boys who joined within the last two years was only 211, as compared with 6,349 for Great Britain. In the same period 318 second-class stokers were enlisted in Ireland, and 7,488 in Great Britain. There is no naval training ships on the Irish coast, the number of boys joining in Ireland being too small to justify it.

Imagination.

It is imagination rather than reason that distinguishes man from brute, and no person who is devoid of imagination can know extremes of happiness or misery. Happiness in a great measure depends on the faculty for forgetting.

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

Have Eyes Tested at Intervals

Whenever you feel uneasy in your spectacles, don't hesitate to call and see us. We are always glad to help you.

WHAT THE PRESS SAYS OF BENNET

Widely Known Comedy Entertainer is a Popular Favorite

The following references are of Harry M. Bennett, the clever comedian, who will appear as the special feature of the band concert at the Armouries on Friday:

In the funny man of the evening, Harry M. Bennett, the audience found a mine of rich and inexhaustible ore. Funnier work than his rendering of "Hot Air," and "What We Never Learn at School," is not often seen. Mr. Bennett is a rare entertainer, and his versatility is phenomenal. — Saginaw (Mich.), Courier Herald.

Mr. Harry Bennett, the well known entertainer, has been winning golden opinions. At the Sousa concert last Saturday night he was added to the programme by special request, and in the opinion of many, in the vast throng of auditors carried off the chief individual honors.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

HARRY ADAMS

PIONEER CALLED BEYOND

There died this morning at his residence, 453 Water street, at 7.50, one of Peterborough's oldest, best-known and generally respected citizens, in the person of Mr. James Stevenson, ex-M.P. Throughout the city and county of Peterborough, and in fact the Province of Ontario, there lived few men more generally known particularly during the years previous to the past decade. The late Mr. Stevenson, from boyhood until sixteen years ago, when business reverses and complications swept away his fortune, was a strenuous worker of wide experience in diverse branches of business.

The deceased was born in County Fermanagh, Ireland, of sturdy Protestant stock. His father, the late William Stevenson, who died some years ago, in Peterborough, in his ninety-seventh year, came to Canada in 1840 and settled in the village of Port Hope. At the age of 15 Mr. James Stevenson an ambitious lad, moved to Peterborough, and began business. By close application, intelligent methods, and honesty of purpose, he rapidly increased his business and began to acquire considerable property. The hardware business of Rich. Barrett, in which Mr. Stevenson began here as a manager, and which was soon in his full possession, was sold by him in 1873. Notwithstanding his great and rapidly growing business, he was always noted for the patriotic and enthusiastic interest he always took in municipal, educational and political matters. He served Peterborough seventeen years in the town council and four years in the county council. He was first elected mayor of Peterborough in 1854, and was again mayor in the years 1857, 1858, 1859, 1886 to 1891 consecutively, many of his elections to this office being by acclamation, and during his term as mayor, and largely owing to his exertions, the negotiations were carried on which led to the establishment in Peterborough of the Canadian General Electric Co. Mr. Stevenson, during his whole life, was characterized by the zealous interest in and practical work he did for the cause of education. He was a member of the Peterborough Board of Education for over half a century consecutively, and was for many years chairman of the Board. Until the infirmities of age and growing deafness precluded his serving on the Board to advantage, he took a more active part possibly than has any man in Canada in a similar position. When he decided to resign the members, regreting his enforced withdrawal, presented him with a handsome portrait of himself with a suitable inscription.

THE LATE JAMES STEVENSON

Mr. Stevenson has also, in the interests of Peterborough, served many years on the Little Lake Cemetery Board, and also as a member of the Horticultural Society. One characteristic of the deceased was his generous assistance to the poor.

In politics the deceased has been a life long and ardent supporter of the Conservative cause, and was a warm personal friend, as well as supporter, of the late Sir John A. Macdonald, who on several occasions was Mr. Stevenson's personal guest at the latter's former residence on Simcoe street. In 1882 Mr. Stevenson was tendered the nominations for the Dominion House, but on account of pressing personal business, had reluctantly to decline. However, in the next political crisis, Mr. Stevenson was again pressed to run for West Peterborough, for the House of Parliament. At great loss of time and under immense loss of business, in the interests of his party, Mr. Stevenson consented. His opponent on the Liberal side was Hon. G. A. Cox, a wealthy man and a strong politician. After one of the hardest political fights in this country Mr. Stevenson headed the polls by a majority of 16. On the expiration of that term in Parliament, he was again induced to accept the nomination, and succeeded in defeating Mr. Rich. Hall. It was common report in Ottawa during the eight years Mr. Stevenson was West Peterborough's representative, that no private member of Parliament commanded as strong an attention from members of the Cabinet as did the local member.

In religion, Mr. Stevenson, originally a member of the Church of England, as a young man joined the Methodist church, and was always a constant worshipper and free contributor to that body.

Mr. Stevenson was twice married, his first wife being Margaret Brenber Dundas. Afterwards he married Emma Rankin Appleton. Mrs. Stevenson died twenty-one years ago. Surviving Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson are two daughters and four sons.

SUPPER AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH A FINE SUCCESS

Another festive and friendly gathering at All Saints' church last night aided in cementing the friendship which already exists between the people of that church and parish and rector.

A bountiful and largely patronised fowl supper, served by the ladies of the congregation in the basement of the old church, was done full justice to. Turkey was largely in evidence. The basement of the church was crowded. Supper was served from six till eight.

Afterwards nearly everybody repaired to the church above the basement. A splendid programme had been prepared. After a few opening remarks by the chairman, Rev. H. R. Trumpour, it was immediately proceeded with and was as follows—

Bass solo—The Village Blacksmith, Mr. Stacey.
Humorous song—W. McLaren.
Song—Mr. Bert Reid.
Duet—George Chandler and F. Stacey.
Intermission.
Song—Mrs. Perks.
Recitation—Mr. Woodworth.
Song—Mr. George Chandler.
Song—Miss Ruth Dawson.
Song—Mr. McLaren.
Song—Mr. Bert Reid.

During the programme Mr. Lacheur, the faithful sexton of the church, was asked to come forward. Mr. Edgar then read an address to him and Mr. Howden presented him with a beautifully bound hymn book. Mr. Lacheur was greatly surprised.

An auction sale of pies, fancy goods, etc., followed, many articles selling at a very low price. John Edgar was the man with the persuasive voice, the auctioneer.

The concert concluded about 10.30.

EXCELLENT ART WORK BEING DONE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

On Monday afternoon the representatives of the Woman's Art Association completed their tour of schools and presented the remainder of the W. A. A. Prizes.

The ladies to whom fell the distribution of the prizes wish to express their appreciation of the cordial reception given them by principal and teachers in each school. They are assured that the interest taken by the Association in the Art work had already been of assistance to the work and would be an incentive to still better efforts during the coming year and degree of excellence shown in the present art work throughout the schools would be a matter of surprise to many who do not know the work that the pupils are doing under careful training in that direction.

The W. A. A. are continuing their offer of prizes for the coming year.

After the ceremony a very dainty wedding was served at the home, after which Mr. and Mrs. McKinsgry drove to their home on Olive avenue.

The ceremony was performed in the presence of only a few intimate friends and relatives of the contracting parties. They were unattended.

At the conclusion of the event Mr. and Mrs. Eckworth left on the 11.40 G.T.R. via Port Hope for Schenectady, N.Y., where their future home will be.

COMMUNICATIONS

Chief Howard reported that Fireman Archibald McBride from July 22nd, 1908, to July 15th, 1910, was entitled to draw the high grade of pay. He had been absent from the brigade for a month owing to the fact that he misunderstood that he was discharged.—Referred to the Fire, Water and Light Committee.

Ed. M. Elliott, county treasurer, sent a copy of the award of the arbitrators Messrs. Casement and Moore, re administration of justice between the city and county. The city is directed to pay the county $3,819.91 for 1910, and for each of the years 1911 and 1912 $3,406.79.—Referred to the Finance Committee.

Clarice I. Davidson complained that the well of her house, 129 James street, has been polluted with a sewer and asked for a remedy.—Referred to the Board of Works.

The Secretary of the Board of Health forwarded a copy of the resolution calling for the construction of a sewer on Benson Avenue from Aberdeen Avenue to Manning Avenue.—Referred to Board of Works.

The Water Commission wrote stating that they propose constructing a new main on Bonacord street, and asked the Council to authorise the location of two hydrants for fire protection.—Referred to Fire, Water and Light Committee.

H. R. H. Kenner wrote thanking the Council for appointing him one of the city's representatives on the Public Library Board.

J. Corkery, secretary of the Separate School Board, forwarded a copy of the resolution passed at the Separate School Board. It was moved by Dr. O'Brien, and seconded by James Clancy, at the meeting of the board, that the secretary acknowledge the receipt of the by-law respecting the Peterborough Public Library, and to state that this board noticed with considerable disappointment that among the members of the board of management appointed by Roman Catholic body was included.

DON'T WANT THIS KIND OF OIL CAKES

George Street Confectioners Say Aroma of Oil from Streets Pervades Their Wares—Want Practice Stopped or Sweeter Dust Allayer Used

O'Connell and Gordon wrote the council that they had been instructed by Messrs. Potvin, Coleman Bros., and T. H. Hooper, bakers and confectioners, George street, that the city's practice of oiling the street was occasioning serious injury to their trade, and that a large number of customers were leaving them, owing to the odor and taste of the oil pervading the articles manufactured by them as a result of the presence of oil on the street.

Their clients insist that this practice should be stopped at once or that such other material be used upon the streets as would be free from objectionable features. They would be pleased if the council would advise what the city was going to do in the matter.

The Board of Works will take up the matter.

MEDICAL HEALTH OFFICER RECOMMENDS THAT MILK BE TESTED IN THIS CITY

Dr. Macpherson, M.H.O., sent a communication calling the attention of the Council to the fact that no provision had been made for the testing of milk Peterborough has all the necessary facilities for testing milk now that the laboratory has been fitted in the city buildings.

Dr. Macpherson called attention to the importance of milk testing and of regulating the premises of the dairymen. They are all or nearly all at any rate, outside the city limits, but the Council can make them agree to inspection of their premies by the city's representative for that purpose, before the city grants them their license.

At any rate, the milk can now be tested at the laboratory instead of being sent to Toronto.

The doctor recommended that a sanitary inspector be appointed for the city.

The Property and Health Committee will take up the matter.

WHISTLING WILL BE REDUCED

In reply to a letter from City Clerk Armstrong concerning the whistling of the trains in Peterborough, and embodying a request that superfluous whistling be stopped, Superintendent Lynch, of the G.T.R. wrote that he had forwarded the communication to the proper officials, and that the whistling would be reduced to a minimum.

He asked that any superfluous whistling be reported to him.

The train whistling in the past has been most annoying, and Superintendent Lynch will make a gracious move if he has it reduced.

At the council meeting last night Ald. Duffus submitted a by-law to have whistling for signals prohibited within the city limits, but the measure was shelved for two months to see what the railway companies would do in the meantime.

MUCH DISCUSSION OVER $20000 BY-LAW IT DIDN'T PASS

The question that bothered the City Council last night was not where will the money come from, as where will the money go to.

It is this way—

Mr. W. H. Moore, of the Water Commission waited on the Finance Committee the other night and asked that debentures be issued for $20,000 to cover unforseen expense in connection with the construction of the new dam and pumping station, instancing the purchase of land, the ownership of which would permit the commissioners to raise the water to the maximum head, and the extra cost of operations in striking rock bottom.

Last night Mr. T. F. Matthews, on behalf of the commission, asked that a by-law be passed authorizing the issuance of debentures for $20,000, the amount to be applied to the commission's fund in view of expenditures on the streets in the supplying of better waterworks facilities, and a better service generally.

Then the discussion started, and nearly every alderman present had his little say in the matter. Was the money going to be spent for street purposes or would it be used in connection with the expense of constructing the new dam?

For street purposes, Mr. T. F. Matthews, the chairman of the commission, and Mr. Hill, also, assured the council.

If that was the case, why had Mr. Moore asked the Finance Committee for exactly the same amount to be applied to the expenditure of building the dam?

Mr. Matthews and Mr. Hill stated that they did not know what the new dam would cost definitely, and would, therefore, not know what sum to ask for in excess of the $120,000 already voted for the dam by the ratepayers. Mr. Moore told the council that the committee had taken him up wrong on the matter, and gave explanations, but they insisted that they hadn't, and said that his remarks were as understood by the Finance Committee and reported in the press.

A by-law was about to be carried, making the grant, when Ald. Hicks and Ald. Bradburn demurred.

The city solicitor said that the commission could only appropriate $5,000 of the $20,000, in case the grant was made for purposes other than street purposes, without first getting the consent of the council, but Ald. Hicks thought the matter should be more fully dealt with at a later meeting of the council to be called by the mayor.

Ald. Duncan thought so too, and seconded the motion, which was carried.

T. A. S. WANTS EXEMPTION FROM TAXES

D. O'Connell, on behalf of St. Peter's T.A.S., asked for exemption of the taxes on the building previously occupied by the society to July 1st, 1910, also requesting that the premises now occupied by the society be given permanent exemption from taxation. This, too, was referred to the Finance Committee.

THREE BYLAWS WERE PASSED

A by-law to close part of King street that the Peterborough Canoe Co. may extend their premises.

A by-law to fix the salary of the janitor of the city buildings at $50 a month.

A by-law to authorize the borrowing of $12,500 for the construction and equipment of the Isolation Hospital. On motion of Ald. Bradburn and Gillespie the Finance Committee were granted power to sell the debentures.

REFERRED BACK TO COMMITTEE

Ald. Duncan in presenting the report on behalf of the Property Committee read in clause 3:—"We recommend that no action be taken on the request of R. Sheehy that he be given the land he rents from the city at $5 a year."

The land is alongside the Wolfe street wharf and Mr. Sheehy pays $25 a year for it and wants that amount reduced to $5, at least during the time when he is not using it in connection with bringing stone from the lakes.

The request looked reasonable to the Council and it was referred back to the committee for reconsideration. If they can lease it on better terms than at present they have authority to do so.

DR. YOUNG WILL GET FEE OF $100

The Finance Committee reported and recommended as follows and the report was adopted as presented;

SPORTING NEWS

WESTERN HOCKEY PROS. WANT REINSTATEMENT

"That the way of the transgressor is hard" was never better shown than in the case of a number of Winnipeg's most noted hockey players who happened to break away from the amateur game a few years ago to earn a few dollars playing professional hockey. These boys left the sport, and having been out of it for a year are trying to get back into the great winter sport once more.

Dan and Harry Flett and Jim Jackson, Billy Field, Bert Boulton, Frank Penwarden and others, have applied to the Amateur Athletic Association for reinstatement, promising that if they are granted this request they will live happy ever afterward as amateur players only.

Some of them have been sent out of the game for over a year, and stand the best show of being whitewashed. Billy Field and Boulton went east last year with Edmonton after the Stanley Cup, a professional trophy, so that these boys would find it hard to be reinstated.

It is the intention of the players to reorganize the Maple Leaf Club again and enter the Amateur League. Should they be allowed to play in the series they no doubt would be serious contenders for the championship, as they are all fast players. But if they are reinstated and do not succeed in entering the league, they will join the other clubs, and by so doing would strengthen the league.

COLLEGIATES HAVE GAME ARRANGED FOR HOLIDAY

The game between the local Collegiates and the team of Jarvis street Collegiate, Toronto, should prove a popular attraction for Thanksgiving Day afternoon.

The Toronto boys will go into the contest with a reputation and the Central Park fourteen will be in much better shape for the battle than on the occasion of the exhibition here with Trinity College school team.

The Collegiates are deserving of liberal support and with good weather prevailing, a large crowd should be on hand.

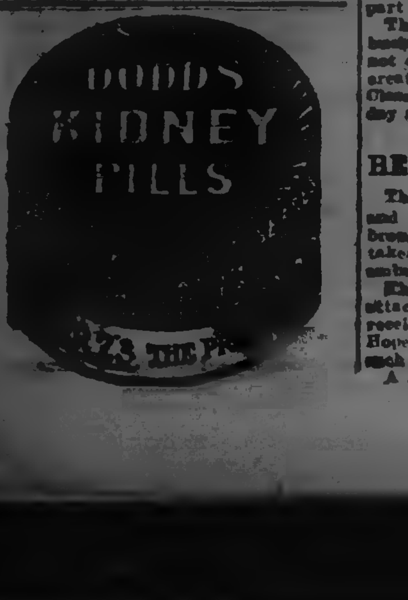
THE RING

ATTELL'S YARN.

Kansas City, Oct. 24.—James J. Jeffries was not doped when he met his Reno, nor was his sudden collapse due to the killing pace he set in training. It was the yellow of his skin that seeped into his inner workings that brought gloom to the white race. Abe Attell told this to-night:

"When I was called to Reno to second Jeff I had already made up my mind to bet on Johnson. When I arrived in Reno I changed my mind, because I found out that Jeffries was the 'caucus' nominee. At that time Jeffries looked lively and cheerful enough to lick a regiment of Johnsons. Saturday morning before the fight something happened. I asked a few questions from everyone I met, and then I finally located the inside work. Here it is: Until two days before the fight Johnson found out that Little was around betting on Jeff, and he sent word to Jeff that the 'frame-up' was off, and that the fight was going to be on the square. There were a number of busy meetings inside the next ten hours, but Johnson wouldn't listen to reason. He wasn't going to see George Little win any money, and it was all off. Then Jeff collapsed. No wonder; a championship in his pocket and have it picked."

Abe Attell to-night got the decision over Kilbane in the tenth round of their battle.



LAWN TENNIS

Both the club and singles championships of Peterborough Lawn Tennis Association rest with the Y. M. C. A. this season.

The former was won by the Y.M.C.A. club and on Friday evening at the Y. courts, Mr. W. Landry took the championship of the singles in the contests with Mr. H. Meyers, winner of the consolation. The scores were 6—3, 6—1, 3—6, 6—3.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE

A basketball league is to be organized among the members of the senior gymnasium class. If you are a member of this class and wish to play on one of the teams, kindly sign your name on the notice board, if it is impossible for to do this, telephone your name to the office between now and Wednesday as teams will be selected Wednesday night after class.

Do not forget the organization meeting of the First Aid class Wednesday night at 9.00 p.m., as matters of importance will be up for discussion. Wednesday, Oct. 26, at 9.00 p.m.

The Senior Leaders will hold their class Wednesday, at 7.00 p.m. this week instead of Saturday, on account of the International Convention which is being held in Toronto the latter part of the week.

There is still room for you in the business men's "Gym" classes, why not drop in and enjoy an hour of recreation with the business men. Class meets every Tuesday and Thursday at 5.15 p.m.

HERE FROM PORT HOPE

The mother of six small children and whose home is in Port Hope, was brought to this city yesterday, and taken from the station in Comstock's ambulance to the Nicholls Hospital.

The woman is suffering from an attack of typhoid fever, and could not receive hospital treatment in Port Hope, on account of there being no such institution in that place. A number of interested friends raised enough money to pay the expenses in conection with her removal to the hospital here.

Six small children are left behind, at the home, and one is a baby in arms.

The old princes and monarchs of Europe sometimes ruled not wisely but too much, but they all drank the best beer brewed — when they could get it.

"Salvador" BEER

was by all odds the best brewed in Europe for centuries and is the best to-day.

The Reinhardts' secured the secret formula for this famous brew and they alone have the sole right to make it on this side of the Atlantic.

"Salvador" Beer is brewed scientifically from choice Bavarian Hops, selected Barley Malt and pure sterilized spring water. Do you wonder that it has become Canada's most famous beverage?

THE FIRE, WATER AND LIGHT REPORT

The Fire, Water and Light Committee reported and recommended as follows:

1. That the chairman of this committee be authorized to sell any of the battery supplies at the fire station that are not required and that would deteriorate. This recommendation is made in view of the fact that the current for the fire alarm system is now received from the Bell Telephone Co.

2. That the Peterborough Light and Power Co. be instructed to move the light at the corner of Smith and Concession streets to the south-west corner, and to place an incandescent light on Brock street between George and Aylmer streets.

3. That the order for lights on Maitland avenue and Pearl avenue be cancelled.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

H. MORGAN,
Chairman.

The report was adopted as read.

EGGS IS EGGS BUT SOME ARE NOT

On motion of Ald. Duncan and Morgan, the old Library Board was thanked for their faithful services.

The mayor called attention to the fact that it would be necessary to appoint deputy returning officers for 22 polling places at the next meeting of the Council.

Mr. Morrison of Victoria avenue wanted a concrete wall built between his place and Downie street creek. He said he would do the work himself if the city supplied the material. The city engineer was instructed to report.

The engineer reported that it would take $218 to build a cement wall south of the new Public Library.

Ald. Morgan said the people were tired of buying bantam eggs for eggs, and robins for chickens. He would like to see eggs and poultry sold by weight. He will be advised by the city solicitor what may be done in the matter of passing a by-law.

William Waters, of Ingersoll, jumped off a load of hay, broke two bones in his foot and sprained his ankle.

"EMPEROR OF THE BRITISH."

Chesterton's Reply to the Suggestion That King's Title Be Changed.

The proposal, recently made, to change the King's title to that of Emperor of the British evokes the following bit of characteristic comment from G. K. Chesterton:

We few poor Radicals who alone reverence the past, or seem to have any relish of the royal chronicles of England, have lately been confronted with a proposal calculated to make us take to our beds, to laugh at leisure, or die in peace. For indeed the thing passes all language, and is fit only for death or laughter.

It has actually been proposed in an English paper that the King of England should consent to be called Emperor of the British. The primary answer is obvious. Why not Sultan of the British? Why not Kaiser of the British, or Pope of the British? Why not Tsar? Why not Shah? Why not Grand Lama of Great Britain? Why not Doge of the British Empire? Why not Stadholder of the United States of Britain? Why not Mogul of the Three Kingdoms? Why not Mikado of the Isles? Why should there be a Dey of Tripoli, and no Dey of Turnham Green? Why should Tartary have had a Cham, while Tonbridge had no trace of a Cham? Why should we hear (with helpless envy) of there having once been an Akond of Swat, when it is vain to hope for any Akond of Surbiton? I know not how to comfort my fellow-countrymen for the loss of all these sumptuous and soaring titles, except by reminding them (however sad it may seem) that they are a great people, with a history of their own. We do not call our ruler an Emperor for the same reason that we do not call him a Brother of the Sun and Moon; because it is our national tradition to call him something else. Brother of the Sun and Moon is a much vaster and grander title than either Emperor or King; and if you want something grander still, I am sure I could invent it. Uncle of the Universe would be good, or Cousin of the Cosmos. There are greater titles than King of himself an Emperor. But even to call yourself King of England was a great business; still more to be one. To be a King like Edward I., or even like Edward III., is to look down as from a pinnacle upon all the chance brigands and compromising courtiers who have managed to "wear the purple" in the anarchies of East and West. To call a British King, wearing the crown of Arthur and Alfred, by the foolish foreign name suggested, is to me almost madly laughable; I would as soon call England by the improved name of Heligoland.

Trinidd's Asphalt Lake.

One of the natural wonders of the world is the great pitch lake of Trinidad, the most southerly island of the British West Indies. Paying better than any gold or diamond mine, the lake is locally known as "The Black Diamond." An American syndicate handles most of this natural asphalt under a concession from the Government, and from one corner of the lake obtains 800 tons every day. The material is shipped in enormous quantities to America, England and all parts of the world, where it is in demand for street making.

Close to the village of La Brea, the lake is inspected every year by numerous visitors to the island, for it is a curiosity not to be seen elsewhere. The lake lies 138 feet above the sea and is three miles in circumference. How deep it is nobody knows, for though many attempts have been made to fathom it, all have failed. To all appearances this is indeed the "bottomless pit."

Scientists describe the pitch substance as "bituminous matter floating on the surface of fresh water." For three feet down the pitch is solid enough to bear the weight of men and allow of their digging it up in great slabs with pickaxe and spade. Under that hard substance is liquid pitch cast up by subterranean fires, and under that again is the fresh water of the lake.

Though the syndicate secures several freight train loads every day, next morning when the army of negroes return to their work the surface is level and hard as before. An inexhaustible supply is therefore at hand without any preliminary expense. Alongside the lake is a light railway with iron cars that are run down to the sea—only a short distance—and there the asphalt is transferred to ships. From this remarkable industry the Government of the island receives a substantial part of its revenue every year. Columbus discovered Trinidad in 1498.

The Queen's Gift.

Many pretty stories have already been told of Queen Mary's kindness of heart, and the latest to hand is a very charming one. A young married woman, who recently arrived at Bridlington with her baby, found herself in very distressing circumstances, and, in her want and perplexity, she wrote a letter to Her Majesty, telling her of her sad and needy position. The Queen promptly had the matter investigated, and it was proved to be a genuine case, deserving assistance. Then the kind Queen sent some money to a trustworthy person to be expended in relieving the woman's distress, and thus rescued her from her sorrowful plight by wise and timely aid. Those who know how royal ladies are inundated with applications for pecuniary help will appreciate the mingled good sense and generosity with which the case was dealt.

The Nurse's Reward.

It is Lady Roberts who tells this story. She was once visiting the hospitals at the base of operations in India, and was so pleased with the nurses' work and their devotion to the sick, that she exclaimed: "Really, I think the sisters deserve a medal for this campaign as much as anyone and I hope they will get one." "I don't know about a medal," said a gallant colonel, who was in attendance, "but they are sure, at all events, to get plenty of clasps."

Mrs. Jane White, the first white, born in the township of Mara, died, aged 86.

CHEMISTS AND CRIME.

The Analyst Is Now One of the Greatest Police Agents.

Analysts have played an important part in the Crippen case, and it might be said without exaggeration that were it not for these gentlemen hundreds of crimes would be added to the police list of unsolved mysteries. Medical detectives, as the analysts employed by Scotland Yard are called, invariably carry through their duties with skill, certainty, and absence of prejudice. They have mastered the action and character of every poison under the sun, and this fact, being well known, has decreased poisoning to a considerable extent during recent years.

Practically the poisoners can hide nothing from the modern analyst, for that gentleman is not only familiar with all poisons, but can recognize their presence almost as easily as he can recognise the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral. By the aid of his test-tube, his miscroscope, and his spectroscope, he is able to lay bare the poisoner's secret and track him down. If any great criminal was suspected of poisoning his wife, the analysts, upon examining the remains, would be able to prove what poison was used and in what quantity.

Delicate to a marvellous degree are the tests employed by analysts in the case of poisons. If a man were to be poisoned with arsenic to-morrow and were buried without being examined internally, an analyst could a quarter of a century later gather from the remains of the body a considerable amount of the poison which killed him and in the same state as that in which it was administered.

Probably arsenic has been more frequently used by murderers as a death-dealer than any other poison, and arsenic is a very peculiar poison. It is a well-known fact that many men and women take arsenic in small doses as a medicine, while the inhabitants of Syria are said to eat it as freely as we eat salt. To a person who has never touched, eaten, or smelt arsenic a medium-sized dose would have a fatal effect. No matter how it got into the system it would be deadly, for arsenic kills whether it is swallowed, rubbed into a wound, or breathed as a vapour. Chapman, who was hanged for poisoning his mistresses, used arsenic, and the drug was also used in the memorable Maybrick case.

Mme. Lafarge poisoned her husband, an ironmaster, by means of arsenic. While M. Lafarge was in Paris on a visit his wife pretended to send him a parcel, in which was her portrait, five small cakes made by his mother, and a letter. This parcel was sealed in the presence of witnesses. When the parcel reached Lafarge it contained only one large cake. He ate this, and nine days later he died. Mme. Lafarge was arrested and charged with murder by poisoning. At the trial it was alleged that she had made the large cake with arsenic as one of the ingredients, and substituted it for the five small ones. She was found guilty after a trial exceeding a fortnight, and condemned to imprisonment for life.

To micro-photography the discovery of many a crime is due. The spectroscope is infallible in revealing the presence of the minutest trace of blood, but it is unable to distinguish between human and animal blood. The microscope can, however. The corpuscles of different mammalia can only be distinguished by their size and shape, and it can be seen that without the microscope it would be impossible to draw a distinction between the blood of a man and the blood of an animal.

The corpuscles of both men and animals are all circular with the exception of those of the llama, alpaca, camel, and their kind, which are oval.

Some time ago a man suspected of murder was found to own an axe covered with blood. An analyst examined the blood, and found that it was that of a goat, the corpuscles measuring 41-tenths of a micron. On this evidence he was found not guilty.

Cloth stained with red thought to be blood is touched with ammonia. If the stain is caused by fruit juice it turns blue or green; if by Condy's fluid it become blue; and if by cochineal it becomes crimson. But if it be blood, human or animal, the color under the influence of the ammonia does not change in the least.

A Vacancy at Court.

The death of the late Sir Fleetwood Edwards has left vacant one of the most coveted positions about the court — that of Paymaster to the Household—and there is considerable speculation as to whom His Majesty will select to follow him. The name of Hon. Drek Keppe is most favored, but there are good reasons for believing that he will prefer to retain his present post as Equerry to His Majesty. The post of Paymaster-General is worth a thousand a year, and the duties are comparatively light, most of the work being done by the Keeper of the Privy Purse. It is reported in circles likely to be well informed that the King has brought some amount of pressure to bear upon the veteran Sir Dighton Probyn to accept the position Gen. Probyn, however, prefers now to remain in complete retirement, and it is unlikely in the extreme that he will be induced to return to court. Some official announcement is shortly to be looked for on this subject.

THE CAR TO BUY
Russell-Knight
The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance
Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.

CRITICS CONFOUNDED

Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."

Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.

But this is the fact that must be borne in mind :—

The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.

Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?

Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.

To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.

In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

Send your name to receive new catalogue of Russell 1911 models with prices.

For Business Use

There are a great many places and occasions when the possibility of getting extra heat immediately effects an economy by decreasing the discomfort of the worker. In the office, in the early morning or late at night, before or after the steamheat is on, it is of importance to have extra heat. In the builder's outside office, in the shipping room, in the checker's shack, on exposed lofts, in railroad stations, in studios, the

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Absolutely smokeless and odorless

is often a necessity. It is safe, smokeless and odorless. Apply a match, and it gives heat quickly. With four quarts of oil it burns nine hours. Has automatic-locking flame spreader, which prevents the wick from being turned high enough to smoke, and is easy to remove and drop back so that the wick can be cleaned in an instant.

It has a cool handle and a damper top. An indicator always shows the amount of oil in the font. The filler-cap is put in like a cork in a bottle, and is attached to the font by a chain.

The burner body or gallery cannot become wedged, because of a new device in construction, and consequently, it can always be easily unscrewed in an instant for rewicking.

The Perfection Oil Heater is finished in japan or nickel. It is strong, durable, well made, built for service, yet light and ornamental.

THE WHITE WASH.

Its Presence on the Hudson Bay Company's Boat Explained.

It is or was a rule of the Hudson Bay company that no woman be allowed passage on its boats. One day some years ago as a steamer of the company neared one of the northernmost ports a string of white garments was seen stretched across the deck. The watchers were amazed, for to them the wash line suggested only the presence of a woman aboard the boat.

Comment was freely made of the scandal that would ensue and the shakeup that would follow. When the boat docked the line of washing had disappeared—still another proof of the scandal.

Later one of the landsmen said to the captain:

"Why, how did it happen that you carried a woman passenger this trip?"

"There was never a woman along the whole voyage," was the indignant answer. "What do you mean?"

"If there was no woman aboard where did all that white wash come from?" was the triumphant reply.

The captain looked puzzled for a moment, and then he laughed.

"Oh," he said, "and didn't we have Lord Strathcona, the governor himself, along with us on this trip? And every day doesn't he insist on having his clean white shirt, no matter how far north we are? That's the white wash you saw strung along deck. And, what's more, doesn't his lordship insist upon having his London paper laid beside his plate every morning, no matter if it is a year old?"—Pearson's.

Fell Dead After Saving Child.

Standing on her doorstep in a street in Carmarthen, Wales, the other week, a widow named Hannah Owen saw a five-year-old girl knocked down by a motor-car. She rushed forward, snatched the child towards her, and took her into the house, where she found that the little one was only scratched on the arm. The incident, however, had such an effect upon the woman that she fell dead.

The Expensive Promoter.

"That man's time is worth $60 a minute," said the mathematician.

"More than that," replied the reckless investor. "He once gave me five minutes of his time when I was looking for advice and it cost me several thousand dollars."

Ruler of Russia's Title.

The general allusion to the ruler of Russia as the czar is, strictly speaking, incorrect. His official title is "emperor and autocrat." Czar is the old Russian word for lord or prince and was abandoned by Peter the Great on his triumphal return from Poltava, his crowning victory over Charles XII. of Sweden. Since then the Russian monarch has been officially entitled emperor, and at the congress of Vienna in 1815 his right to the imperial term was admitted by the powers, with the proviso that, though he was emperor, he had no precedence over the kings of western Europe.—St. James' Gazette.

The Modern Idea.

Roman Guide (impressively) — The ruins of the Coliseum! Seattle Man (astonished)—Well, what do you think of that! Why, I saw photographs of that heap twenty years ago. Roman Guide (loftily)—Quite likely, sir. Seattle Man—But why in thunder aren't those ruins cleared away and a modern Coliseum erected?—New Orleans Picayune.

Unless.

Townsend—Can a man live on $1 a day? Beers—Certainly, unless he's so prodigal as to lay something aside for a rainy day, keep up his insurance, eat when he's hungry, buy clothes and pay his bills.—Chicago News.

Flight.

"Would you take $10,000 to fly from Albany to New York?"

"Why not? Our cashier took only $1,000 to fly to Europe."

FORTUNES ON CANVAS.

Some of the Great Sums Realized in the London Art Sales.

Over £1,300,000 has been spent on art treasures at Christie's Rooms in London, England, during the year 1910. The picture sales of the season compare favorably in interest with famous disposals in the past, such as the great Gillot sale in 1872, when a sum of £164,501 was realized; the Dudley sale of 1893, which yielded a turnover of over £99,000, and the Day, Cuthbertson, Gaskell and Quilter sales last year, which produced an aggregate of £309,650.

The principal sale of the year was that of the remaining portion of the Alexander Young collection, with its magnificent examples of the masters of the Barbizon and Modern Dutch schools. In three days £154,069 was obtained, a result which has only been exceeded on one occasion.

The wonderful records achieved by Turner in 1908 and 1909 paled before the 13,000 guineas fetched by Corot's delightful "Birds'-Nesters" in the Young sale. The remarkable prices obtained throughout this sale afford an encouraging commentary on the value of the George Salting bequest, which was bought chiefly from this collection. The rapid rise in favor of the painters of the Corot school in recent years has brought considerable profit to those whose earlier appreciation of their works led them to collect when prices were low.

In the Day sale last year the net profit amounted to about half the total sum realized, and the dispersals of 1910 have furnished numerous instances of profitable collecting. Only £460 was paid thirty years ago for the Corot which changed hands this season at 13,000 guineas, while Constable's "Stoke-by-Neyland," which realized 8,800 guineas, was bought in 1860 for 100 guineas.

Jacques' pastoral scenes were obtainable not very long ago for about 50 guineas each, whereas a small painting of a shepherd and flock by him fetched 900 guineas in the Young sale. Millet, whose little picture of a shepherdess, measuring only 8 1-4 inches by 6 1-4 inches, brought in 1,050 guineas in the Young sale, was at one period of his life so poor that he could not afford to buy canvasses.

The second sale of importance during the year was that of the collection formed by the late Baron Schroeder, which yielded £138,058. In this the chief treasures were the rare specimens of French decorative art Sevres porcelain, gorgeous snuffboxes, and tablet cases, and other ornate objects made in the luxurious days of Louis XV. and Louis XVI.

No les than 9,000 guineas was paid for a set of three little Sevres vases which had cost little more than a quarter the sum in 1886, while a Louis XV. snuffbox, acquired for £1,000, was re-sold at £4,000.

In this sale also there was again brought under the hammer the famous sixteenth century crystal biberon which realised the record sum of 15,500 guineas after a sensational contest in 1905. As was expected, its value dropped on this occasion to £10,000.

On Another Errand.

The Gaekwar of Baroda was one of the first of the native Indian princes to take up motoring, and his state car is a really gorgeous affair.

In this connection he tells an amusing story of a minor prince who brought a motor-car some years ago. It was a matter of considerable difficulty for him to get regular supplies of petrol, while his tire difficulties were more than usual. Upon one occasion the Gaekwar met this prince, gravely driving along in his motor-car, to which he had fitted a pair of shafts and in them was harnessed an old horse!

Upon another occasion the Gaekwar was visiting Windsor, and entered a chemist's shop to make some purchases. A little girl came running towards the shop and tumbled just outside the door. The Gaekwar at once went to her assistance, and, having picked her up, said:

"How did you come to fall?"

"I didn't come to fall," replied the child with great dignity, "I came for some turpentine."

The New Lord Steward.

The Earl of Chesterfield, who has been appointed Lord Steward of the Household in succession to Lord Beauchamp, is no novice at Court duties, for from 1892 to 1894 he filled the office of Treasurer of the Household to Queen Victoria. He is the tenth peer of the title and is descended from a famous family. The first Earl of Chesterfield fought for King Charles against the Roundheads. The fourth Lord Chesterfield was the author of the famous "Letters" in which he gives much good advice to his son, one particularly practical piece being: "Let your lodging be up to your means, your dress above your means, and your living below your means." Lord Chesterfield is aged fifty-six, is very good-looking, and is considered one of the best-dressed men in London. He is also a good shot and an excellent golfer.

Dramatist at Trial.

The dramatic features of the Crippen case are appealing to actors and playwrights as no other case in the history of English criminality, and features of it will undoubtedly find their way to the stage. This was evidenced the other day by the appearance in Bow Street court room of Sir John Hare and H. B. Irving, leading English actors, and of Sir Wm. Gilbert, playwright. They had seats close to the witness stand, and made frequent notes. On two previous occasions Sir W. Gilbert was honored with a seat by the side of Sir Albert De Rutzen, the presiding magistrate.

Epsom Salts.

A distinguished foreigner visiting Epsom Downs in Thackeray's company noticed many men dressed as sailors who were not, to native and experienced eyes, the real article. "Ah," said the visitor, "these are, I suppose, who you call your British tars?" "Oh, no," replied Thackeray. "Only Epsom salts."

Wesley Rotham, of Shallow Lake, had his hand severely crushed in a factory.

Offerings this morning amounted to 1500 cattle, 1200 sheep and lambs, 1200 hogs and 270 calves. The feeling, if any, was inclined to be easier on account of increased offerings, which consisted largely of rough and medium stock. A decided weak feeling developed for hogs and prices scored a further decline of 50c to 60c per cwt. since last Wednesday, a net drop of $1 to $1.15 since Oct. 1, attributed chiefly to liberal supplies coming forward. A fairly active trade was done with sales of selected lots at $8 per cwt.

JURY SHOULD DO DUTY FEARLESSLY

Said Chanceller Boyd in Addrers at Opening of Fall Assizes--Deline Case Suspended.

Chancellor Sir John Boyd is presiding at the fall assizes of the High Court of Justice, which opened at one o'clock to-day.

The Crown is not ready to proceed with the charge against Hugh Deline at present and the charge to the grand jury was directed only in connection with the circumstances whereby James Gorham shot and killed his mother.

The personnel of the grand jury is; John Comstock, forman; A. G. Shearer, Robt. Beach, J. F. Brown, A. E. Coulthard, Thos. Graham, W. J. Porter, Sherman Garbutt, James Thorne, Robert Horner, Allan Caldwell, Thomas Dale and Wm. Nelson.

Mr. E. B. Meredith, K. C., will conduct the prosecution in the Gorham case and act in the same capacity in the event of the Deline case being proceeded with.

EPIDEMIC OF CRIME.

In the address to the grand jury Chancellor Boyd said that their chief function was to investigate crime. They were called for that purpose. Investigations into other matters, such as visiting public institutions could be taken up and reported on.

"I regret in this instance," said his Lordship, "that I have to try one case of murder. There seems to be an epidemic of crime about the country and there is a dismal state of affairs existing. This should be investigated fearlessly and it is your duty to do yours fearlessly. One case is suspended on account of the Crown wishing to possess certain evidence, before bringing the case before the Grand jury.

Chancellor Boyd then took up the Gorham case and outlined the duties of the grand jury, after which they were dismissed and the jury for the first civil action called. In this action Edward Foley claims $3,000 damages from Wm West, jr., and Wm. West, sr, of Havelock, for injuries which he received while in their employ. CHORUS GIRL IS BEREAVED

Miss Gertrude O'Connor, a chorus girl of "The Alaskan," received a wire in Belleville last night telling her of the death of her sister in Chicago.

A RAISE THAT WASN'T A RAISE AND THE RESULT

At the police court this morning, William Pare was awarded $2 on a claim for $5, as wages due him by R. H. Jackson, proprietor of the Crown Hotel.

Pare said he hired on a Wedesnday at $4 and board per week of seven days. One week ago last Wednesday he was paid $5, with the explanation that the extra $1 was a raise. Last Wednesday he received $3 and on Saturday gave notice that he would leave at the end of the regular week. He was told to clear out at once. This he did at three o'clock.

Mr. Jackson denied making any statement about a raise. The $1 extra was to go on the following week's wages, and he paid the other three dollars in the presence of another, on the Wednesday, when due. All that was owing Pare was the time from last Wednesday at noon to Saturday at three o'clock.

The plaintiff had no witness to prove his statement about the raise in the face of the denial of the defendant as the Magistrate held was necessary, and all he was awarded was $2.

FINED $4.35.

For using profane and insulting language on the street Saturday, a young fellow parted with $4.35.

Mrs Wallace Martin, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Kerr, of Lorneville, returned home last week.

THE ROAD ROLLER.

Has anybody seen the new road roller recently purchased by the Cavan Council. The formidable looking monster was observed resting quietly under the shade of a wild gooseberry bush on the middle road one day last week. Just what redeeming influence the above instrument of torture will have on the surface of our public roads is pretty hard to conjecture. But, leaving all jokes aside, we would suggest that the Council find some means of anchoring it to an elm tree, or some other substantial structure over night, as in its present abandoned condition it offers an irresistible temtation to the various junk dealers which travel over our highways.

NEW HOUSE.

Mr. Matt Hutchinson has erected a new $3,000 house on the farm recently purchased from his brother, Mr. Lou Hutchinson. The property, which is commonly known as the "Ranch," will be turned into such by its present owner, who intends to devote his attention chiefly to cattle raising.

EDWARD JARDINE CONTRADICTS WITNESSES AGAINST HIM

Blackstock Submits Members of the Jardine Family to a Merciless Examination, and Gets Them to Contradict One Another—Edward Says He Knows Nothing About Matter

Goderich, Oct. 26.—Replete with dramatic intensity were yesterday's sessions of the inquest into the murder of young Lizzie Anderson, whose nude body, with throat cut, was found in the cellar of an empty house here several days after she had been missing from home, and after having attended the local fall fair.

George Tate Blackstock, K.C., appeared as crown examiner, and he subjected Ed. Jardine, who has become a central figure in the case, and his mother to a most merciless examination.

Three dramatic climaxes, the like of which Canadian courts have seldom seen, resulted from his efforts to wring from Mrs. Jardine, Edward Jardine and Thomas Jardine truthful admissions of a nature that he would suggest. He reminded them all of the awful seriousness of an oath; inserted long, effective pauses, during which he pleaded with them to consider they had called upon their Maker to witness before they made final answer, and thundered at them that they were lying in the very face of the oath they had taken.

He shook their evidence adduced in former sittings, and forced them to flatly contradict one another, but he did not get an admission of any kind that bore directly on the commission of the crime.

Mrs. Jardine was on the witness stand for three hours and ten minutes, and Edward was subjected to a four hours' gruelling, from 3.30 p.m. till 7.30. Mr. Blackstock was first ruffled by the early announcement that Mrs. Jardine refused to present herself as a witness, pleading illness. This was too much in the face of her refusal to appear on the last day named for the enquiry, which was adjourned on her account, and a warrant was issued to secure her presence. He insisted that she be produced, and sent Chief Postlethwaite and a doctor up to the house to bring her down.

Then, as the nature of her answers and her contradictions rankled him, he scornfully arraigned her in these terms: "Anyone who has heard your evidence will believe—it is only fair to say—that you have not told the truth. The various stories you have told would shake even your own confidence in such evidence, would it not?"

"Yes," admitted the woman.

Another feature that goaded the crown inquisitor was the persistency of young Edward Jardine in calling witness after witness liars. Thirteen of them, old, young and medium, swore to seeing him on the fair grounds when he said he was at home and Mr. Blackstock also read from the evidence of eight more witnesses along the same line, and these all, he said, were liars.

"Now, then, that's a pretty large band of liars, don't you think?" finally remarked counsel.

"I should think, yes," admitted Jardine.

"And you think that they are all coming here loaded up with lies against you?"

"Yes, they certainly are."

"Then, if we take a more charitable view of it, and if these people are telling the truth; they saw you with the Anderson girl long after you saw her with the stranger of the fedora hat, you speak of?"

"Yes, but they are not telling the truth."

Mr. Blackstock paused and stared for a minute dramatically into the prisoner's face. Slowly and distinctly he enunciated: "I am obliged to ask you one or two questions which I'd rather not ask, for the purpose of getting at you mind. Your brother John was in trouble some years ago?"

"I don't know."

"Did one of your brothers serve a term in the penitentiary for an assault on a little girl, four years old?"

"I think Albert did."

"No, not Albert—we are coming to that. Did you know that your brother Albert was convicted for an assault on a girl 14 years old?"

"Yes, he was sent down."

"And was he ordered to receive 12 stripes on his back."

"I don't know as to that."

"When did he get back?"

"Last spring."

"And did you know that it would fare badly with a man if he committed an assault on a young girl against her will?"

"Yes."

"Now, I am going to ask you presently—but not now—I'm going to ask you whether you knew of any person connected with the death of Lizzie Anderson. Now I don't want you to answer right away. I will tell you when to answer; but I want to warn you that, if you do know, and say you don't you will be in a pretty bad box when it comes to the time when you wish to say you do. I am going to give you a few minutes to consider, while the clock ticks; then I will tell you to answer. Consider well what that answer shall be, and what it means."

Jardine's color alternated between white and crimson. Tick, tock, tick, tock—there was not a soul among the 100 spectators that did not count the ticks for the space of a dozen breaths.

"Now, I ask you that question," said Mr. Blackstock.

"I don't know anything about it," Jardine replied huskily.

"Can you suggest any reason for these people lying about you?"

"Not unless they want to try and condemn some innocent person," was the calm reply.

"And you know, of course, the very great necessity of knowing who was the last person with this girl?"

"I'd tell if I knew, but I don't."

"That will do; you may go, but you must not leave the court room," said the counsel, and called for his brother Thomas.

The Jardines were the only witnesses excluded from the court room during the examination yesterday, and a watch was put on their house, when it was found that proceedings would have to be extended into another day.

CROWN CANNOT PROVE SHE KNEW OF MURDER

London, Oct. 26.—After a trial of unexpected brevity yesterday, Ethel Clare Leneve was acquitted of the charge of being an accessory after the fact to the murder of Belle Elmore Crippen.

Miss Leneve did not take the stand in her own defence. Pale and trembling, and apparently fearful of an adverse verdict, she pleaded not guilty to the charge that she "did afterwards feloniously receive, comfort, harbor, assist and maintain" Dr. Crippen.

Richard D. Muir, the crown prosecutor, started out as though he intended to prosecute the girl as vigorously as he did Crippen, and in his opening statement he urged that the prisoner undoubtedly knew of the murder of Mrs. Crippen, as she was the motive of the crime.

Only a few witnesses were called by the prosecution, however, and the examination of these was brief, with no determined effort to bring out damaging evidence against the girl.

Lord Chief Justice Alverstone, who arraigned Crippen in such merciless fashion, summed up the evidence for the jury, and his every word and action clearly indicated that his sympathies were with the unfortunate prisoner, whose delicate condition was a potent point in her favor.

Miss Leneve was almost hysterical with joy, and wept and laughed hysterically. Her aged father and mother were the first to reach her, and their emotion was as marked as that of the girl.

As Miss Leneve sat in the prisoner's dock yesterday she was a pathetic figure. She is 27 years of age, of medium build, light brown hair, grey eyes, and excellent teeth. Her face is pretty, and she is trim. She wears good clothes becomingly, and, naturally buoyant and affable, she is a prepossessing woman.

The jury was out exactly nineteen minutes. Immediately after the verdict was read the court ordered the release of Miss Leneve, who remained in the building for nearly an hour, by which time the police had succeeded in dispersing the crowd outside.

Miss Leneve's counsel, Frederick E. Smith, a member of the House of Commons, asked the jury to bear in mind that his client had been under the influence of Crippen, one of the most dangerous criminals of recent years, since she was sixteen years old.

Lord Chief Justice Alverstone, who presided, in summing up for the jury, said that he saw no reason why Dr. Crippen should have told Miss Leneve a story different from that which he told to others.

Ordered to Muzzle Dogs.

Chatham, Oct. 26.—The Board of Health have been notified by the provincial authorities that they will have to enforce the dog muzzling regulations. Since the council repealed the muzzling bylaw, the dogs have been running without muzzles. The Board of Health referred the matter to the council, advising action on the part of the police to prosecute all dog owners allowing their dogs to run unmuzzled. The matter will come up at the next council meeting. Until they take action the dogs are still allowed to go unmuzzled.

The Tack Cure.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 26.—William Williams, a negro, is in jail here, charged with swindling, on account of the peculiar cure from blindness which he devised. His remedy consisted in driving a tack into the back portion of a blind negro's skull, and charging $2.50 for the operation. Robert Ward, the victim, told the police court judge that the tack process was not very painful, but that Williams' manner of taking the $2.50 "hurt considerable."

Honors for Sir Henry Pellatt.

London, Oct. 26.—The president, Sir Henry Bargrave Deane, will preside at the banquet to be given on Nov. 1 by the Society of Knights Bachelor to Col. Sir Henry Pellatt, C.V.O., a member of the council, as a mark of appreciation of his work. Over 70 knights have already intimated their intention of being present.

Calling Out the Reserves.

Chatham, Oct 26.—Belgian residents here have received orders from their Government to report at Antwerp for military service. It is believed that the call of the reserves indicates the fear of the Belgian Government that the Portuguese revolution will be followed by disturbances in Belgium.

SON-IN-LAW OF TAMMANY BOSS WILL BE GROOM FOR LOCAL MAN

New York, Oct. 25.—John J. Breen, who last year startled New York society by eloping with Miss Ethel Croker, daughter of Richard Croker, the former Tammany boss, and who ever since has been separated from his bride, announced last night that he will leave New York to-day for Peterborough, Ontario, where he has accepted a position as head groom for the Hon. J. R. Stratton, M.P.

Breen also announced that his wife, who is now with her mother in Paris, will return to New York in a month and proceed to Canada to live with him in his new home.

In making the double announcement of reconciliation and expatriation, Breen has again brought to the front the story of his romantic courtship, when, as head groom for the millionaire Schwartz brothers, he frequently escorted the pretty daughter of the erstwhile Tammany chieftain on numerous gallops around the bridle paths of Central Park. The marriage ceremony was performed by a justice of the peace at Hoboken.

"My wife and I," said Breen last night, "will have a reunion at the pier when she returns to America, and go together to our new home. I am just as good as the Crokers. In my new home in that ideal Canadian country, Mrs. Breen and I will have the opportunity to enjoy our beloved sport of horseback riding. We will not be far from Toronto, and can frequently run into that city.

"I landed a poor immigrant, but through faithful work for my first employer soon found the chance to advance, and advance I did, until, as head groom of the Schwartz boys I met the woman I love. Then I began to think of something other than my work. Miss Croker reciprocated my affection, and last winter promised to be my wife. Our troths were pledged one chilly day as the hoofs of our steeds clattered over the frozen bridle paths."

MRS. DELINE'S BODY WAS EXHUMED

The body of Mrs. Hugh Deline was exhumed at Havelock yesterday and startling discoveries were made it is alleged which went to show unnatural relations of an unmentionable character between Deline and his wife.

Dr. R. Bruce Smith, provincial inspector of prisons and charities was seen by the Review but vaguely intimated to the reporter that he knew nothing of the body being exhumed.

STORM AT NAPLES.

Bay Has Been Devastated by Strange Storm Combination.

Naples, Oct. 26.—The beautiful coasts of the Bay of Naples and the Gulf of Salerno and the Islands of Ischia and Procida have been devastated by a peculiar combination of the elements.

The disaster appears to have come in the form of a cyclone having three centres, the first over the Island of Ischia, the second over the Town of Torre Del Greco, on the east coast of the Bay of Naples, and the third sweeping the Gulf of Salerno.

Accompanying the cyclone were a cloudburst, a tidal wave and violent eruptions of Mount Vesuvius, and from a crater suddenly opened on the summit of the long extinct Mount Epomeo, on the Island of Ischia.

Admiral Leonardi, Minister of Marine, is at Ischia organizing the relief, for which $400,000 is already available.

The coasts of the mainland, which the day before were beautiful with their growth of orange, lemon and mandarin trees, have been overrun with rivers of mud and ashes from Mount Vesuvius. Human bodies and the carcases of dumb animals have been discovered in the molten stream.

Later and more accurate reports reduce the estimate of fatalities to about 00. The greater number of deaths were at Cetara, on the north coast of the Gulf of Salerno.

Premier of France Has Bodyguard.

Paris, Oct. 26.—President Fallieres and the members of the Cabinet are being guarded constantly, as the result of the appearance of an anarchistic circular, condemning the Ministers to death, because of the conviction in the courts of militant members among the railway strikers.

When Parliament reassembled yesterday after the recess, the extreme Socialists in the chamber, who are determined to champion the cause of the railway strikers, made a violent demonstration against M. Lepine, prefect of police, who was present as a spectator.

Several interpellations on the subject of the recent strike were made, some for and some against the right of the railroad men to unionize and strike, and another calling for the dissolution of the Federation of Labor, on the ground that it was revolutionary.

Would Swallow Holland.

London, Oct. 26.—Germany is gradually drawing Holland into her grip.

Holland, despairing of British protection, is considering what terms she can make with Germany.

This information is published by The Express, which says that the statement is made by a Dutch gentleman of the highest standing in Amsterdam.

"Annexation," he adds, "is a word which, if used, no doubt would breed patriots, but it would be called by another name. A great deal will be talked about preserving our integrity and also about obtaining protection of the great German Empire. It would be suggested that our trade would derive enormous advantages. All this would sound better, but the result would be the same."

Quebec Utters Protest.

Quebec, Oct. 26.—Over 5,000 persons assembled in the Parish Church of St. Roch's to protest against the recent utterances of Mayor Nathan of Rome, against his holiness the Pope. Dr. Delarge, M.P.P., president of the St. Jean the Baptiste Society, presided, having on his right Mgr. Begin, Hon. Mr. Caron, Senator Landry and Hon. T. Chapais, while on his left sat Mayor Drouin, Mgr. Brunault, Nicolet, Ald. Gosselin and Mr. Langlois, M.P.P., St. Sauveur. Sixty-eight French-Canadian societies that were represented at the meeting adopted resolutions condemning the attitude taken by Mayor Nathan.

New Station for Guelph.

Guelph, Oct. 26.—Mayor G. D. Hastings has received a telegram from Supt. Oborne of the C.P.R., telling him that the contract for the new station has been let to Contractors Wells and Gray and that work was to be commenced right away. The new station will be situated several hundred yards west of the present one, and will cost between $20,000 and $25,000.

SIR HENRY WAS RIGHT.

He Addressed the King as "Sir" and Papers Criticized Him.

Col. Sir Henry Pellatt, the commander of the Queen's Own Rifles of Canada, who conveyed the entire regiment at his own expense over to England to take part in the annual manoeuvres of the English army, is taken to task by several London newspapers for having addressed King George frequently as "Sir" on the occasion of the reception of the officers and a squad of the rank and file of his regiment at Balmoral by the sovereign, writes the Marquise de Fontenoy. The newspapers in question describe this form of address as emphasizing "Canada's democracy."

They are evidently unaware that this is the entirely correct form of addressing the King of England, as everybody who has lived at court or who has enjoyed any sort of intimacy with the reigning house of England perfectly well knows. The phrase "Your Majesty" is rarely used in ordinary conversation, or even in current official business, being reserved for very ceremonial occasions and formal documents. The King and all the princes of his house are invariably addressed as "sir," while not "madam," but "ma'am" is the form of address used in speaking to Queen Mary, to Queen Alexandra and to all the princesses of the reigning family. The nurses and governesses of the only daughter of King George are accustomed to address her as "Princess Mary." But people who do not know her so well are obliged to address her as "ma'am," and there have been occasions when it has sounded quite odd to hear an aged dowager addressing a toddling princess as "ma'am."

It is a pity under the circumstances that the English newspapers should not have made sure of their facts before attempting to criticize Col. Sir Henry Pellatt, and it only goes to show how little they know about such matters. Their ignorance is, however, by no means confined to themselves. It extends to many other professions, even to that of law, for when King Edward, as Prince of Wales, appeared in the witness box at the famous baccarat trial Sir Edward Clarke, the former Solicitor-General excited much amusement during his cross-examination of his future sovereign by his constant repetition, with much unction, of the phrase, "your royal highness," whereas Sir Charles Russell, afterwards Lord Chief Justice, throughout his examination of the prince used the words "your royal highness," only once, addressing him throughout all the other questions as "sir"; but, then, he was a member of the Jockey Club and one of the prince's personal friends.

Favors the King James Bible.

We are just old-fashioned enough to take no stock in the modernized Bible, which is shortly to appear "couched in every-day language with obsolete words and phrases eliminated." The King James Bible has done more to preserve the good old Saxon words and style, which are the best English literature has produced, than anything else. Instead of a movement to get us farther away from that vigorous, simple, classic style, and in the interest of establishing the finest literary ideals possible to a people destined to use the curious hybrid which the English language has become, it would be more sensible to frown upon all efforts to improve on the King James Bible. It is the greatest treasure-house inspiration and teacher of good English that we possess.—Success.

The Origin of the Kiss.

Concerning the kiss and its origin opinions differ. Some wise men declare that the kissing habit is one of the remains of cannibalism and that its beginning was nothing more than the carnivorous impulse to bite. When primitive man gave a kiss he expressed an affection equal to his love for his foods. The kiss meant, "I love you well enough to eat you." It is certain that kissing was one of the most ancient customs. It was current among the ancient Jews and is well known among all orientals. Nor is it to disappear. Exalted by the dying act of more than one historical hero, sung by all the poets from Solomon onward, the kiss is here to stay. The world could not do without it.

Lost In the Air.

Belmont Aviation Field, L.I., Oct. 26.—That a man can get lost in the air and remain lost for more than an hour was the amazing assertion of Count Jacques de Lesseps, made yesterday afternoon. In proof, he cited his own experience, when in his Bleriot monoplane he wandered over a considerable portion of Long Island at an altitude of about 6,800 feet, vainly seeking for the aviation field, so that he might alight. When he finally did reach the ground he was benumbed with cold and a trifle unnerved from his experience.

On two occasions Count de Lesseps started to descend to a race track, only to find that it was not the right one.

The latter part of the second hourly duration contest was flown in the rain. "Bud" Mars, in a Curtiss biplane, won with 16 laps to his credit, with Claude Graham-White second, with 15 laps. McCurdy, in a Curtiss machine, was third, with 12 laps.

James Radley, of the English speed team, yesterday afternoon flew ten miles across country and back, twenty miles in all, in 19 minutes 48 2-5 seconds.

Italian In Trouble.

Guelph, Oct. 26.—Antoni Rosso, an Italian, who last April was let go on suspended sentence on a charge of assault, is again wanted by the Guelph police. Monday night, while on his way to work, James Judge, a foreman of the Guelph Pipe Mills, says the Italian met him in a lane leading to the factory and knocked him down. He claims it was because he would not give the man work, and says that had it not been for two mill hands who came to his rescue, he might have fared much worse at the hands of the Italian, who had him down and was brandishing a knife over him wildly.

Fined Editor for Contempt.

London, Oct. 26.—There was a sequel to the Crippen murder case yesterday, when the high court inflicted a fine of $1,000 upon Assistant Editor Perris for contempt of court in permitting the publication in The London Chronicle of a story asserting that Dr. Crippen had purchased hyoscin, and had confessed to the murder of his wife.

The court ordered that Perris be imprisoned until the fine is paid.

PISANI IS ACQUITTED OF MURDER AT BRACEBRIDGE

During His Appearance, Charged With Murder of Raphael Domini, Pisani Says That He Goes In Danger of His Life Because of Threats of Sam and Toni Salvatore

Bracebridge, Oct. 26.—This town is buzzing with talk of black hand operations, following the sensational arrest in the Assize Court yesterday morning, before Justice Riddell, in the trial of Joseph Pisani, an Italian lumberjack, for the murder of Raphael Domini, in the camp near Foot's Bay, on June 15 last. As Guiseppe Bonnazza was giving his evidence for the prosecution, he stopped and declared, through Frank Motta of Toronto, interpreter, that he was afraid to testify.

He said: "My life is in danger from the black hand, who are here now."

He said that Sam Salvatore, implicated in the shooting of Raphael, and Toni Salvatore, his brother, with others, had demanded $20 as his admission fee to the black hand, and threatened to kill him if he did not so join.

Judge Riddell immediately ordered the arrest and prosecution of these men, for so intimidating the prospective witness.

Pisani was acquitted at the close of the morning sitting. He was defended by T. C. Robinette, K.C., and A. A. Mahaffy of Bracebridge. The evidence showed that Sam Salvatore and three others had gone to camp one for the Canada Chemical Co., near Foote's Bay, on the day of the shooting of Domini. There had been drinking, and an altercation arose between Sam Salvatore and Pisani. Salvatore had secured a double-barrelled shotgun and had chased Pisani to camp two, a quarter of a mile distant, where he fired at him and crouched. Domini intervened with hands uplifted, and begged Pisani not to retaliate; but Pisani fired at a distance of 100 feet, piercing Domini's heart, and instantly killing him.

At the afternoon session Sam Salvatore was placed on trial upon the double indictment of shooting with intent to kill, and with intent to maim Pisani. He was defended by M. P. Tudhope of Orillia, and P. E. Godson of Bracebridge. The same evidence was submitted in this case as in the former hearing, and Sam Salvatore was convicted and later sentenced to ten years in the penitentiary by Justice Riddell.

A true bill had been brought in by the grand jury against the three men arrested in the morning, upon a charge of demanding the $20, with menaces from Guiseppe Bonnazza. The judge ruled that as the demands were alleged to have been made at different times, the indictment of all but Jim Hill must be dropped.

Hill was tried, but the jury found him not guilty. Judge Riddell declared that he did not agree with the finding of the jury, and later, in sentencing Sam Salvatore at the close of the Hill hearing, said that he had only agreed with the acquittal of Pisani and the conviction of Salvatore, among all the verdicts returned at the Assize. If juries in this district were going to so act, it would be well for the crown officer to seriously consider changing the place of trial.

Later, the charge against Sam Salvatore of demanding money with menaces was dropped, in the light of his other sentence.

Before Police Magistrate Spencer, Toni Salvatore was arraigned upon a charge of threatening Guiseppe Bonnazza, who swore that Toni Salvatore had gone to him after the arrest of his brother, and had said that he, Bonnazza contemplated swearing bad things against his brother Sam, and that he had better tell the truth, failing which he, Toni, had $100 which he would spend to have him sent to jail. Salvatore was discharged, and was later discharged from the further charge of demanding $20, as his admission fee to the black hand.

A Rosy Picture.

London, Oct. 26.—Sir G. Doughty received a great welcome at Grimsby. With a torchlight procession his supporters escorted him to a meeting attended by eight thousand people. Sir G. Doughty said that Canada was a country, without a workhouse, pauper, beggar or shoeless child wanting bread. The Dominion had progressed amazingly in the last seven years, and the tariff that had made Canada could make Britain.

New German Cruiser Made 28 Knots.

Berlin, Oct. 26.—The official tables of the trials of the new cruiser Von der Tann showed that the vessel made an average speed of 27.4 knots an hour in six runs. The highest speed attained at any time was 28 1-2 knots, the engines developing 80,000 horse-power. The runs were made in water about 215 feet deep, and it is calculated that the cruiser will do better over a depth of 350 feet and average 28 knots.

Tried to Fire Residence.

Chatham, Oct. 26.—Word has reached here of a daring attempt to set fire to the residence of Henry Enos at North Buxton. Detecting smoke, Mrs. Enos made a search, finding overalls and other rubbish, thoroughly saturated with oil, beneath the bedroom floor. In the darkness she saw two unknown men running toward the railroad tracks. They are believed to have escaped on a passing freight.

Enos is a brother of Jake Enos, who was shot at Chatham last summer.

Electric Railway For the West.

Calgary, Oct. 26.—From Medicine Hat comes the report that the Alberta Electric Railway Co. is applying to the Dominion Government for a charter to install telephone and telegraph lines, to construct and operate light and power plants, to acquire and operate coal mines, and to construct and operate an electric railway to connect Medicine Hat, Calgary, Lethbridge, Banff and intermedite towns. The main line will run through the irrigation block part of the way.

Chief Used the Strap.

Cornwall, Oct. 26.—The Cornwall police station was the scene of a rather unique proceeding yesterday morning, when Chief of Police Smith, at the request of a local lady, soundly strapped her twelve-year-old son, who had become a confirmed truant. The penalty was given with all proper formalities, the culprit being held on another officer's knee, while he received strokes of a heavy strap, and was promised five extra for the next offence.

Court Accommodation Roasted.

Thirty Claimants to Estate.

Toronto, Oct. 26.—There are thirty claimants for the estate of Felix Carr, who died in squalid circumstances on West Queen street, though he had $7,901 in the bank, and after leaving it to be surmised that he was possessed of hidden treasure. The National Trust Co. will investigate the claims.

Contest for Mayor of Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Oct. 26.—Opposition on the part of the present regime in municipal government to the candidature of Ed. Martin for the mayorality was made certain yesterday, when J. G. Shot Director.

New Orleans, Oct. 26.—A special from Ceiba, Spanish Honduras, says that Antonio Davila, nephew of President Davila, is under arrest there charged with the murder of Jose Ballesteros, director of police. The latter was killed, following a warning given by Ballesteros to a woman with whom young Davila associated, that disorderly conduct at her house must cease. Davila left the house with the police chief, but when a short distance from the place he drew a revolver and shot the officer dead.

Home Rule All Round.

London, Oct. 26.—The idea of home rule all around as the first step toward the realization of a federal empire appears likely to become a working policy. The fact that The Times has just published a series of articles advocating a compromise, urging that the situation is quite changed since the "bloody eighties," and that the Unionists might now with dignity acquesce in, although they could not initiate, a policy of home rule, shows how Unionist hostility towards home rule is waning.

In Spain wireless telegraph apparatus is used to detect the approach of thunder storms.

YOUNG MAN GET MARRIED

Young man, you must pay your poll tax or you will be prosecuted. The charge for celibacy is light. You should be fined, instead of having to pay so small a sum. She is ready. She is anxious and willing to keep you warm these cold winter nights that are fast approaching. You have a good job; why don't you hustle to the parson! Then you will have somewhere to go at night instead of standing on the street corner or in the saloon. Honest, why don't you get married!

HIS WILL

Worcester, Mass., Oct. 24.—One of the most unique wills ever recorded in this state was that of Charles Hastings, late of Ashburnham, filed here, who leaves real estate valued at several thousand dollars and transfers the title of the same to the Lord Jesus, appointing him trustee of the property.

The will, which was drawn more than a quarter of a century ago, deeds several garden lots and buildings in the town of Ashburnham to the Saviour as rightful owner according to the Bible, the first book of laws.

The instrument was given, according to the Probate Court records, in consideration of the love and goodwill of the Saviour and one cent found in one of the buildings.

There is nothing unique in this. Billy B. D. lives a fast life and becomes ill. He must die. He immediately gives everything into the hands of the Almighty. He has no use for money, so he bequeaths His Maker his soul.

The Angels must laugh to see a crook get weak kneed in the last moment and cash in a bogus bum life for a harp and a crown. But Hastings, of Ashburnham, did nothing more than hundreds of people are doing. They die, leave their money to missions or to churches or hospitals. That's all work in league with the mind of the Master Man.

A COINCIDENCE

Theft of ideas has been charged more often than deserved. Many an obscure poet has been held up to scorn because in the sweat of his brow he has evolved a line or two that have paralleled the utterance of some master who has gone before. Many an inventor after years of toil has beheld the consummation of his work with joy only to have his hopes of fame and fortune dashed to the ground by the announcement that in some other quarter of the globe an invention similar to his own was made public but a few days earlier.

A case in point is furnished this week by the front pages of the Saturday Evening Post and the Canadian Courier. Both are dated October 22. Both have pictures of a girl with a mirror and both girls are pleasantly engaged in that mysterious rite of the boudoir which doth incarnadine the lips. These papers are issued at the same time in cities five hundred miles apart. There was no opportunity to copy. Yet the pictures are alike both in treatment and subject.—Toronto Star.

A strange case in the realms of mechanics took place some years ago. Charles Raymond manufacturer of the Raymond Sewing Machine had for a long time worked in Guelph on a Bicycle coaster brake when by a movement of the foot the brake was applied. He completed his model on the bicycle and was standing on the office steps when a bicycle agent from Hamilton wheeled up with the very arrangement that Mr. Raymond himself had completed. It had just been bought out and patented by an American firm.

Strange yes, rather.

Speak of the Devil and he is sure to appear. Why? Simply because the Devil has made his presence felt consciously or unconsciously, over the ether on the brains of those who are talking about him.

The wisest of us are as children when we discuss the Great Unknown.

ROBBERS AND GENTLEMEN

It is harder for a rich man to enter jail in this province than it is for a camel to pass through a needle's eye. If any of your victims whom you have robbed of every cent they possessed attempt to get partly even with society by stealing so much as the price of a single loaf, then woe betide them. The majesty of the law will assert itself.—Montreal Star.

We are rather inclined to think that the majesty of the law very often hinges on the digestion of the judge. But can you help admiring a crook like Sheldon, who can get away with a million, and can you help despising a poor brute who will snatch a lady's purse and run! Women would never be safe unless these fellows were punished and the sucker born every minute wouldn't know what to do with his money if the man with the bait didn't come along.

Now, brokers are not robbers or thieves, no matter how we may try to make them so. THEY ARE MERELY GENTLEMEN OF HIGH FINACNE who drink champagne once in a while and say "drive on, James," or steer their own automobile. We are merely made to smell the gasoline or sidestep the wheels.

WHERE DID THE MONEY COME FROM?

Another month has passed without an announcement from the Secretary of State as to the identity of the manufacturers and dealers who are implicated in the scandal in connection with the Government Printing Bureau at Ottawa. Further dismissals of employees have taken place, but the public is still kept in the dark as to the source from whence the bribery or other corrupt practices emanated.

The continued silence of the Government on this phase of the question has developed a most incongruous situation. The scant announcements Mr. Murphy acted as a flash of light on the Bureau, revealing indisputable evidences of the existence of graft in its conduct. To graft, as to a quarrel, two parties are necessary. One party—the receiver of the rake-off, usually the weaker of the two—has been exposed to the punishment of publicity as well as to dismissal, while even the identity of the other party has up to the present time been concealed.

In such a condition of affairs in accordance with the established principles of British equality and fair play to all parties! We do not doubt but that in the end the Government will make public the desired information, but we do claim that the proper time for its publication is simultaneous with the announcement of the dismissal of the employees forming a party to the dishonest practices.

Every now and then vague suggestions come to the ears of master printers in the United States and Canada that certain firms make a practice of using questionable means in the securing of business. It is very difficult, nay, almost impossible, in such cases to secure conclusive evidence that such is the case. The Dominion Government has in its possession evidence sufficient to warrant the dismissal of members of the bureau as recipients of rake-offs and therefore sufficient to stigmatise certain firms as guilty of bribery. Occasional flashes of light, such as have been already given, are not sufficient, the light must be turned on full and kept on until the printers and publishers of Canada know where the money came from.—Printer and Publisher.

WILL LAURIER RESIGN?

On what is declared to be reliable authority, a statement is made that Sir Wilfrid Laurier's present intention is to retire from politics before the next general election. In fact the deliberate assertion is made that the Premier has announced this "privately" to at least one of his associates. While the story does not seem at all likely in view of the fact that the Premier so very lately undertook an arduous political tour of the west, the unexpected frequently happens.

The reason given for this reported intention of the Premier to retire is that the situation in Quebec province is so unsatisfactory to him from both a party and a personal point of view that Sir Wilfrid has little or no stomach for a campaign to carry the province at the next general election. His present majority is got from the province of Quebec.

The Government certainly views the inroads of Mr. Bourassa on the party strength with alarm, and is said not to see much prospect of checking them; and Sir Wilfrid Laurier is said to feel this particularly keenly.

Mr. Fielding's condition is another matter which has depressed the Premier. While the mental faculties and fighting disposition of the Minister of Finance are as keen as ever, he is physically unfit for hard work and active politics at present, and the opinion of his medical advisers is that he should have a prolonged rest. Some others of the Cabinet are on the verge of retirement, and a considerable reorganization seems to loom in the near future.

However, the Premier is a born fighter, and those who know him best declare that his "four years more" cry at the last election was simply political tactics for the occasion and that we shall surely hear the rally of "another four years more" at the next election "to finish my work."—Woodstock Express.

NEARLY DIED OF STONE IN THE BLADDER

GIN PILLS SAVED HIM

513 JAMES ST., HAMILTON, ONT.
"Five years ago, I was taken down with what the doctors called Inflammation of The Bladder—intense pains in back and loins, and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks, which became more frequent, amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor.

My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks, the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how now I am healthy and able to work, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me." JOHN HERMAN. 48

GIN PILLS are sold at 50c a box—6 for $2.50. Sent on receipt of price if your dealer does not handle them. Sample box free if you write us, mentioning this paper. Money back, if GIN PILLS do not give full satisfaction. National Drug and Chemical Co., Dept. B., Toronto.

AN HUNDRED THOUSAND DOLLAR ROOM

When J. Pierpont Morgan went to Cincinnati to attend the Episcopal convention he had by far the most valuable bed room in the Queen City. He slept in the special guest chamber at Dalvay, the home which the late Alexander McDowell built at a cost of $1,000,000, and which was thrown open to the greatest of American financiers by his adopted daughters, the Misses Stallo. The bedroom in which Mr. Morgan slept cost Mr. McDowell more than $100,000. It is as large as the ordinary flat and has genuine Louis XVI. furniture throughout. It is hung with rose pink damask tapestry, and is decorated, among other costly things, with three gold cabinets, each filled with antique jewellery and rare bric-a-brac.

Mr. Morgan detailed six chaffeurs to be ready with their cars, sent about two dozen servants, under the guidance of John Frasier, the headwaiter at Sherry's restaurant in New York City.—New York Sun.

Now honest, Mr. Morgan, did you sleep any better in this hundred thousand dollar room than the fellow who cleaned the pavement outside the door. Did that genuine Louis XVI. bed give you sweeter dreams than that of the fellow who mucks out the stable. Who in blazes are you any way, that you need two dozen servants and a cook from Sherry's, New York city, to travel with you. Have you got many stomachs like a camel? And hish, Morgan, you and your millions, send me fifty years more life C.O.D.

"I cannot do that. I can sleep in an $100,000 room with rose pink damask tapestry, but I'm just like the rest of you, only I'm troubled with indigestion, and insomnia."

Get a bucksaw Morgan, get a sawhorse, and a cord of wood.

HE IS JOKING

A young Charlottetown man has just received $18,000 in cash and a fine residence in Boston for being kind to a Boston doctor who suffered a paralytic stroke. The moral is plain; pick out your paralytic and then be nice. Only be sure to pick out a rich one.—Kingston Standard.

The editor of the Standard is joking. It comes back to a man no matter what kind of a fellow he is, he reaps kindness in the here and now. He doesn't need to go to heaven to get it. He receives it here. Does he put the sword of the tongue or the strength of the arm against the other fellow. He gets back the tongue, gets back the bump before he dies.

An hotel keeper, John Bunyan was his name, in the city of Guelph, refused a one time friend a drink. The old time friend was down and out and was suffering the hells of thirst.

"Get out" said Bunyan. The friend got out. He was a pension man.

Years after they met.

Things were reversed.

"Give me a drink," pleaded Bunyan.

"Get out," said the pensioner.

Bunyan got.

Wilcox says:

"You never can tell what your thoughts can do,
In bringing you hate or love,
For thoughts are things, and their
 airy wings,
Are as soft as the carrier dove.
They follow the law of the universe,
 Each makes according to his kind,
They speed o'er the track,
Bringing you back,
Whatever went out from your mind."

We must be friendly if we would have friends. If we are to be cordially hated, hate something, somebody.

SIDE LIGHTS

IT IS SO

"I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now."—St. John, xvi., 12.

Is it so, O Christ in heaven, that the souls we loved so well
Must remain in pain eternal, must abide in endless hell?
And our love avail them nothing
 even thine avail no more!
Is there nothing that can reach them nothing bridge the chasm o'er?
"I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now."

Is it so, O Christ in heaven, that the Anti-Christ must reign!
Still assuming shapes Protean, dying
 but to live again!
Waging war on God Almighty by destroying feeble man,
With the heathen for a rear-guard, and the learned for the van?—
"I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now."

Is it so, O Christ in heaven, that the highest suffer most!
That the strongest wander farthest and more hopelessly are lost!
That the mark of rank in nature is capacity for pain,
And the anguish of the singer makes the sweetness of the strain?—
"I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now."

Is it so, O Christ in heaven, that whichever way we go
Walls of darkness must surround us things we would but cannot know!
That the infinite must bound us, as a temple veil unrent
While the Finite ever wearies, so that none attain content?—
"I have many things to tell you, but ye cannot bear them now."

Is it so, O Christ in heaven, that the fullness yet to come
Is so glorious and so perfect that to know would strike us dumb?
That, if only for a moment, we could pierce beyond the sky
With these poor dim eyes of mortals
 we should just see God and die?
"I have many things to show you, but ye cannot bear them now."

A Gentleman From Mississippi

By THOMAS A. WISE

Novelised From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THOMAS A. WISE

"It's all so strange, so wonderful, I can hardly understand it," began Haines slowly as he held the girl's hands.

Unknown to both, the door leading from the hall had opened to admit Senator Langdon into the lower end of the room. Surprised at the sight of the couple, so seriously intent on each other, he made a sudden gesture of anger, then, apparently changing his mind, advanced toward them.

"I believe you want to see me, sir," he said to Haines. "I hope you'll be brief. I have very little time to spare from my guests."

Hope's bosom fluttered timorously at the interruption. The man nervously stepped forward.

"I shan't take much of your time, Senator Langdon," he said. "There has been a misunderstanding, a terrible mistake. I am sure I can convince you."

Senator Langdon hesitated doubtfully, half turned toward Carolina, Randolph and Norton, who had followed him, and again faced Haines.

Hope pressed her father's arm and looked up into his face entreatingly. Randolph, observing this, quickly stepped close to the senator's side, saying. "I can settle with this Mr. Haines for you."

Waving his son aside, the senator finally spoke.

"I reckon there's been too many attending to my business and settling my affairs, Randolph," he said. "I think for a change I'll settle a few of my own. All of you children go out and leave me here with Mr. Haines."

CHAPTER XIX.

SENATOR LANGDON LEARNS THE TRUTH.

WHEN they were alone Haines faced the senator and spoke determinedly.

"They told you I was not running straight," he said.

The senator nodded, and the lines about his mouth deepened.

"Yes."

Bud Haines stiffened at the word. Every muscle in his body seemed to become rigid as he mentally vowed that he would retaliate against his traducers if it cost him his life to do it. Hope had informed him only too accurately, he now realized. Little did the senator know that what he was now about to hear would give him one of the severest shocks of his life.

"They told me you weren't running straight," said Haines deliberately. "Now, neither one of us has been crooked, but somebody else has been, and this was the plan to keep us apart."

"Norton told me you were speculating in Altacoola lands," said Langdon.

"And Norton told me the same of you," retorted Bud.

The senator's face grew very serious.

"But my daughter, Miss Carolina Langdon, confirmed Norton's story."

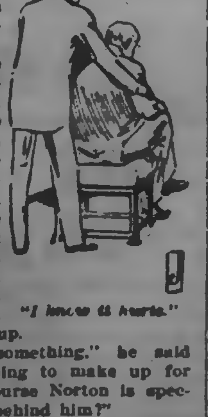
Haines here faced the most difficult part of his interview. He hardly knew how to answer. His manhood rebelled against placing any blame on a woman. He revolted at the thought of ruining a father's faith in his daughter's honesty, especially when that father was the man he most admired, a man for whom he had genuine, deep rooted affection. But it was necessary that the words be spoken.

"I hate to tell you, sir," he said in a low, uncertain voice, "that it was your daughter Carolina who made me believe this story told about you and vouched for by your son Randolph."

Langdon started back aghast. He stared at Haines and knew that he spoke the truth. Then his white head sank pathetically. Tears welled into the eyes of the planter, and this sturdy old fighting man dropped weakly into a chair, sobbing convulsively, broken in spirit and wearied in body.

At length Haines spoke to his stricken chief.

"I know it hurts," he said. "It hurt me to have to say it. Don't believe it until you get it out of Norton, but then you must do something."



"I know it hurts."

Langdon came to his feet, mopping his cheeks. But there was no weakness in him now. Yes, he would do something. He would go after the thieves that had turned his own flesh and blood against him and root them all out—show them all up.

"Oh, I'll do something," he said grimly. "I'm going to make up for lost time. Of course Norton is speculating. Who's behind him?"

"Stevens and Peabody, I'm positive," answered Haines, "and behind them is Standard Steel."

"What," exclaimed Langdon, "Stevens in a swindle like this! Are you sure? How do you know?"

"A Gulf City man who couldn't carry his liquor gave me some clews, and I worked Norton into telling some more," answered the secretary. "Where is Peabody?"

"He's here now."

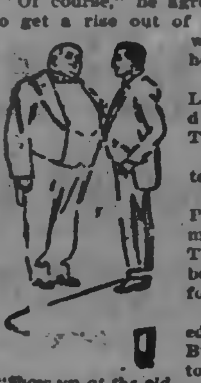
"Then he hasn't got my letter yet. I sent him a note and signed your name, senator, to the effect that the Gulf City claims have been brought before you so strongly that you might vote for Gulf City."

Langdon was amazed.

"You sent that note," he exclaimed, "when you know Altacoola is the only proper place and Gulf City is a mud bank?"

The newspaper man smiled.

"Of course," he agreed, "but I had to get a rise out of Peabody. This will show where he stands."



"Show up at the old desk."

"Oh," said Langdon, "I understand. Thanks, boy."

A servant entered with a note.

"For Senator Peabody, sir, marked 'Urgent.' The messenger's been hunting him for some hours."

Langdon looked shrewdly at Bud, then turned to the servant.

"You keep that note until I ring for you, then bring it to Senator Peabody. Understand? No matter how urgent it's marked."

The man bowed.

"Yes, sir."

"Now tell Mr. Norton, Miss Langdon and Mr. Randolph to come here."

The senator turned back to his secretary.

"I expect I'm going to be pretty busy the rest of the evening, Bud, so in case I forget to mention it again remember to show up at your old desk in the morning."

"I will. Thank you, sir."

"You sent for us, senator," said Norton, approaching with his two dupes.

"You are interested in Altacoola lands," the senator angrily charged.

"I am, sir," he said.

"And you told Mr. Haines that I was interested in Altacoola lands?"

The schemer hesitated, and the senator broke in on him in rage.

"Speak out, man! Tell the truth, if you can."

"I did," admitted the congressman finally.

"Was there any particular reason for your not telling the truth?" demanded the Mississippian in threatening tone.

"I told the truth," replied Norton. "You are interested in them."

For an instant Langdon seemed about to step toward him, then he controlled himself.

"I didn't know it," be said.

"You have several things to learn, senator," declared the congressman.

"I have things to learn and things to teach," he said. "But go on. Why am I interested?"

"You are interested, senator," replied the trickster, making his big play, "through your son Randolph, who invested $50,000 of your money in Altacoola, and also through your daughter, Miss Carolina, who, acting on my advice, has put her own money—$25,000—in Altacoola land also."

For a moment Langdon was speechless. It was too much at first for the honest old southerner to comprehend.

"You mean," he gasped at last, "that you induced a boy to put $50,000 in Altacoola land when you knew I had to vote on the bill? And you even let my daughter put her money in the same scheme?"

"Of course I did. It was a splendid chance, and I let your son in for friendship and your daughter because she has done me the honor to promise to become my wife."

"What! You have my daughter's promise to marry you, you"—

"She admits it herself."

"Then I reckon here's where I lose a prospective son-in-law," sneered Langdon. "But that's unimportant. Now, Norton, who's behind you?"

"I must decline to answer that."

Langdon looked at him sternly.

"Very well," he said. "You are too small to count. I'll find out for myself. Now you go to my study and wait there until I send for you. I must be alone with my children."

When Norton and Haines had left them, Langdon turned sadly to the two children who had disgraced him.

"Can you understand?" he said. "Do you know what you've done to me?"

"What, father? We've done nothing wrong?" protested Carolina.

"They told me it was perfectly legitimate," urged Randolph. "They said everybody—Peabody and Stevens and the rest—were in it, and Peabody is the boss of the senate."

"Yes, my boy," assented the old planter, "he's the leader in the senate, and that's the shameful part of all this—that a man of his high standing should set you so miserable an example."

Randolph Langdon was not a vicious lad, not a youth who preferred or chose wrongdoing for the increased rewards it offered. He was at heart a chivalrous, straightforward, trustful southern boy who believed in the splendid traditions of his family and loved his father as a son should a parent having the qualities of the old hero of Crawfordsville. Jealous of his honor, he had been a victim of Norton's wiles because of the congressman's position and persuasiveness, because this companion of his young days had won his confidence and had not hesitated to distort the lad's idea of what was right and what was wrong.

Randolph began an indignant protest against his father's reproof when the senator cut him short.

"Don't you see?" said the senator. "I can understand there being rascals in the outside world and that they should believe your careless, foolish old father lawful game, but that he should be thought a tool for dishonest thieving by members of his own family is incomprehensible.

"Randolph, my son, Carolina, my daughter, through all their generations the Langdons have been honorable. Your mother was a Randolph, and this from you! Oh, Carolina! And, you, Randolph! How could you? How could you betray, or seek to betray your father, who sees in you the image of your dear mother, who has gone?"

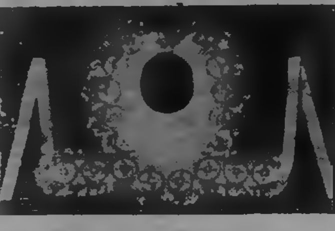
A Practical Bib.

What could be more sensible than the baby's bib illustrated? It is a wonder that it was not designed years ago, but "all things come to him who waits" is a trite but true saying, and now we have this smart bib.

Every mother will appreciate the practical value of a bib that has a waistband, as this one has, and strings that tie the bib securely in place so that there is no working around to the back of the neck, thereby spoiling the front of the frock.



THE MODISH BABY'S BIB.

As seen in the cut the bib is of handkerchief linen and is hand embroidered, but the same design could be carried out in a less expensive manner.

Butter Hints.

One bad butter cow will eat up the profit of several good ones.

Good butter must be properly presented to the market. It must not only be good, but look good.

High grade butter is the result of intelligence, poor butter the result of ignorance. The one is in demand everywhere; the other goes begging in the market.

Butter worth 40 cents per pound is made from the same milk that grease worth 20 cents a pound is made from, and it takes as much to make the one as the other.

Dairy cows must be treated in accordance with their importance as a factor of success, and the milk and cream must be handled properly from cow to churn and from churn to market.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY

An eminent scientist, the other day gave his opinion that the most wonderful discovery of recent years was the discovery of Zam-Buk. Just think! As soon as a single thin layer of Zam-Buk is applied to a wound the wound is protected from poison. Not one species of microbe out of the thousands known has been found that can live in Zam-Buk! Its immediate application to a wound renders blood-poisoning an impossibility.

Then again. As soon as Zam-Buk is applied to a sore, or a cut, or a scratch it stops the smarting. That is why children are such friends of Zam-Buk. They care nothing for the science of the thing. All they know is that Zam-Buk stops their pain. Mothers should note this.

Again. As soon as this wonderful preparation is applied to a wound or to a diseased part, the microscopic cells beneath the skin's surface are so stimulated that they undergo rapid changes; and new healthy tissue is formed. This forming of fresh healthy tissue from below is Zam-Buk's secret of healing. The tissue thus formed is worked up to the surface and literally casts off the diseased tissue above it. It is just as if a mason, called to repair a damaged wall, could begin to place good sound material at the foundation of the wall and then raise it up until the old damaged portion was no longer needed and was thrown completely away. This is why the cures worked by Zam-Buk are permanent. They are real "foundation" cures.

Only the other day Mr. Marsh, of 101 Delormier Ave., Montreal, called upon the Zam-Buk Company and told them that for over twenty-five years he had been a martyr to eczema. His hands were so covered with sores that he had to sleep in gloves for several years! Four years ago Zam-Buk was introduced to him and in a few months it cured him. To-day—over three years after his cure of a disease he had for twenty-five years—he is still cured, and has had no trace of any return of the eczema! Zam-Buk cures are permanent. Is it in your home?

TRAINING STATESMEN

OSCAR BROWNING WRITES REMINISCENCES OF 60 YEARS.

Man of Letters, Who Was a Master at Eton and Cambridge, Tells of Great Men During Their School Days—He Aimed to Be a Tutor to Statesmen and Met Many of Them—Often Visited Lord Tennyson.

It will probably come as a surprise to many people to learn that life at Eton in the 'fifties was characterized by scenes and manners which remind one of the misery undergone by the scholars at Dotheboys Hall at the instigation of Mr. Squeers, of "Nicholas Nickleby." Flogging, ragging, and bullying were the order of the day, while the boys were insufficiently fed and generally neglected. They had no food until more than two hours after they had risen in the morning, and for dinner an entire sheep was served, of which the seniors had the legs and shoulders, and the smaller boys had to find what they could on the carcass.

Such is the depressing picture of Eton given by Mr. Oscar Browning, who had sixty years of schoolmastering at Eton and Cambridge, in his "Memories of Sixty Years" (Lane). Mr. Browning did much to improve the general conditions for the scholar at Eton. But it is a curious fact that the poet Swinburne, who was in "O. B.'s" division as a boy, refused to meet the latter afterwards, because he said he was an Eton master who had the power to flog boys. This did not happen to be true, but it serves to illustrate the sensitiveness of the great poet in regard to cruelty.

Talking of Swinburne, Mr. Browning says, "He was very weak and frail, and certainly not bullied. He took no part in games, being, indeed, little fitted for them; but in those days games did not form so important a part of our school life as they do now. Swinburne was generally late for school, and I remember Cookesley calling out to him one day, 'Here you are, little Swinburne, late again.' I have been told that Cookesley once saluted his appearance with the exclamation, 'Here comes the rising sun,' alluding to his red hair."

Curiously enough, Mr. Browning himself was never considered to have much chance of long life. He was born prematurely apparently dead. "'That child is not dead,' said the nurse; and with a hearty blow she made me squeal," he says. "And to this treatment I owe the fact that I am able to write these memoirs at the age of seventy-two."

Mr. Browning refers to a visit which he paid to Mr. Balfour's seat at Whittingehame. "Arthur was then twenty-two years of age," he says, "and I remember him telling me, as we went by train to Edinburgh, that the doctors had assured him he could not possibly live to the age of thirty, a fact of which I have now and again reminded him during his career."

It was Mr. Browning's aim to be a sort of tutor to statesmen, and he came into contact with many men who have risen to eminence in the political world. He knew Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and recalls how he was the only man present at a microscope lecture who had the pluck to lance his arm that blood might be provided for an experiment.

With Tennyson "O.B." was on terms of intimacy, visiting him often at Farringford. "Tennyson's study was at the top of the house, and I have often sat with him there, tins of tobacco lying about the floor. He always smoked a long churchwarden pipe, which, if I remember rightly, he never used more than once."

Mr. Browning pays a charming tribute to Mrs. Tennyson, who watched over her husband with such unceasing care. Here is his picture of his first meeting with her.

"At the end of a table stood a lady, the most beautiful, I thought, I had ever seen. I looked at her as the little peasant children look at the vision of the Virgin. I felt inclined to run away, as if I was not worthy to be introduced to anyone so faultlessly pure. But her countenance bore evident traces of physical suffering."

Mr. Browning was on intimate terms with his namesake, Robert Browning, and in connection with this friendship he tells an amusing story. On one or two occasions Mr. Browning has tried to get into Parliament, and once stood against his old pupil, Mr. Austen Chamberlain, for East Worcestershire. When, at the second attempt, he stood for a South London constituency, he was unconsciously opposed by another of the same name.

"I was described in my posters as Oscar Browning, M.A.," he says, "and two electors were overheard discussing what this meant. One said, 'Who is this Browning, M.A.?' The other replied, 'As far as I can make out, he is a kind of curate.' When I was driving through the street in a wagonette, two portly gentlemen, with umbrellas and bags in their hands—evidently middle-aged city clerks—turned round towards me, hissed violently, and sibilated the word 'Poet!' thinking, I suppose, that I was Robert."

Golf and mountaineering form the two favorite pastimes of Mr. Browning and in connection with these he tells a couple of amusing tales. On one occasion he had to remonstrate with the keeper of an obscure Italian inn on the length of a bill, and assured him that no one would come to his hotel if he charged like that. The innkeeper replied that after carefully considering the matter in all its bearings he had decided that no one would come in any case, and therefore he had better charge when he had the chance.

Like a good many other things at Cambridge, the golf club was founded by Mr. Browning, and on one occasion he went the round with a Scotch professional. At the end of it the needlessly frank Caledonian remarked, "Well, yer verra bad, and ye'll never be any better."

His Business Qualities.

"What sort of a man is he?"
"A good debtor and a bad creditor."

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

It appears that petty thieving is a popular fad with some people. Mr. Routley, the Charlotte street shoe dealer, had a suit of overalls taken from the front of his store and also several smaller articles. In the latter case it was a woman who did the light-fingered trick.

GORHAM ARRAINGED ON THE CHARGE OF MURDER

(P. C. MEHARRY TESTIFIES)

At the opening of the High Court this morning at 9.30 o'clock Chancellor Boyd dismissed the jury of the Foley vs Wm. West sr., and Wm. West jr. with the explanation that the murder charge against James Gorham would be proceeded with.

Mr. E. B. Meredith, K.C., informed his Lordship that on account of certain developments the Crown would not proceed at this court with the Deline case.

The jury, which will act in the charge against Gorham is composed of Bolton Cunningham, Wm. Christie, James Miller, Alex. Laing, Alex. Wood, Edward Kempt, Arch. Wilson, Wm. Clunkott, Francis Darling, Edward Mahood, jr., Wm. Deck and J. Hunter, jr.

James Gorham entered the court in company with Turnkey Rae, and took the prisoner's box.

He was clad in a black suit and looked the picture of health.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, on behalf of the prisoner, pleaded not guilty to the charge read by the clerk.

J. W. Fitzgerald was the first witness called by the Crown. He was examined as to a plan of the locality where the shooting took place.

P.C. MEHARRY'S STORY.

To Mr. Meredith witness said he had been an officer about four and a half years. On the night of the 20th of May he received two messages from the Gorham house and he responded.

He met Capt. White on the C.P.R. bridge and also prisoner's brother, Michael. He saw the prisoner first at the front of the house, and when he arrived prisoner's sister said her brother was around at the back of the house. When he (witness) went to the rear Gorham was standing in Peck's field, by an apple tree. He held a revolver and discharged one shot into the ground.

Witness said he endeavored to reason with Gorham, who first said "Come over and I'll knock your damn brains out."

Gorham fired a second shot, this time in the air, after he (witness) had jumped over the fence. Gorham said "You're not going to get me tonight," and later "Come half way and I'll meet you."

Then he pulled his gun and counted one, two, three and fired. The pistol was pointed towards witness, who was about twenty yards distant from Gorham, and forty yards from the kitchen.

Meharry heard the whistle of a bullet pass his head and somebody yelled "Oh, mother is shot."

Meharry said "Jimmie, you've shot your mother." and the reply was that "he didn't give a damn who was shot."

There were just the three shots fired.

The door of the kitchen was fully opened. The steps would be about three and a half feet in length. Gorham told the officer to get over on to the track, and when he did this Gorham followed him for some distance and then returned and went into the house.

Later, with P.C.'s Newhall, Adams and McGinty, witness returned to the house. Gorham left on noticing the officers approaching and took up a position on the bridge.

There witness heard three shots from the direction of the bridge. P.C. Newhall got close to Gorham, who made the statement that it was Meharry he wanted to shoot.

Gorham remained on the bridge from about seven o'clock till one or two on the following morning.

Witness had seen the revolver taken later from the prisoner.

During the cross-examination of the witness by Mr. O'Connell the 32 calibre revolver and a 22 calibre rifle, taken from the prisoner, were brought into court by Chief Thompson.

CAPT. WHITE

Witness said about 6.10 in the evening, when he was about 300 feet from the Gorham house, one of the family came running down and he went to the house, where he noticed boots, clothing and other articles were being thrown down the stairs. Prisoner appeared and said "What are you doing here?" He had a revolver in his hand and, pointing at witness, said "I'll blow your damn brains out."

The table had been set, and Gorham walked over and blew a cup to pieces with a shot at the same, and making a profane remark. As near as he (witness) could understand, Gorham was "sore" on his mother for having had him appear in court, or something like that.

He called his mother abusive names and pointed the pistol right up to the mother. His finger was on the trigger all the time.

Capt. White, the prisoner and members of the family were then standing outside. Gorham fired one shot into the door. Later prisoner followed witness to the track and told of how the trouble started. He said he had been sawing wood and on arriving home had had a little row with his mother.

She had hit him with a stick on the arm. He talked quite sensibly.

During the conversation the prisoner held the revolver close to the witness and suddenly opened it. There were no bullets in it, and he returned to the house, presumably to get more ammunition.

Witness telephoned for the police, but could not get a reply.

Prisoner had said no policeman would take him.

On the arrival of P.C. Meharry and his approach to the prisoner Capt. White said he heard one shot, but from his position could not see the officer. He could hear Gorham say "Come on, Jack," and "Come another step and I'll blow your brains out."

Witness heard the scream and learned that the mother had been shot. He then went home to his supper.

Later in the evening he saw prisoner on the bridge and heard him say that he would shoot Meharry.

To Mr. O'Connell witness said that his acquaintance with prisoner and family before shooting was very limited.

During the conversation in the back he had endeavored to pacify Gorham but without avail. The presence of the women seemed to excite him.

To Mr. Meredith witness said that he wouldn't consider that Gorham was drunk.

DR. McNULTY.

Examined by Crown Attorney R. E. Wood. Witness told of his being called to the Gorham home. The mother was lying on the floor, and he had her removed to a sofa in the dining room, and telephoned for ambulance. An examination showed a wound on the right breast. On the arrival of the ambulance she was removed to St. Joseph's hospital. The wound was not more than one-half inch. The patient was then conscious, but died that night. Assisted by Dr. Young witness performed the post-mortem examination, and prepared the report, the substance of which was that the direct cause of death was an internal hemmorhage caused by a wound in the liver. The bullet was not found.

Percy Nell said that when he went to the house Gorham was trying to catch some pigs. When P.C. Meharry arrived Gorham had gone to field with the remark: "If Meharry asks for me tell him I'm over the fence."

Witness then told of what happened between the officer and Gorham.

Witness was examined at some length in regard to his having visited the scene of the shooting with the crown officers.

Had any threats been made to you? asked Mr. O'Connell.

Witness replied, No.

PRISONER'S BROTHER.

Patrick Gorham, brother of the prisoner said that he conversed with his brother shortly after twelve o'clock the night of the shooting and also obtained the revolver. He didn't see whether or not it was loaded. Later at the house he handed the gun and bullets to P.C. Adams.

The rifle was also in possession of his brother at the bridge, from which place P.C. Newhall secured it. There were no bullets in the house that day which would fit the rifle. The bullets were always kept in a drawer.

TO. Mr. O'CONNELL.

Has your brother always lived at home?

Yes.

Did he go to school?

Yes.

Has he any occupation?

Not particular.

What does he do?

Anything at all. He has not trade.

How did he act about the house?

All right, only he would drink; then he would get foolish and froth at the mouth.

Sometimes it seemed as if something was bothering him. He would come down stairs in the morning and not be in the best of humor.

He complained at times of a pain in the side and he would get angry. This had been noticeable the last year and a half.

Did he associate with the members of the family?

No, not often.

He would not eat his meals oftentimes with the other members of the family.

He had refused to do this.

Did he drink any?

Yes.

Did you see him that day?

Yes, at 5.30 about 80 yards west of the house.

What was he doing?

He was sitting on a log. Other men were there. They had a bag.

His voice was thick as if he was drunk.

Where did you find your brother when you returned about eleven o'clock?

On the C.P.R. bridge.

At this point court adjourned to 2 o'clock.

THEATRICAL

"The Alaskan"

Quite the best musical offering of the season was "The Alaskan" which appeared at the Grand last night.

The story is original and consistent, the music is bright and tuneful, a couple of the numbers being particularly tuneful. The situations afford considerable opportunity for finished acting and in spite of the fact that The Alaskan is a musical show the principals and chorus can actually sing and sing well too. Al Raub, as Richard Atwater, the prospector, and Detmar Poppen, Totem Pole Pete, have particularly good voices and presented all their numbers with excellent effect.

"The Moth and The Bumble Bee," "The Totem Pole," "Snowfalling," "Hi, Hi, Hi," and "The Face of The Girl I Love," were the most prominent musical numbers of the evening and were encored persistently.

The biggest corner in the comedy was controlled by Leo. Kendale, as Professor Kuficklebein, and Richard F. Carroll, as Walsingham Watt. Nellie Templeton was a captivating La, La, Lu. The others of the cast were well up to the standard in singing and acting.

NOTICE—Seats ordered by phone for "The Midnight Sons" will be held until 7:30 p.m. only, Thursday.

BOBBY ROBINSON WAS IN WRONG AT OTTAWA

Rugby Club Was Sore and Attempted to Bar Him From Press Stand

Ottawa Citizen.

Because of an article that was published in the Hamilton Spectator a week ago, alleging that the Ottawa Football Club had transgressed the amateur laws in bringing out a couple of the local football stars, the Ottawa Football Club attempted to bar the representative of that sheet from the Press Stand on Saturday.

A meeting of the executive of the club, called Friday night, expressed the indignation of the Ottawa Club at such a statement, and a resolution was passed to the effect that the Hamilton Spectator, be in future, refused all courtesies by the Ottawa Football Club.

The club refused to issue a badge to the sporting editor of the Ambitious City sheet, Mr. Bobby Robinson, and the executive also issued instructions to cancel all the press badges issued by the Interprovincial Football Union, which are recognized in every city.

Mr. Robinson, when he heard of the action that had been taken against his paper, tried to argue the matter out with a member of the Ottawa Club, but this proving unavailing, appealed to President Tom Clancy, the head of the Big Four Union, for recognition of his badge.

Mr. Clancy immediately saw that Mr. Robinson secured accommodation in the press box, and that he was extended the full privileges of the Interprovincial Badge.

CURLERS ORGANIZE

An enthusiastic meeting of the Curling Club was held in the Dominion Bank chambers last night, at which many members were present.

The enthusiasm that was manifested and the harmonious feeling that prevailed augured well for a successful and energetic season.

This season the games for the District Cup will be played in Lindsay, and the games for the Ontario Tankard will be played in Peterborough.

Mr. T. F. Matthews is the judge for the Tankard competition and Mr. J. D. Flavelle for the District Cup. One game will be played in the third and fourth weeks of January next.

The skips of last season were re-elected with power to add to their number if necessary.

Mr. W. G. Ferguson, the retiring president, has been a most energetic and painstaking officer, and in his successor, Mr. Waddell, the club is fortunate in possessing a gentleman who has always been a hard working and self-sacrificing member in all matters connected with curling, and who will undoubtedly prove as efficient in his position as any of his predecessors in office. The club is also fortunate in retaining as secretary-treasurer the services of Mr. J. H. Ferguson, than whom no body of men could wish a more conscientious and hard working officer.

FIFTY DEATHS IN THE BASEBALL GAME THIS YEAR

The baseball fatalities for 1910 break all records. The total is 50, or eight more than the previous record, which was made in 1908, and 18 more than last year. As has been the case every year, the great majority of those who were killed met death in amateur games. Many of the players were under 12 years of age. There were many deaths due to heart failure, caused by excitement at games. All these accidents are not directly due to the game, which must not be blamed as a dangerous sport on account of the fatalities which happen in the back lots. Very rare it is, indeed, that an accident happens which caused a death in a big league game, either to a player or spectator. In 1905, there were 11 fatalities; 1906, 19; 1907, 13; 1908, 42 and 1909, 32.

The biggest killing this year happened at Brooks, Ga., on Aug. 28. A game was being played between two negro clubs for the championship of Fayette county, and a riot was started when the umpire called one of the Brooks players safe at the home plate in the ninth inning. Pistols, razors, bats and knives were brought into play and three players were killed.

Statistics prove indisputably that the increased use of such a pure and wholesome beverage as Regal Lager ensures a decrease in any community's record of intemperance. That alone suggests the truth that Regal is NOT an intoxicant.

CYCLONE FORMATION.

The Mechanical Laws Are the Same as in a Whirlpool.

Any one can make the exact counterpart of a cyclone if he so desires. Of course a cyclone is caused by the air over a big area getting warm and light with small pressure. This air consequently tries to rise almost in a body and leaves a partial vacuum behind, but the outside cold air rushes in from all sides. Now, it is a scientific and mechanical truth that when a fluid runs in from all sides toward a central point it causes a whirlpool or rotation of the fluid. The exact analogy of a cyclone, then, although with the fluid water instead of air, is seen when the stopper is pulled out of the bottom of a basin full of water. An almost perfect vacuum, as far as the water is concerned, is caused by the water immediately over the stopper running out. The rest of the water rushes in from all directions, and a whirlpool is the result. There is one difference here from the air cyclone. In the air the force with which it rushes toward the center greatly compresses the air whirling at that point and makes it very dense—so dense, in fact, that a straw carried in the central whirl can be driven into a big block of wood without bending. Of course in a whirlpool the water is not compressed, remaining practically the same in density all the time. That is one highly important property of water; it is practically incompressible. Nevertheless it is very interesting to see the whirl form in a basin and know that the mechanical laws are the same as in the formation of a cyclone many miles wide.—Harper's Weekly.

A Shrewd Duchess.

Like many other great ladies the Duchess of Abercorn is an expert business woman. Near Baronscourt, her home in Ireland, she has a very successful creamery, and a great deal of the dairy produce sold by leading shops in Belfast and supplied to some of the steamers which sail from that port, comes from it. The duchess is the aunt of Lord Howe, and Sir Assheton Curzon-Howe, the distinguished admiral, is her only brother.

A Hot Shave.

It was stated at Astor recently that Edward Carter, a tramp, who was sentenced to a month's hard labor for begging, took matches out of his pocket, whilst he was on his way to the police station, and set fire to his beard, saying he would have a clean shave before being locked up.

NEW JERSEY TEA.

Red Root, That Did Good Service In Revolutionary Days.

You housekeepers of today whose favorite brands of Orange Pekoe, English Breakfast, India and Ceylon, etc., diffuse their fragrance over your tea table would hardly suppose that tea, or, rather, a fairly good substitute for it, was once made from the leaves of one of our prettiest New Jersey wild flowers. Yet so it was in the old turbulent days of the American Revolution, when they had so much trouble over the imported article and used various beverages as substitutes for that to which they had become accustomed.

New Jersey tea, or red root, as it is also called, is a low growing shrub with many branches, seldom over three feet high, and is found from Canada to Florida, growing usually in dry wooded sections. It is very abundant in New Jersey, for which it is named. It blooms profusely in July and is so showy, with its many panicled white blossoms, as to be quite worth a place in the gardens as an ornamental shrub. It has a dark red root, with leaves downy beneath and very much veined, by which it is easily distinguished from the pure tea. An infusion of the leaves prepared in the same manner as the genuine article has somewhat the taste of ordinary grades of the tea of the orient, but is not supposed to possess any of its stimulating properties.—Exchange.

Bulwer Lytton and His Chorus.

The Princess von Racowitza met Bulwer Lytton in the Riviera toward the end of the fifties. He was then, she says in her autobiography, "past his first youth; his fame was at its zenith. He seemed to me antediluvian, with his long dyed curls and his old fashioned dress. He dressed exactly in the fashion of the twenties, with long coats reaching to the ankles, knee breeches and long colored waistcoats. Also he appeared always with a young lady who adored him and who was followed by a manservant carrying a harp. She sat at his feet and appeared, as he did, in the costume of 1830, with long flowing curls, called Anglaises. He read aloud from his own works, and in especially poetic passages his 'Alice' accompanied him with arpeggios on the harp."

A Tree Climbing Dog.

A government official in Bavaria connected with the forestry department has a wonderful dog, which is as clever at climbing trees as a cat. If his master fastens a handkerchief up in the treetops the animal will clamber up after it in the nimblest way and never fails to bring it down. He was taught by his mother, who was famous as a tree climber. The clever animal has won several medals by his extraordinary talent and takes particular delight in climbing silver birches, not the easiest tree in the world to scale, for the trunk is particularly smooth and slippery.—Wide World Magazine.

Kindness to Animals.

"What I believe in," said Mr. Erastus Pinkly, "is kindness to dumb animals."

"Yes," replied Miss Miami Brown. "I has hyuhed dat some folks kin lif' a chicken off de roos' so gentle an' tender dat he won't have his sleep disturbed ska'sely none."—Washington Star.

THE CAR TO BUY

The Car Noted for its Great Power, Flexibility, Quietness and Endurance
Russell-Knight 1911 Models: 22, 26 and 38 H.P.
CRITICS CONFOUNDED
Interested critics said a year ago: "Do not buy a Knight motor, it is an experiment—in a year or two it may be all right."
Partly this is true—the Knight engine will be improved. Quite frankly we venture to hope that each Knight engine and each Russell car we make will be better than the one before. We believe that our 1914 cars will be better than those of to-day.
But this is the fact that must be borne in mind :—
The Knight engine built in its first year, by the first firm building it in a commercial way, under official observation, put up a performance which no valve motor made by any firm after years of experience has been able to equal.
Is not this conclusive proof of Knight superiority?
Then consider that since that time the engineering skill of five of the leading engineering firms of the world have worked for the improvement of the motor, and have been aided by the experience of over 2,000 users.
To-day the Knight motor stands on its record in all quarters of the globe as a tested, tried-out product of superlative excellence.
In the 1911 Russell "38" you get the culmination of this work in engine design.

HECLA FURNACE

—And The Little Things That Mean So Much to You

We are not going to talk about the big features of the "Hecla"—the FUSED JOINTS, that keep the house free of gas and smoke—or the STEEL RIBBED FIREPOT, that saves one ton of coal in seven.

The talk is of little things that our 30 years experience has perfected.

A LARGE DOOR, big enough to take the biggest shovel of coal or chunk of wood.

A DUST FLUE, that actually carries off all dust so that you don't look as if you had fallen in the flour barrel after you shake the furnace.

A DAMPER REGULATOR, by which you can regulate the drafts and checks without going into the cellar.

A FURNACE DOOR that really locks, and locks airtight. INDIVIDUAL GRATE BARS that enable you to clean your fire without getting down on your knees with a poker.

There are many other big and little things about the "Hecla" that should be familiar to every man who is going to put in a new furnace this year.

They are all illustrated and described in our new furnace book, "Hecla Heated Homes."

Field Crop for Canada

Report for the month ended September 30, 1910.

The reports on the condition of crops in Canada at the end of September show lower averages of condition for the whole of Canada than those of a year ago, but the reduction applies chiefly to the Northwest provinces. In the eastern provinces a high p[illegible] is maintained for nearly all the crops, and quantity and quality are nearly as good as a year ago and better than two years ago. In Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta there is a drop of about twenty per cent. in the quality of grains and roots, but the threshings indicate that the yield will be larger for wheat, oats and barley than was promised at the end of August. For the whole of Canada the condition of rye at the end of September was 85.59, which is ten per cent. better than two years ago, and 2.39 better than last year. Peas and beans are nearly eight per cent. lower in condition than a year ago, but nearly ten per cent. higher than in 1908. Buckwheat is about the same as last year, and 12 per cent. better than in 1908, whilst mixed grains are better by five per cent. than last year and by 23.47 per cent. better than two years ago. Corn for husking compared for the three years 1910, 1909 and 1908 shows percentages of 86.12, 86.77 and 82, and corn for fodder of 89.82, 87.18 and 92 for the respective years. The condition of potatoes is 76.06 at the end of September, compared with 90.37 last year, of turnips 82.09 to 83.34 and of sugar beets 83.13 to 71.02, whilst in 1908 their condition ranged from 68 to 74. Alfalfa has a condition of 83.30 for the end of September, and it exceeds 90 in the Maritime provinces of Ontario. In Quebec and the Northwest provinces it is not more than 70 per cent., and in British Columbia it is 89.33 per cent. All field grains in the province last named exceed 82 per cent. in quality.

The estimated yield of rye this year for Canada is 1,634,100 bushels, of peas 6,444,500 bushels, of beans 1,060,600 bushels, of buckwheat 7,302,000 bushels, of mixed grains 20,103,000 bushels, of flax 4,314,000 bushels and of corn for husking 17,682,000 bushels. The average bushels per acre of these crops is 19.43 for rye, 16.69 for peas, 20.54 for beans, 26.98 for buckwheat, 34.91 for mixed grains, 9.04 for flax and 53.82 for corn. Better averages for wheat, oats and barley are assured when the final returns are made in December than the reports for the end of August gave.

THIS TYPESETTER IS A WONDER

New York, Oct. 15.—There is now being exhibited in New York a new multitype typesetting machine that has aroused comment of printers throughout the country. It is a typesetting and typecasting machine which casts and sets any style of type from 5 to 42 point, delivering the matter direct into the galley, and attains speed never before equaled.

The machine is so ingenious in its work and construction that it appears to do its work guided by its own thinking powers. According to the experts in the printing trade, this new Multitype is bound to revolutionize the work of type-setting, not only in the great newspaper plants, but also in the printing of books and magazines and in job printing offices. It is as far ahead of the present-day linotype machine as is the electric locomotive ahead of the old wood-burning engine.

The distinctive feature of this casting and composing machine is that it can produce display type in the order of composition, changing matrices without stopping the machine, and it delivers composed lines direct into the galley in any length from 1 to 30 inches and in type ranging from 5 to 42 point.

The matter is corrected from a galley in the same manner and as easily as type-foundry type is corrected, and the printer is saved the cost and time of distributing the type into cases. The cost of leads and leading by hand is entirely eliminated, as the Multitype leads automatically.

A machine now on the market and sold for about $2,000 and used in large plants casts all thicknesses of leads in place of the brasses generally used by printers. The same work is done up quicker by a small device placed on the Multitype—costing possibly $15—and the leads are cast in any thickness or length. This makes the Multitype the ideal machine for newspaper work and magazines. In fine book work air holes in the type are the bane of the printer. By a simple process the Multitype avoids this annoyance and produces a perfect type. It will cast and set about 6,000 ems an hour under ordinary operation, but that record can be far exceeded by expert operators.

This machine will cast and perfectly justify into lines of any width up to 30 inches, something no machine has ever been able to do. To change from one style of type to another it is merely necessary to press a key and the change is made in a second. There is no shifting of expensive magazines, with the attendant delay. The machine is operated from a keyboard, the same as a linotype machine, but no spacing register before the operator is used.

With newspaper stories in the rush of going to press and the other crushes that are unavoidable in newspaper offices, the Multitype has the advantage of being a great time saver. It will set the body of the story and the headlines at the same time, something that will be most appreciated in the newspaper offices of the country.

Mr. Allen A. Canton, who is the inventor of the Multitype, has perfected many devices in the mechanical and electrical field.

Mr Canton has placed many labor-saving devices on his Multitype machine that will be greatly appreciated by the operators of those machines. By the depression of a single key, for instance, any commonly used word or combination of letters is cast. It sets type around cuts automatically and an automatic indicating register indicates the character or words cast the same as on the visible typewriter. A centering device automatically inserts any line or fraction of a line into the centre of a galley and casts a space equal length on either side of the line.

The construction of the machine is simplicity itself, and anyone who can operate a keyboard can run the Multitype. A great item for the small printer is the fact that these machines are not expensive and the cost of maintenance is low. It is also a fact that a linotype machinist is not needed to keep them in running order, so the printer in the small town far away from the larger city can use them with perfect peace of mind and not be always in fear of the big bill for repairs.

HERE'S FROM HAVELOCK

New Freight Shed—Anniversary Sunday School Association—Witnesses in Trial—Personals

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Oct. 25.—Plans have been passed by the C.P.R. and material has been ordered for the erection of a new freight shed at this point. The building which will be 40 x 30 feet, will fill a long felt want in Havelock, as the present freight shed has not been large enough to handle the large amount of freight received at this station for several years past.

The new building will be placed about 100 yards west of the present station, and will be connected with it by a long platform. The freight offices will be transferred to the new building, and alterations will be made in the present station and freight sheds.

A RESTAURANT.

The eastern part of the station will be made into a first-class restaurant, where the patrons of the C.P.R. will have the best service obtainable. A portion of the station will be made into a superintendent's office, the baggage room will be enlarged, the checker's office altered and several other changes made.

It is believed by the railroad men here that the C.P.R. are on the eve of making great extensions in Havelock, and that the erection of the new freight shed is only a beginning to the monstrous extensions that will be made in the yards and equipment for the new grain route from Victoria Harbor.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

Rev. G. McCall, of Napanee, presided at both services in the Methodist church on Sunday last, the occasion being the annual anniversary services of the church. There were large attendances at both morning and evening services, and the choir was heard in special music. In the morning two anthems were given. "O For a Thousand Tongues to Sing," and "Come Unto Me." In the evening three anthems were given, 'The Radiant Morn,' 'Sun of My Soul,' and 'Hark! Hark! My Soul.' A ladies' quartette, composed of Mesdames Swain, Real, Kindred and Vansickle; quartette composed of Messrs. Swain, McBurney, Williams and Primeau, and a mixed quartette composed of Mesdames Kindred and Swain and Messrs. Kindred and Swain were heard to good advantage during the services.

SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

At the afternoon session an address of welcome was read by Reeve Jas. Knox, followed by an address on Sunday school work by Rev. Mr. Glassford, secretary of Ontario S.S. Association. Mrs. Real and Mr. A. C. Denike discussed the problem of "How to retain our boys and girls in our Sunday School." The session was closed by an instructive address by Mr. C. Ward Butcher on "The Art of Astronomy."

At the evening session Mr. C. H. Brewster spoke on "The Sunday School Superintendent," and Rev. Jas. Skene in "Missionary Spirit in the Sunday School." Rev. Mr. Glassford also addressed the evening meeting.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS AS A NATIONAL PROBLEM

Mr. C. C. James Deputy Minister of Agriculture at Banquet of Brotherhood St. Paul's Church—An Enjoyable Evening

The right hand of good fellowship was extended by the Brotherhood of St. Paul's Church last evening, when nearly two hundred men gathered in the Guild room of the Church, to enjoy the splendid programme which had been prepared for the occasion.

The affair was a success in every way. It was the second meeting of the Brotherhood's recent organization.

Strangers were made to feel at home. It wasn't a treat for the men of St. Paul's. Outsiders were invited, they came and had a most enjoyable time.

Of course the ladies had to have a hand in the proceedings and they looked after the tables in a most approved style. The many good things were attacked with a vim that was highly creditable to the ladies, and incidentally in a more or less degree to the lords of creation.

The event of the evening was an address by Mr. C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, on the subject of "The Relation of the City Life to the Agricultural interests.

It was shortly after eight o'clock, that the president of the Brotherhood M. A.; P. McLean, and who acted as chairman, called the meeting to order and expressed his gratefulness at the large attendance present. He hoped that those present, outside of St. Paul's would feel at home.

Mr. J. H. Garbutt, president of the East Peterborough Farmers' Institute, in proposing the toast to the guest of the evening, made a few remarks on our Agricultural interests. He said that farmers had been sometimes charged with not appreciating their work, but this idea was overshadowed by present conditions. The farmers were taking a great interest in their farms. They attended the meetings of the Institute, and excursions for the purpose of gaining information of value to them.

Many years ago, Mr. James was a professor at the Agricultural College and had resigned to take up his present office. Great strides had been made and it was principally due to Mr. James.

The toast was honored and a quartette, Messrs Mein, Crane, Gillespie Nelson, gave "Scots Wa Hae" in good voice.

Mr. James was cordially received. He paid a compliment to the hosts of the evening, by remarking that while his subject suggested one point the high cost of living, this question had been solved, when such a spread as had been prepared could be given for twenty-five cents.

What is the question that is absorbing the people of to-day he asked. The replies forthcoming, were apt to lead to confusion and the longer we listen, the greater is the confusion.

But the agriculture of Ontario. What does that mean to us? The speaker directed his remarks to the soil of Ontario. You will find farmers who have been induced to underdrain their farms and there you find the enthusiastic man, he said. Farmers are finding out that money expended in underdrainage brings big returns. If we could underdrain all the land necessary, we would double the approximate value of our produce of $200,000,000.

Is that something worth working for? Would it pay us to make that a matter of national concern. Would it make any difference to the city and its citizens? At the present rate of doing this work, it will take one hundred years.

THE PRODUCTS.

Is there anything of interest to us in the products of Ontario—the improvement of seed. It may be that we lack stimulation and are inclined to trust to providence. Are we growing the best quality and of maximum quantity? We think if we are growing from 25 to 30 bushels of grain to the acre, we are doing well. So far as Ontario is concerned, although occupying a high place with other countries, we are away below the maximum.

Now, would it be better for us to increase our output by the growing of green roots of a higher grade and larger quantity. Is it worth while for us to take up these questions from a national standpoint?

The speaker then went on to deal with the question of cattle raising, fruit growing, etc, and dealt with them in the same manner.

He then directed his remarks on Denmark where these question had been taken up and acted upon. At one time they were producing rye and hogs. Following study and instruction Denmark now produces butter, bacon and eggs, and are now importing grain instead of exporting it. The farmers are law abiding and intelligent. There is not poverty, neither are there any slums in Denmark. The wealth is equally distributed.

The trouble in our province is that we have left it largely to chance.

While the country was taking up various questions, it was necessary that the agricultural interests should be developed. We would be failing sadly in our duty if in giving attention to national problems, we fail to look after the agricultural interests.

With this development we would become more prosperous, the city and its citizens would be benefitted and the people would become more loyal.

Other toasts were carried out and the meeting came to a close with the singing of the National Anthem.

HANBIDGE—GILLESPIE.

A pretty wedding was solemnized at the residence of Mr. T. G. Gillespie, at 110 Lock street, about two o'clock this afternoon, when his daughter, Edith Whyte Gillespie, joined in holy wedlock to Mr. Robert Clayton Hanbidge, of Otonabee. Rev. W. C. Reddiford officiated. The young couple were unattended. The house was prettily decorated with evergreens and autumn leaves, and the ceremony was performed under an arch of the same. The bride was given away by her father, and was prettily attired in a travelling suit of blue cheviot.

Miss Nellie Pilling sang "O Perfect Love," and Miss Hazel Gillespie played Mendelssohn's wedding march.

After the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Hanbidge left on a wedding trip to Toronto and Buffalo on the C.P.R.

CHRONIC CATARRH RELIEVED BY PE-RU-NA.

MRS. F. CARR.

MRS. F. CARR, Vineland, Ont., Can., writes:

"For several years I was afflicted with catarrh, which made life a burden. The coughing and hacking which accompanied the disease was terrible.

"The complaint finally extended to the stomach and I was in a wretched condition.

"I tried different remedies and the best professional treatment all in vain.

"Finally, as a last resort, I tried Peruna upon the recommendation of my sister in Hamilton.

"I could see steady improvement and after using four bottles of that precious medicine I was feeling well again, my old trouble being completely a thing of the past.

"To-day I would not take one thousand dollars for what this grand medicine has done for me."

Peruna is a universally recognized catarrh remedy. It will relieve catarrh in its most obstinate form.

POPULAR QUOTATIONS.

The Same Ideas Differently Expressed by Various Writers.

It has been said that there were originally only three jokes in the world — some say seven — and from these has sprung modern humor, so people long ago learned to expect nothing new under the sun and to agree with Pliny the elder, who before he perished in the eVsuvius eruption of A. D. 79 remarked:

"In comparing various authors with one another I have discovered that some of the gravest and latest writers have transcribed word for word from former works without making acknowledgments."

Some of these transcriptions make interesting comparisons.

Longfellow wrote, "Art is long, and time is fleeting." Goethe put the sentiment into German thus:

Ach, Gott, die Kunst ist lang,
Und kurz ist unser Leben!

Which Bayard Taylor translated almost literally:

Ah, God, but art is long,
And life, alas, is fleeting!

Chaucer had said, "The lyfe so short, the craft so long to lerne," but Hippocrates long before him had uttered the same thought.

Pope said:

Know thyself; presume not God to scan.
The proper study of mankind is man.

But Chaucer had said, "Full wise is he that can hiselven knowe." Cervantes put it, "Make it thy business to know thyself, which is the most difficult thing in the world." Diogenes Laertius said that Tales was the originator of the saying. Plutarch gives it to Plato, and it is found also in slightly variant form on the tongue of Pythagoras, Chilo, Cleobolus, Bias Socrates., Juvenal took its origin from the human realm when he says it descended from heaven.

Carlyle wrote of "one life—a little gleam of time between two eternities." Marcus Aurelius had written, "Deem not life a thing of consequence, for look at the yawning void of the future and at that other limitless space, the past." The old Saxon Bede likened man in his earthly life to a sparrow flying out of the dark night into the lighted banquet hall for a moment only and then out again into the bleak and unknown night.

"To err is human, to forgive divine," wrote Pope. Plutarch had put it, "For to err in opinion, though it be not the part of wise men, is at least human."

Tertullian in the second century wrote that "he who flees will fight again." Goldsmith puts it:

For he who fights and runs away
May live to fight another day.

Pipe Smoking.

It seems very probable that there were smokers in England long before the introduction of tobacco, according to The London Chronicle. Pipes have been discovered inbedded in the mortar of churches built before Europe's first acquaintance with tobacco, and it seems only reasonable to suppose that the people of that day smoked herbs of some sort either medicinally or for pleasure. Coltsfoot was inhaled for asthma, though whether a pipe was used in the process remains a matter for conjecture.

The Towers of Silence.

In Persia stand two towers called by the Parsees the "towers of silence." According to their religion, they never bury their dead, but have the body exposed on the top of one of these towers until the sun and the rain and the fowls of the air have cleaned the bones of all flesh. The bones are then collected and placed in the other tower. These Parsees, who are followers of Zoroaster and very devout, have almost disappeared as a people, there being only about 8,000 of them at the present time.

ED. JARDINE ARRESTED AND HIS BROTHER THOS. ALSO HELD

Verdict of Coroner's Jury is That Evidence Points to Edward Jardine Being Guilty Man—He Still Maintains That Witnesses Are Lying.

Goderich, Oct. 27.—Edward and Thomas Jardine were arrested yesterday afternoon, the former charged with the murder on Sept. 20 of 17-year-old Lizzie Anderson, and the latter with being an accessory after the fact.

The crown theory is that the girl whose mutilated and nude body was found in an abandoned cellar, was assaulted and then slain, to prevent her revealing her assailants. The authorities did not submit all their evidence, reserving some for the preliminary trial.

Both Jardines took the arrest quietly, maintaining the same defiant grins they displayed when G. T. Blackstock, K.C., was denouncing them as falsifiers, in the witness box on Tuesday.

In the same way they listened to Coroner Holmes charging the jury, and also to the verdict, which declared: "That Elizabeth Jane Anderson came to her death by having her throat cut with a sharp knife or similar instrument, and the evidence submitted points strongly to Edward Jardine as having committed the crime."

Five hundred people waited outside the court house to get a look at the pair as they were marched to the county jail. Edward limped along beside Inspector Greer, blushing somewhat, and smiling. Thomas followed with Inspector Boyd, sneering.

The coroner instructed the jury that if they saw fit to connect Edward Jardine with the crime they could implicate the brother as well. He laid particular stress upon the conflict of statements uttered by both of them, and also their mother, who had obviously tried to escape appearing on the stand. The only member of the Jardine family, he said, who appeared to want to tell the truth was the youngest boy, Frankie. Edward Jardine had been contradicted in every particular by several witnesses when he attempted to explain his movements on the night in question. He had also been contradicted by his relatives.

"It is for you to say," he said, "whether Edward Jardine is lying. And if you believe he is, you must answer this question: Why? Is it to conceal something that he didn't want to come out? If it was, then it must have been something that would have hurt him. That is only a natural conclusion. If you consider that Edward Jardine is culpable I simply wish to say that you cannot get away from the fact that Thomas Jardine was implicated in this as well. The two were together all night, they bring up their fortunes together. The one must have been aware of the other's movements all that night, to say the least of it."

Twice again yesterday morning was Edward Jardine put on the witness stand, the last time just before the coroner began his summing up.

"Now, Edward Jardine," began Mr. Blackstock, this inquest is drawing to a close and you have had several opportunities to make explanations. You understand that you are not in the position of an accused person as yet. But you say that several of the witnesses are lying and I have called you back to give you any opportunity you may wish of making explanations. You will observe that if the jury believe their evidence, it will put you in an unfortunate position. I have called you back because I don't want to take any unfair advantage of you. What explanation have you to make?"

"I don't see how they can come up here and take hold of that Bible and kiss it and then tell lies," responded Jardine.

"Then I suppose you realise that it would be better for you to tell the truth?"

"They're lying, that's all I can make out of it," was the final word.

Previously, Mr. Blackstock asked him if he had ever been near the place where the girl's body was found and he answered "No." George Moss was then sworn and stated that a few days before the fair he had gone to the place with witness.

"I say he's lying," said Jardine.

Mr. Moss was asked how the witness walked before the tragedy as compared to now.

"Well, he wasn't as lame then as now." (Laughter.)

Simeon Morningstar, who lives opposite the fair grounds, swore to finding a black-handled knife with a broken "little" blade, inside his gate five weeks ago.

Mrs. Monck, who was working in the refreshment booth at the fair, said her little daughter Hazel had bought 15 cents worth of buns at 6.30 or 6.45 on Sept. 20 for Lizzie Anderson. The money was supplied by the Anderson girl. This was corroborated by Hazel.

This evidence had a very significant bearing on the case, as Dr. Gallow, who made the post mortem on the murdered girl, followed with the statement that the remains of buns were found in the stomach and if she ate those at 7 o'clock she must have died at eleven or before. There were also some fresh grapes in the stomach, and he inferred that they had been taken from the vines beside the abandoned house just before she entered the cellar. From spatters of blood on the stairway leading into the cellar he thought that an attempt had been made to drag the body out after the murder.

YOUNG ENGINEER TRIED TO INTIMIDATE JOHN C. EATON

James Edward McCauley, Aged 22, is Arrested After Hours of Waiting by Thiel Agents—Wrote Letter Demanding $200.

Toronto, Oct. 27.—Admitting the authorship of a letter threatening death and destruction to the life and property of J. C. Eaton and his family, and the receipt of $200 secreted as directed by his letter, James Edward McCauley, 22 years of age, an electrical engineer, formerly employed by the city and the Hydro-Electric Commission, was arrested yesterday afternoon by the city police, aided by the King Edward Hotel authorities and operatives of the Thiel Detective Agency, in the rotunda of the hotel after hours of watching. He is charged with demanding money with menaces from Mr. Eaton and may be further charged with extortioning it, as the money placed was real cash. The penalty for the offences carries with it life sentence as a maximum. T. C. Robinette, K.C., will appear in court to-day, for Mr. Eaton, to assist Crown Attorney Corley in the prosecution.

This is what the letter said:

"Mr. Eaton: By the statutes of our organization, I swear by the holy diety and saints to demand and receive $200 from you or ruin your household and family or yourself by shooting the first one handy or dynamiting your house or yacht when your family are on board. So help my God I do this if you don't give us the money or tell the police who make trouble. We stay in this town till we get $5,000. We give you a week to get ready. Put it next Wednesday in the closet of the King Edward Hotel in the southeast corner, on behind a loose ferrule on the ventilator pipe about 2 o'clock.

(Signed) "Black Hand Society."

It was written on yellow night lettergram paper and scrawled in pencil, and was received through the mails on Monday morning by Mr. Eaton. It was addressed in pencil upon an hotel envelope to "Mr. J. C. Eaton, 121 Walmer road, Toronto."

Mr. Eaton immediately consulted with Mr. Robinette and the matter was laid before Chief of Police Grasett, who turned it over to Acting Inspector of Detectives Alex. Mackie. It was then arranged that the money should be placed as directed.

Suspicion rested upon employes of the hotel, and so, when Detective McKinney was detailed to the case, he hesitated about appearing in the vicinity of the appointed place, as all the city officers are well-known. So the Thiel services was called for two operatives, and they took their place opposite the designated compartment. House Detective Smith of the hotel staff was on watch just ouside the lavatory door, and Detective McKinney waited closely in Colborne street. It was arranged that when anyone went into the compartment, one Thiel man should follow him when he left, while the other hurried to the spot to see if the money had been taken.

Scarcely had Mr. Eaton emerged from the place where he personally secreted the money between the loose ferrule and the wall, than a young man entered, remained a few moments and left hurriedly. The Thiel man followed and gave the signal that he had been in, but the other man had no time to let Smith know whether or not the money had been taken. The man went out the rear entrance, and was followed east on Colborne street by McKinney. The gentleman, when approached, did not hesitate to be searched, and this was done at the Clyde Hotel. Nothing was found, and upon McKinney's return to the hotel he found that the money was still there.

CORRUPTION IN PORTUGAL

Lisbon, Oct. 27.—Jose Relvas, Minister of Finance, in an interview yesterday, declared that he was appalled at the corruption of the old regime, which his investigation is revealing. For the future, he said, it would be war to the knife against special privilege abuses. It was almost unnecessary to say that all the old Government employes would be dismissed.

The king's civil list of $[illegible],000, the Minister added, would be replaced by a modest, Presidential salary. Taxes on necessities would be reduced and those on luxuries increased. The richer classes, who hitherto have been evading taxes, will be closely watched.

In conclusion Senor Relvas expressed the opinion that the separation of the church and state would be accomplished within a month.

THIS CHIMPANZEE LOVES THE LADIES

Paris, Oct. 24.— As twenty work girls came out of a dressmaker's shop in the Rue Boileau, at mid-day, an arm encircled the waist of one of them.

The girl protested indignantly. The too gallant intruder was well dressed in a frock coat, grey trousers, top patent leather boots, and wore smart grey suede gloves. But he was a hideous little person.

The girls began making fun of him when suddenly he caught hold of one and put his face close against hers. She boxed his ears and he dropped on all fours and bit her leg.

There was a panic. The girls rushed off shrieking, and two policemen arrested the aggressor. The creature was a chimpanzee— the pet of an explorer living near at hand. He was captured after a struggle, and carried off this morning by his master's cook, who went to fetch him at the police station, where he had spent the night.

An amusing item of the story is that the police magistrate got very angry with the monkey when he was first brought in, because he refused to answer any questions, and turned his back to the official table.

BONAR LAW WARNS BRITAIN

London, Oct. 27.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Bonar Law, addressing the Unionist demonstration at Glasgow, uttered a warning about the danger of failing to respond to the fiscal advances of the dominions. Canada, in making her own treaties, could not and ought not to have done otherwise, but this tendency, taken by itself, was in the direction of disunion.

Fortunately there was a force in the colonies equally strong, namely, the keen desire for closer commercial union within the Empire. The fact that Britain was unable to do anything to counteract the former tendency ought surely to make her all the more determined to do everything to encourage and develop the movement towards union, and there were hopeful indications that this was coming about.

MISSING BALLOON AMERICA 11. LANDED IN SAGUENAY COUNTY

Word is Received That the Last of the Aero Club Racers Came to Earth on the Peribonka, North of Lake Chilogana—All Previous Records Broken.

New York, Oct. 27.—Alan R. Hawley and Augustus Post, the aeronauts in the balloon America II., for which search had been prosecuted in the Canadian wilds, are safe and well, and have established a new world's record for sustained balloon flight. They traveled approximately 1,350 miles, and came to earth in Chicoutimi County, Quebec, last Wednesday, but were not heard from until yesterday, when telegrams, sent from St. Ambroise, Quebec, reached New York. This is the first word from the balloonists since their disappearance from St. Louis with nine other competing balloons in the international contest on Monday, Oct. 17.

Two messages from Hawley and Post were received here early last night. One was to Wm. Hawley, brother of the aeronaut, the other to S. F. Perkins, pilot of the balloon Dusseldorf II., which, until last night, had been considered the winner. The message to Mr. Hawley said: "Landed in wilderness week ago, fifty miles north of Chicoutimi. Both well.—Alan."

The Perkins message ran: "Landed Peribonka River, north Lake Chilogana, nineteenth. All well; returning.—Hawley, Post."

With the receipt of the telegrams ended a search which had come to be regarded by many as almost hopeless, and one in which the Governments of Canada and the United States were indirectly participating. For, in addition to the emissaries sent by the Aero Club of St. Louis, by the Aero Club of America, and by Wm. Hawley, the U. S. revenue cutter service, the signal corps of the U. S. army, the Hudson Bay Co. of Canada and other agents were conducting the search, scouring the great lakes and making preparations for entering the almost impenetrable Canadian forests.

Clifford B. Harmon, the wealthy amateur aeronaut and aviator of New York, had offered $1,000 to anyone finding Hawley and Post, dead or alive, and this sum had been increased by subscription to more than $7,000. At the international aviation meet at Belmont Park, nearly $2,000 was subscribed among the aviators, headed by $500 pledged by Glenn H. Curtiss.

Young Perkins, who accompanied Lieut. Hans Gericke in the Dusseldorf, conceded immediately on receiving the telegram from Hawley and Post that he and the German yielded first place to the New Yorkers. Perkins estimates the distance traveled by the Dusseldorf at 1,240 miles. He was overjoyed at hearing from his long-lost rivals, and quickly despatched to St. Ambroise with instructions to have it forwarded to Messrs. Hawley and Post this message: "Indications are that you have broken the world's record for sustained flight in a balloon. Please accept my sincerest congratulations on your success. You are the only ones I would be glad to see win, outside myself. I know from my own experience what you must have risked to make such a trip."

William Hawley shouted with delight when he heard of his brother's success and safety. For the past week he has been under a constant strain, and had been in hourly communication with points in Canada, from which he hoped to receive news of the landing. As the outlook grew less hopeful day by day, his anxiety became greater, but he did not lose faith in his brother's ability to come through alive. He had sent J. H. Pope and Edmund Stratton to Ottawa to carry on the search, but he notified them last night of the happy ending.

Word Received in Toronto.

Lewis Spindler, who was sent to Toronto as the representative of the St. Louis Aero Club, yesterday received the following wire:

"Hawley landed at Peribonka River, Lake Chiligoma, Saguenay district, on 19th; all well. C. E. Lillie (G.N.W. inspector)."

The Peribonka River runs east from Lake St. John. This will mean a trip of at least 1,360 miles, winning the Gordon Bennett Cup and $3,000 prize, and breaking the record of Count de la Vaux, who in 1902 went from Paris to the Russian frontier, 1,193 miles.

HEAD OF THE NORTH WEST POLICE IN THE VAST YUKON TERRITORY IS IN PETERBOROUGH ON A VISIT HAS HAD MANY EXPERIENCES A SOLDIER OF ACTIVE BATTLE TYPE

Major A. E. Snyder is in the city.

Major Snyder is not a parlor soldier of the dress parade variety.

He is from the west and further.

His home is in Dawson City, six months of the year, and the other six months he spends at White Horse.

Major Snyder is in command of the Northwest Mounted Police in the Yukon.

He is an old hand at the business.

He is of the stuff that makes the mounted policeman a terror to the renegade and the outlaw.

The visitor has been for a quarter of a century a member of this world-famed force.

The handful of men of which he is an active head, make that now frozen north a paradise compared to the mining camps of olden days to the south of us.

When the British and the Dutch had their little disagreement in South Africa, Major Snyder with full rank of Major and a member of the Strathcona Horse, went south and won honor by his gallantry and conspicuous bravery.

When the Dawson boom was on, when the great north was first discovered rich with golden treasure, Major Snyder was one who attempted to make what proved an impassible trail from overland via Edmonton.

The gentleman in question is away on a long furlough. His wife and family are in Europe and he may join them.

Quiet as are many of the mounted men of the north, quiet with an air of building determination, Major Snyder said times were picking up in the gold field, and that gold was being taken out in much larger quantities than ever before.

This gentleman from the land of Dan McGrue is visiting Mrs. Carnegie at 51 McDonnel street. His brother, Mr. O. J. Snyder, is also there.

This is the major's first visit in years and he notices many, very many changes in Peterborough since the long ago.

A SNAKE RAN DOWN HIS THROAT

Bristol, Pa., Oct. 24.— Never again will Paul Natale, of Lincoln avenue, recline at ease on the green sward and take his rest till his mouth hangs open. Natale tried that one day last June at the Corona Leather Works and awoke to feel something brush his mouth and to gulp. Now he knows why. He was seized with what he thought was an attack of acute indigestion, and from that day forth he lost weight and ran into a general decline.

His health having been broken up he went to the Fabiani Hospital, Philadelphia, but the physicians there were not able to relieve him. Then he went to a Trenton Hospital, but still he lost weight and still suffered biting pains in his abdomen.

Natale was brought back to his home here and continued under the care of the local doctor. The latter sought traces of all known diseases in the man, but could find nothing satisfactory.

Finally he starved him for several days, and two days ago gave him a strong emetic. Up came a garter snake, eight inches long, much to the consternation of Natale. The snake is now preserved in alcohol, and the patient has gained weight.

LOCAL CHAUFFEUR GOT IN TROUBLE AT LINDSAY

(Warder)

The new pavement on William-st. makes an ideal speedway for automobilists, but it is contrary to law to travel any faster than ten miles an hour. However, a party of automobilists displayed utter disregard for the law Monday night and traveled up and down the new permanent roadway at about sixty miles an hour. They also raced on other streets and eventually the red light became extinguished and consequently the number of the auto became invisible to the naked eye. All this was contrary to law.

It is stated that a constable seeing the state of affairs at once stopped the party, demanded that the red lamp be lighted, and also took the number of the car. No doubt police court proceedings will follow.

For some time past there has been some reckless driving and speeding on this thoroughfare and life has been in danger. No doubt if an example is made it will be a warning to other parties.

It was learned this morning that the chauffeur of the party referred to, above, hails from Peterboro, and that his father and brother arrived from that city this morning to take the young fellow home. Bad associates and some "red eye" combined to make the party a noisy and wreckless one. [illegible]

THE USE OF MOVING PICTURES

At a recent church convention a prominent religious speaker, a man noted for his progressive ideas ventured the prophecy that if St. Paul were alive to-day he would utilize the moving picture invention in his preaching. And undoubtedly the cinematograph is destined to become both a moral force as well as an educational aid. At present, in Canada, its chief present use is for amusement purposes. But other countries are leading the pioneer's way in discovering and adapting the more useful applications of Mr. Edison's wonderful invention.—Ottawa Journal.

"Become all things to all men if, by any means, I may win some."—St. Paul.

This is what Paul himself said about his ideas. There is no doubt about it that the moving pictures will some day be a part of the service. Paul would have been a moving picture enthusiast in church work. Paul would have free exhibitions of sacred stories in his church nightly.

The organ came by degrees, the surpliced choir came by degrees. We think the organ helps the service; the surplice choir is good also, it keeps down the competition in dress and millinery. And why not the moving pictures? Much better look at pictures from life illustrating a text than to listen to a preacher who should be a hod carrier, trying to drive home a point without a hammer, trying to build a wall without brick or mortar. The moving picture has come to stay. It is a powerful influence. Shall the church lose its opportunity? The devil had all the most popular music until the Salvation Army band butted in and won it back to sacred story. In Detroit where the moving picture is shown in the Sunday school. Little Willie and Mary hustle to school now. They want to get a good seat. The speaker trys to paint a word story. How often he falls flat. The moving picture majestically, silently, appeals to the heart.

The moving picture is here to stay, along with the auto and bicycle. Why not make it a benefit to the community? For instance, one American municipality recently contracted with a moving picture theatre to display a series of films showing the effects of impure milk. In the same community the Public School Board is considering the use of the films as a regular part of the curriculum. It seems only a matter of time before the cinematograph will be accepted as part of the machinery of our courts, while the business world finds it a profitable advertising medium. For the science student, the biologist, and the medical lecturer the scope of the moving picture is limitless. As usual along this line France is to be found leading the way. Recently in Paris a wonderful demonstration of the microbe of recurrent fever was made in the factory of Pathe Freres, the celebrated film makers.

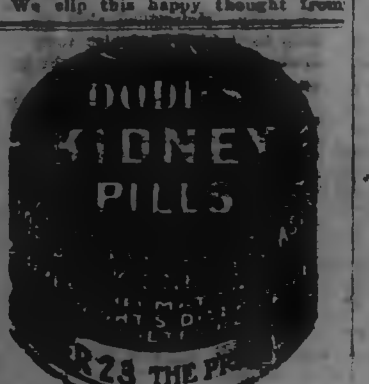
TELL HIM SO

When an employee does a thing unusually well, takes unusual pains with it, tell him so. It will stimulate him to do even better next time.

When you see anyone trying to do his best, who, perhaps, has no one to encourage him, give him a little lift, tell him so. It will not hurt you, and may do you a great deal of good.

Form the habit of encouraging people when they do well. Give them a lift when they are down. It costs only a little effort and it may make a vast difference to those you encourage.

We clip this happy thought from the Port Hope Guide. That's one thing this old world's stingy in—paging on the praise. It isn't hot air or flattery we mean, but just ordinary everyday "Well done old man." When a man makes a good tackle or breaks away and score a touch down, the crowd then and there frantically shouts its praise. So they do when the batter swats the ball out of the lot. But let Jinks work well for Blink for six months or six years, Blinks never opens his face with a word of cheer. And let Mary Ann work for Mrs. Muchety Much, keep the house clean, wash, scrub and iron, and cook and bake and Mrs. Muchety Much is as close as an oyster. The dog wags his tail when he is spoken kindly to. We are more than dogs. To-day speak kindly and if your hired man, hired girl, your associate in life anywhere is doing well, just tell him so. It's free, but its seems a hard job to let loose when it comes to speaking praise for anyone except ourselves.



FILLS A LONG FELT WANT

The Correspondent is on the table, issue number one. The office is 180 Sanguinet street, Montreal. In introducing itself to the reading public the following information is given;

> The "Correspondent" is the only Matrimonial Paper in two languages published in America. Its objects is not to criticise individuals, politician bodies, or religious sects, but rather to make easier the realization or the hopes of any persons, having good dispositions to marriage.

At last, Eureka, at last Excelsior, here is a paper to fill the long felt want. No longer need the lonesome swain go up the lane on the farm alone. No more need he sit in his little room at the boarding house. The Correspondent will fill the bill. Will he wed a rich girl, here is one at random;

> 1.—Quebec, Nicolet County.
> I am a Canadian girl, 17, Methodist, fair complexion, dark brown hair, blue eyes, 5 feet 4 inches tall, weight 115 pounds, dress very neatly and make nice appearance, play piano and organ and sing soprano, healthy, high school education, good disposition, can keep house, have some money. I am sincere and will marry if suited. Prefer city life.

However, we would advise the man who weds her to ask her if she can bake and scrub and wash as well as play the organ and sing soprano.

Would the gentleman have a girl "poor, but honest," here is another,

> No. 37.—Montreal, Que.
> Young lady of 28 years, fair, brown eyes, 5 feet 2, weight 128 pounds. Lives in the country, but would like to come to town. All qualities to be a charming companion; good cook, singer, jolly and always in good humor. Wish a correspondent not over 35 and with good situation. Be a tender wife to the right man.

And girls, here's your chance. The men are yearning. Here is one:

> Real estate agent, 33 years, never married. French Canadian. Almost 6 feet, elegant; fair with military demeanour. Business man. Does not care for city ladies, but would like to correspond with refined ladies, who are in the country. Having a little income. Look severe and cold, but has a tender heart.
> "Military,"
> "The Correspondent," > Montreal.

Now isn't that lovely "kuria."

RELIGION AND ECONOMICS

The Baptist convention, now meeting in Toronto, has been discussing the salaries of the Baptist clergy which are no doubt like the salaries of other denominations. In the Home Mission field salaries do not average more than $625 a year without in most cases either house or horse. It is stated that outside of the cities, salaries in self-supporting churches do not average more than $350 a year. Why is it?—The Sun.

A peanut man can make as much as that on one of his roasters on the corner, and the man who shines shoes can break even as well. The carpenter and bricklayer and stonemason have him beaten a city block for scale of wage. The life insurance man have got the man referred to above faded to a frazzle and the parson deals in the next life and hell fire at that. The Sun asks, "Why is it." We repeat; WHY IS IT?

SLOW DOWN THAT CAR

The Ontario Statute of 1906 fixed the limit of speed in cities, towns and villages at ten miles an hour, and upon any public highway outside of the city or town limits at fifteen miles an hour, but the Act provides that any person who drives a motor vehicle on a public highway recklessly or negligently, or at a speed ~~or in a manner which is danger~~ous to the public having regard to all the circumstances of the case, including the nature, condition and use of the highway, and to the amount of traffic which actually is at that time or which might be reasonably expected to be on the highway, shall be guilty of an offense under the Act. The penalty under the Act is not to exceed $50 for a first offense, for a second $100 and for a third or subsequent offence, imprisonment not exceeding one month.—Guide, Port Hope.

There are too many smart Alecs with automobiles running loose around the country. A human freak raced his automobile up George street yesterday noon, lying back in his car like a loon. He wasn't looking anywhere in particular. He was facing against time. At the street corner some children were playing. He didn't run over them. They saw him first.

PROFANITY

Thirty thousand persons marched in procession at Pittsburg last Sunday in protest against the growing habit of profane speech. With banners and anthems the marchers made a profound impression on all who saw them. The movement in Pittsburg had its beginning in the church, but it is one which should embrace all classes, whether church-goers or not.

The shocking looseness of speech heard everywhere upon our streets, our public conveyances, and in our offices and shops should be counteracted by a campaign in which our business men and the heads of families ought to exact pledges from those in their charge to abstain from this reprehensible practice. Young women should league themselves to cut the acquaintance of any young man who is known to be guilty of it.—Brandon Sun.

We are not falling over our wings, nor do we pass the collection plate in church or figure as an ornament among the elect in the cheif seats of the synagogue, but we are dead nuts on profanity. Its cheap, its a sign of a small vocabulary, a narrow round of thought. Our swearing is limited to one word, "Damn." That terse, that's biblical, that's a column, a volume, an oration or a preoration—just plain dam. Some men cannot speak half a minute unless they sling in a lot of smut, profanity, reeking and rotten with the smell of the slums, or the sewers. Its cheap. It doesn't cost anything to let loose, a lot of blasphemy, but it sounds damn bad.

TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

An annoying typographical error was made in the personal columns of the Colonist, when a reference was made to Bishop Macdonald "and wife." As the distinguished prelate is of the Roman Catholic Church the error is the more to be regretted.—Victoria Colonist.

That is just one illustration of how annoying errors creep into the most carefully managed papers. The Colonist is a well edited and well printed daily; and one can easily imagine the disgust of its staff on finding such a statement in cold type in its columns. No newspaper man will more than smile at such errors; they are to him forgivable; he knows the chances which even perfect "copy" runs from machines, proof correctors and make-up. But the reading public does not so thoroughly appreciate the situation, and sometimes it is severe on the "carelessness" of the paper. If that public only knew how many errors its eagle eye misses, it might be more modest, and make allowances.—Hamilton Times.

"I may cuss Plato, I may cuss Socrates, said Major Veritas." This startling information was once read in the London Chronicle, one of the most influential Liberal papers in England. The reporter should have written "Amicus, Plato, amicus Socrates, sed major veritas." The wonder is that in the hurry of the newspaper office from first copy to press there are not ten times more errors than there now are. The store, the office, the factory, all sides have errors, but these are only known inside. The error in the paper is known to the world. "Mr. F. Troon and Miss W. J. Breen were buried to-day. The ceremony was a very quiet, though impressive one." This appeared in a western paper. Now it should have read "married," not buried. Naturally the groom called in after the honeymoon to show that he was no "dead one," and shake hands with the editor.

WAS THE QUEBEC CENSUS PADDED

Bishop Fallon's famous statement contains one statement of great gravity. The Bishop declared that "the politicians and the French-Canadian politician agitators" did not control fifteen or seventeen counties in Ontario. They had, he said, "worked for ten years under falsified or stuffed census lists as in the Province of Quebec, always with one end their single aim being to secure control of Church and State."

In view of the fact that we are just about to take a new census this is an ugly remark. It is a remarkable coincidence that during recent weeks we have had various despatches from the East indicating a great growth of population in Quebec and suggesting that the West would not be entitled to as many additional members as has been expected. As every one knows Quebec determines the representation in Parliament of ~~all the Provinces. If the unit~~ of representation in Quebec is high, Ontario and the Maritime Provinces must lose a proportionate number of seats at Ottawa, and the West gain fewer seats than the increase of population would seem to warrant.

And Bishop Fallon says that the Quebec lists are padded. It would, however, be a serious thing for a Bishop to make such a grave accusation against the leaders of the French-Canadian people without some evidence to justify his utterance. In any event he gives a keener edge to suspicions already aroused, and makes it very important that the Government should have the census taken under conditions which will avoid a race or sectional quarrel in the country.

SIDE LIGHTS

CHEER UP.

This old world is growing better!
Smoke that in your pipe, you fretter, if you must use your forgetter.
Use it upon other things.
Do not go your way with wailings, over murders and blackmailings,
over man's unnumbered failings,
Don't go searching for life's stings.
Do not read your daily paper and then cut a solemn caper or entwine your lid with crepe, or Say, "O Lord, how long—how long!"
If the day's news makes you weary, makes you hollow-eyed and teary,
turn you to the column cheery,
Sidetrack trouble with a song.

There's—as we were just now saying—not a bit of sense in spraying all the earth with tears and slaying
Joy whene'er it shows its head
With the glumness of your bearing;
haven't you a joke worth sharing,
or a grin you could be sparing,
Or a tale worth being spread!
Dear old nature has her troubles, has her debts and punctured bubbles, that's why she turns to and doubles
Up her gladness every spring!
Though you've daily information of black crimes and tribulation, also you've your daily ration
And the years their pleasures bring.

Vice and daily showing of it does not make the old world love it. Help the world to climb above it—
There'll be less of it each day;
And if you will cease to grumble, if you'll kindly take a tumble, soon your feet will cease to stumble
Down a dark and narrow way;
Yes, you'll help the word grow better if you'll work your old forgetter on life's troubles; if you'll let her
She will sweep them far along
Out of sight, and all the dreary old parade that's made you weary, will go, and your soul so cheery
Will round out each day with song.

MT. JULIAN

Special to the Review.

Mount Julian, Oct. 21.—His Lordship Bishop Sweeney performed the holy rite of confirmation in Holy Trinity church on Friday evening last. The church was tastefully decorated for the occasion by Miss Lily Shewen. This was the third confirmation service during the past year, and twenty-two candidates in all have been confirmed. His Lordship, who is making his first trip through this part of the diocese, gave a very interesting and instructive address on "What Mean Ye by This?—Confirmation." The sacrament of the Lord's supper will be administered on Sunday, 23rd inst., at 11 o'clock, when those who have lately been confirmed will receive their first communion.

The October meeting of the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. J. C. Stone. In spite of the inclement weather a fair number were present. The meeting was opened by singing "Looking This Way," followed by prayer. A very interesting paper on "Being Mean" was given by Mrs. Chas. Lauder. Misses L. Shewen Mrs. Chas. Lauder. Misses L. Shewen and E. Reid sang "The Light the Stealing." Jokes were given by Mrs. J. C. Stone and Miss Shewen. A letter from Mrs. Baldwin, a sister worker, which was read by the president, was much appreciated. Mrs. Baldwin very kindly enclosed a copy of a beautiful poem entitled "He Careth," for each member of the Institute, also a recipe for Worcester sauce. The September meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Joe Northery.

Mrs. Wm. Thompson and little daughter, Annie, who have been visiting friends in Peterborough and Keene, have returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Spence spent a few days in Norwood last week.

Mr. Dickson, government surveyor, spent a few days in the neighborhood last week, appraising drowned lands.

Mr. E. S. Hopkins, Boschink, closed camp on the 18th inst., and returned to his home in Boston. Mr. Hopkins is always one of the first cottagers to appear in the spring and one of the last to leave in the Fall.

The Thanksgiving service will be preached in Eden Methodist church on Sunday, October 30th, by Rev. H. C. Garbut. The ladies of the congregation will decorate the church on Saturday.

A fishing party composed of Messrs. O. P. Shewen, M. G. Booth, Wm. Langford, Wm. Thompson and others have returned from Jack's Lake. They report a good catch.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Lauder spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Richard Darling, of Douro.

CHAPTER XX.

THE CALL TO ARMS.

BOTH Randolph and Carolina were deeply affected by their father's words.

The daughter attempted to take on herself the blame for her brother's action.

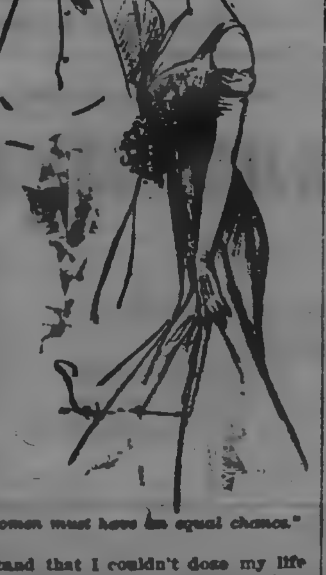
"I was the older one. I might have stopped him if I had wished and should bear the burden."

"No, no, father," exclaimed the youth, his inborn self reliance prompting him to shoulder the consequences of his own mistakes. "I, and I alone am responsible for what I did. I did not realize that it was wrong. I will not hide behind Carolina."

Carolina Langdon bore herself better than was to have been expected under the strain of the painful interview. She saw more clearly now how she had erred. She was undergoing an inward revolution that would make it impossible for her ever again to veer so far from the line of duty to her father, her family and to herself.

When Randolph had finished Carolina took up her own defense, and eloquently she pleaded the defense of many woman who yearns for what she has not got, for what may be beyond her reach—the defense of the woman who chafes under the limitations of worldly position, of sex and of opportunity It was the defense of an ambitious woman.

"Perhaps I ought to have been man of the Langdon family," she exclaimed. "Father, oh, can't you understand that I couldn't dose my life away down on those plantations? You don't know what ambition is. I had to have the world. I had to have money. If I had been a man I would have tried big financial enterprises. I should have liked to fight for a fortune. You wouldn't have condemned me then. You might have said my methods were bold, but if I succeeded I would have been a great man. But just because I am a woman you think I must sit home with my knitting. No, father, the world does move. Women must have an equal chance with men, but I wish I had been a man!"



"Women must have an equal chance."

"Even then I hope you would have been a gentleman," rebuked her father sternly. "Women should have an equal chance, Carolina. They should have an equal chance for the same virtues as men, not for the same vices."

"But an equal chance," returned the girl fervidly. "There, father, you have admitted what I have tried to prove. The woman with the spirit of a man, the spirit that cries to a woman, 'Advance,' 'Accomplish,' 'Be something,' 'Strike for yourself,' cannot sit idly by while all the world moves on. If it is true that I have chosen the wrong means, the wrong way, to better my lot I did it through ignorance, and that ignorance is the fault of the times in which I live, of the system that guides the era in which I live.

"I am what the world calls 'educated,' but the world, the world of men, knows better. It laughs at me. It has cheated me because I am a woman. The world of men has fenced me in and hobbled me with convention, with precedent, with fictitious sentiment. If I pursue the business of men as they themselves would pursue it I am called an ungrateful daughter. If I should adopt the morals of men I would be called a fallen woman. If I adopted the religion of men I would have no religion at all. Turn what way I will"—

"But not every woman feels the way you do, my daughter," broke in the senator.

"No, you are right, because their spirit has been crushed by generations, by centuries of forced subserviency to men. They tell us we should be thankful that we do not live in China, where women are physical slaves to men. In our country they are forced to be mental and social slaves to men. Is one very much worse than the other?"

"Then, dear," and her father's tone was very gentle, "if you want an equal chance—want to be equal to a man—you must take your medicine with Randolph, like a man."

"What are you going to do, sir?" she asked, afraid.

"I'm going to spoil all your little scheme, dear," he returned, smiling sadly. "I'm going, I fear, to make you lose all your money. I'd like to make it easy for you, but I can't. You've got to take your medicine, children, and when it's all over back there in Mississippi I shall be able, I hope, to patch up your broken lives and together we will work out your mistakes. I can't think of that now. The honor of the Langdons calls. This is the time for the fight, and any one who fights against me must take the consequences."

He walked over and touched the bell.

"Thomas," he said to the servant who responded, "take that letter at once to Senator Peabody, in the library."

"What is it, sir?" asked Randolph.

"It's the call to arms," responded his father grimly.

Senator Peabody read the letter to which Haines had signed Langdon's name and jumped up from his chair in the library in astonishment. Without a word to the startled Stevens he rushed to confront Langdon.

"What's the meaning of this?" he shouted as he burst in on the junior senator from Mississippi.

"Of what?" asked the southerner, with a blandness that added fuel to Peabody's irritation.

"Don't trifle with me, sir!" cried "the boss of the senate." "This letter. You sent it. Explain it! I'm in no mood to joke."

Langdon looked at him calmly.

"I think the letter is quite plain, senator," he said. "You can read." Then he turned to his daughter. "This discussion cannot possibly interest you, my dear. Will you go to the drawing room to receive our guests?"

Carolina obeyed. She seemed to be discovering new qualities in this father whom she had considered to be too old fashioned for his time.

"Now, senator, go ahead, and, Randolph, you bring Stevens."

"You're switching to Gulf City?" demanded Peabody.

"I'm considering Gulf City," agreed Langdon.

Peabody brought down his fist on the table.

"It's too late to consider anything, Langdon," he cried. "We're committed to Altacoola, and Altacoola it is. I don't care what you heard of Gulf City. Now, I'd like to settle this thing in a friendly manner, Langdon. I like always for every member of the senate to have his share of the power and the patronage. We've been glad to put you forward in this naval base matter. We appreciate the straightforwardness, the honesty of your character. You look well. You're the kind of politician the public thinks it wants nowadays, but you've been in the senate long enough to know that bills have to pass, and you know you can't get through anything without my friends, and I tell you now I'll throttle any Gulf City plan you bring up."

"Then if you are as sure of that you can't object to my being for Gulf City?" asked Langdon.

"Are you financially interested in Gulf City?" demanded Peabody.

"Senator Peabody!" exclaimed Langdon.

"Don't flare up, Langdon," retorted Peabody. "That sort of thing has happened in the senate. There are often perfectly legitimate profits to be made in some regular commercial venture by a man who has inside information as to what's doing up on Capitol hill."

"Senator Peabody," asked Langdon, "why are you so strong for Altacoola?"

The Pennsylvanian hesitated.

"Its natural advantages," he said at last.

The southerner shook his head.

"Oh, that's all? Well, if natural advantages are going to settle it, and not influence, go ahead and vote, and I'll just bring in a minority report for Gulf City."

"The boss of the senate" was in a corner now.

"Confound it, Langdon, if you will have it, I am interested in Altacoola."

Langdon nodded.

"That's all I wanted to know," he said.

"Now you see why it's got to be Altacoola," persisted the boss.

"I don't mind telling you, then, Senator Peabody," answered Langdon calmly, "that my being for Gulf City was a bluff. I've been trying to draw you out. Gulf City is a mud bank and no more fitted to be a naval base than Keokuk, Ia. Altacoola it's got to be, for the good of the country and the honor of Mississippi.

"And one thing more, senator. I'd just like to add that not a single man connected with that committee is going to make a cent out of the deal. You get that straight?"

CHAPTER XXI.

"IF YOU CAN'T BUY A SENATOR, THREATEN HIM."

SENATOR PEABODY was the most surprised man in Washington when he heard the junior senator from Mississippi state that no one was to enrich himself out of the government naval base project.

He heaped a mental anathema on the head of Stevens for saddling such a man on the senate "machine," for Langdon would of course never had been put on "naval affairs" (just now very important to the machine) without the "O. K." of Stevens, who had — a heretofore thoroughly reliable reputation as a judge of men, or of what purported to be men. The thought that at this time, of all times, there should be a man on the committee on naval affairs that could not be "handled" was sufficient to make him who reveled in the title of "boss of the senate" determine that he must get another chief lieutenant to replace Stevens, who had proved so trustworthy in the past. Stevens had lost his cunning!

As the vote of Langdon could not be secured by humbug or in exchange for favors and as it could not be "delivered," Peabody, of course, was willing to pay in actual cash for the vote. This was the final step, but one in political conspiracies of this nature—cash. But Langdon would not take cash, so Peabody had to resort to the last agency of the trained and corrupt manipulator of legislation.

He would threaten.

Moreover, he knew that to make threats effective, if it is possible to do so, they must be led up to systematically—that is, they should be made at the right time. The scene must be set, as in a play.

Senator Peabody glared at Langdon as though to convince the latter that to stand in his way would mean political destruction.

"So nobody is going to make a cent, eh? Well, I suppose you want all the profits for yourself." Turning to Stevens, who had just entered, the Pennsylvanian cried:

To be continued.

OPERATION HER ONLY CHANCE

Was Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Lindsay, Ont.—"I think it is no more than right for me to thank Mrs. Pinkham for what her kind advice and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. When I wrote to her some time ago I was a very sick woman, suffering from female troubles. I had inflammation of the female organs, and could not stand or walk any distance. At last I was confined to my bed, and the doctor said I would have to go through an operation, but this I refused to do. A friend advised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now, after using three bottles of it, I feel like a new woman. I most heartily recommend this medicine to all women who suffer with female troubles. I have also taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Liver Pills and think they are fine."—Mrs. FRANK EMSLEY, Lindsay, Ontario.

We cannot understand why women will take chances with an operation or drag out a sickly half-hearted existence, missing three-fourths of the joy of living, without first trying Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

For thirty years it has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has cured thousands of women who have been troubled with such ailments as displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, indigestion, and nervous prostration.

FASCINATING HAIR

Women Who Use Parisian Sage Have It and Keep It.

You never saw a beautiful woman who didn't have beautiful hair. The charm of a beautiful woman lies in her hair.

Many women do not realise the attractions they possess because they do not give proper attention to the hair.

The women of Paris are famed for their beauty, not because their facial features are superior to those of other women, but because they know how to keep young by supplying vigor, lustre and strength to the hair.

Up to three years ago Parisian Sage could hardly be obtained in Canada, but now this delightful hair restorer can be had in every town in Canada. Wm. Madill, Peterborough, sells it for 50 cents a large bottle, and he guarantees it to grow beautiful, luxuriant hair; to turn dull, lifeless hair into lustrous hair; to stop falling hair; to stop itching of the scalp. Understand Wm. Madill will give you your money back if it fails. Made only in Canada by Giroux Mfg. Co., Fort Erie, Ont. The girl with the Auburn hair is on every bottle.

Fell Dead After Saving Child.

Standing on her doorstep in a street in Carmarthen, Wales, the other week, a widow named Hannah Owen saw a five-year-old girl knocked down by a motor-car. She rushed forward, snatched the child towards her, and took her into the house, where she found that the little one was only scratched on the arm. The incident, however, had such an effect upon the woman that she fell dead.

The Expensive Promoter.

"That man's time is worth $60 a minute," said the mathematician.

"More than that," replied the reckless investor. "He once gave me five minutes of his time when I was looking for advice and it cost me several thousand dollars."

COUNTING THE PEOPLE.

First Census Proposal In England Raised a Fine Row.

It was in 1753 that a proposal to count the people was first made. Thomas Potter, son of the archbishop of Canterbury and member for St. Germans, introduced in that year a bill "for taking and registering an annual account of the total number of the people and of the total number of marriages, births and deaths and also of the total number of poor receiving alms from every parish and extra parochial place in Great Britain." It was inevitable, of course, that directly this proposal was made the precedent of King David should be quoted. And many were the jeremiads as to the alternative evils which would befall the country. Those submitted to David were mild in comparison. Mr. Thornton, member for York city, said:

"I did not believe that there was any set of men or indeed any individual of the human species so presumptuous and so abandoned as to make the proposal we have just heard. I hold this subject to be totally subversive of the last remains of English liberty. The new bill will direct the imposition of new taxes, and indeed the addition of a very few words will make it the most effectual engine of rapacity and oppression that was ever used against an injured people. Moreover, an annual register of our people will acquaint our enemies abroad with our weakness."

Matthew Ridley, another opposing member, added that his constituents looked on the proposal as ominous and feared lest some public misfortune or an epidemical distemper should follow the numbering. However, the bill passed the commons only to be promptly rejected by the lords. Not until 1800 was the proposal again made, and on this occasion it was brought to a successful issue. The first census of England and Wales was taken in March, 1801.—Westminster Gazette.

GENEROUS GEORGE.

Washington's Tips and Compliments to Patty and Polly.

Those who take tipping in the somewhat solemn spirit of the social investigator may find their minds enlivened by the perusal of an excerpt from the writings of our first president, which shows what a graceful turn appreciation and courtesy may give to the custom.

In 1789, on his return from his New England progress, Washington lodged at Taft's inn, at Uxbridge, Mass., where the domestic service—as at many inns in the country—was performed by the landlord's daughters. Somewhat later Washington wrote to Mr. Taft:

Hartford, 8 November, 1789.

Sir—Being informed that you have given my name to one of your sons and called another after Mrs. Washington's family, and being, moreover, very much pleased with the modest and innocent looks of your two daughters, Patty and Polly, I do for these reasons send each of these girls a piece of chintz, and to Patty, who bears the name of Mrs. Washington and who waited upon us more than Polly did, I send 5 guineas, with which she may buy herself any little ornaments she may want, or she may dispose of them in any other manner more agreeable to herself.

As I do not give these things with a view to have it talked of or even to its being known, the less there is said about it the better you will please me, but that I may be sure the chintz and money have got safe to hand let Patty, who I dare say is equal to it, write me a line informing me thereof, directed to "The President of the United States at New York." I wish you and your family well and am your humble servant, GO. WASHINGTON.

The Shark Is a Slow Swimmer.

One ill service nature has done the shark—namely, that of placing a triangular fin on his back which acts as a danger signal and gives warning of his approach. Happily the shark has not been gifted with sufficient sagacity to be aware of this peculiarity, for had he been so he would unquestionably abandon his habit of swimming close to the surface of the water and would in that case be enabled to approach his victim unobserved. The shark is a slow swimmer for his size and strength. Byron observes, "As darts the dolphin from the shark." But Byron was a poet and does not appear to have been a close observer of the habits of inhabitants of the water or he would have known that a shark would have no more chance of catching a dolphin than a sheep would of overhauling a hare.

Sardine Fishing.

In sardine fishing there are many uncertainties. There is a twenty-eight foot rise and fall of tide in the bay of Fundy, and especially constructed wooden picket inclosures are staked out in the water to gather in the fish. Last season a man erected an inclosure in what he supposed to be excellent fishing territory, but got nothing. He deplored his loss and for a time failed to go near it. "Why don't you seine it again?" somebody asked. "What's the use?" he replied. "Let me try it," the other persisted. "Yes, and you may have all the fish you get." The other man pulled out $1,700 worth at one haul.—Frank Leslie's.

A Sailor's Hands.

A sailor is betrayed by his hands, though his gait might betray him. They are permanently half shut. Walking, talking or sleeping the sailor has his hands half shut and could not open them flat if he tried. This is the result of years of climbing and pulling ropes.—London Chronicle.

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

Have Eyes Tested at Intervals

STUTTERING AND STAMMERING CURED

Dr. Rivenburg, the Well Known Proprietor of the Institute for Stuttering, in the City

It is seldom that Peterborough is favored with a personal visit by as thorough a master of the treatment of all form of speech impediment as the occasion of the visit of Dr. E. L. Rivenburgh, who will be at the Oriental Hotel, Peterborough, for the next two weeks. Dr. Rivenburgh has made a specialty of speech impediment and has a successful experience of over forty years. Read the following testimonial—

Toronto, Ont., March 5, 1910.

This is to certify that I have been a very bad stammerer for the past 40 years, at times so bad that I could scarcely utter a word, and as a consequence, I was seriously handicapped in life. I had been under treatment several times, but with little or no success, and had become very skeptical about ever finding a cure. I was, however, a short time ago, induced to give Dr. Rivenburgh's method a trial and I am not sorry that I did so, for in a very short time, under his instructions, I found that I could talk and read easily and fluently, and life began to look brighter. I firmly believe that any one, no matter how badly afflicted, may be cured in a very short time if they will follow the doctor's instructions, which are practical and easy to acquire.

I would heartily recommend anyone afflicted to give Dr. Rivenburgh's method a trial.

RICHARD AMOS,
Woodstock, Ont.

Any one who stutters or stammers, or has an impediment in his speech, is asked to see Dr. Rivenburgh at the Oriental Hotel during the next two weeks.

ROUTE OF G.T.R. DOUBLE TRACK

This morning a representative of The Warder had an opportunity of glancing over the map of the proposed Grand Trunk Railway Co.'s new double track from Midland to Port Hope.

The double track is mapped from Midland through Lindsay to Reaboro over the present route. From Reaboro it passes southerly near Mount Horeb and to the west of Franklin and Brunswick. Thence easterly of Bethany and a considerable distance east of Millbrook, rejoining the present line near Rice Lake summit in the township of Hope or near Carmel.

The old Port Hope track from Omemee beyond Brunswick will be taken up and it is planned to use the road-bed as a wagon road from Omemee.—Lindsay Warder.

MOTHERS WHO WORK, THIS IS A GOOD THING

There is a splendid chance at the Day Nursery for the woman who has to work out in the day time, and who is handicapped by the fact that she has to leave her young family behind. This Day Nursery is at the Y.M.C.A. for the purpose of taking care of the children of the mothers who work out. The child left there has a happy time during the day is well looked after and is well fed and amused. The mother calls after work is over and the price is only five cents a day. The nursery has been established a couple of weeks, and there is plenty of opportunity for more children to be taken care of.

Before the wool is spun into yarn for Stanfield's Unshrinkable Underwear it is washed, scoured, picked and combed repeatedly, until it is so clean that even you would say "good enough". But our critical system knows no "good enough" short of extreme perfection. For again when the garments are knit they must undergo another series of vigorous washings. Then they are double processed—an exclusive improvement of our own; rendering every garment beautifully clean and sanitary. Finally, a rinsing in distilled water—water pure enough to drink—perfects a most grateful softness.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL AT THE HIGHER COURT SITTINGS

Fred Sullivan, accused of stealing goods valued at $30, from the premises of James Edgar, wholesale grocer, faced the Magistrate this morning. Evidence was taken and the prisoner asked to be tried by the jury at the present sitting of the High Court. He was accordingly committed for trial.

James Edgar was the first witness called. His evidence summed up was as follows: His brother, John Edgar, locked up the store on the night of the 6th, and it was his brother who discovered the robbery next morning. He discovered the missing articles, which consisted of cigars, tobacco, candy and gum in an old stove oven in the vacant City Hotel. Mr. Alva Wilson and Mr. Laing found the articles there while engaged at overhauling the building. It was found on the 12th October. Witness recognized the articles because he was the exclusive dealer in some of them in Peterborough. They corresponded with the character of goods missing. They were wrapped in an apron bag taken from his store.

On the 12th of August witness was looking out the window of his shop. He noticed a young fellow come out the back door of Pappa's pool room and go into the City Hotel towards the stove. He came out a few moments later, and shortly afterward when witness and his brother and P.C. Newhall searched for the articles they had disappeared. He recognized prisoner as the young man he had seen come out of the pool room and enter the vacant hotel room.

The shop of the witness had been entered by the removal of a pane of glass 11 x 17. The glass was found behind a post.

Constable Newhall next took the witness box, and his evidence corresponded with Mr. Edgar's.

On the 6th of August he saw prisoner in Rundle's barber shop. It was from the back door of that shop that footprints could be traced to the window of Edgar's shop. No other tracks led to the window. He took a plaster cast of the footprint of the right foot. It was identical in shape with the right boot of prisoner. The boot was produced in court. When witness was informed of the disappearance of the goods a search was made and they were found in an old clothes closet about twenty yards from the first hiding place. On instructions from the Chief witness arrested Sullivan. Prisoner wanted to know the reason. Witness told him to keep his mouth shut until he was in the Chief's room. In the cells afterward he admitted that he sold the stuff. Witness overheard a conversation between the prisoner and two men who came to see him. One of the men asked him where the Chief was. Prisoner replied, "Oh, he has gone out to get some other guys." Prisoner called to a young man who was in another cell on a charge of theft. "They have got me pretty slick on this job, but they can only have me for receiving stolen goods."

This concluded the evidence.

He was then committed for trial.

TURKEYS WILL NOT BE PLENTIFUL FOR THE HOLIDAY

As Thanksgiving Day draws near, the price of turkeys naturally rises; "Will I be able to get one cheap." asks the head of the house. It is hardly likely this year. In conversation with a local dealer to-day, it is learned that turkeys will be rather scarce for the holiday. The birds are young yet and have not begun to fatten. Of course there will be some birds, but the probability is that chickens geese and ducks will be most generally purchased this year for the usual holiday luxury. It is cheaper, said the same dealer, to buy turkey by weight, as turkeys are sometimes deceptive in appearance, and a woman who buys a turkey for a set price often pays for more than she is really getting.

THE LADIES OF THE Y.W.C.A. HAVE A BIG TIME TO THEMSELVES LAST NIGHT, MANY COSTUMES WORN

There was the sound of revelry at the Y.W.C.A. last night.

The occasion—The annual Hallowe'en party.

The fun—furious.

The fortunes told—wonderful.

The dresses—Some wore pants some wore skirts, all wore masks. All were bewitching.

Last night at the Y.W.C.A. there was a splendid evening of fun. There were no men there and this was the only thing that marred what would otherwise have been a perfect evening. However there were those who dressed as men and looked like men, for they wore false faces. Some of the apparatus on the ladies became loosened once in a while but as man was not present there was no confusion and repairs were speedily made. The whole thing was over by eleven o'clock, and to-day there is nothing but pleasant memories.

BASKET SOCIAL AT COLDSPRINGS LAST NIGHT

A basket social under the auspices of the Young Men's Athletic Club of Coldsprings, held last night in their Sunday School room was a decided success. Over one hundred and fifty were present.

Several selections by Wilson's Orchestra enlivened things during the evening.

Mr. Thomas Wilson was chairman.

A drama presented by ten members of the club, entitled "Out of the Streets" was exceedingly well given, and the parts were ably filled by the different performers. The play took over an hour to be performed.

A recitation by Miss Gladys Rose was well given and encored.

Mr. A. Holden gave an instrumental selection.

After the programme the basket part of the social was introduced.

Every gentleman buying a basket from a lady was supposed to have supper with her. This was of course in no way an unpleasant task.

The evening closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

WITNESSES TELL OF PECULIAR ACTIONS OF JAMES GORHAM

Principal of School Where Prisoner Attended Did Not Consider Him a Safe Person to be About---Sisters Deny Statements of Crown Witness That Their Brother Made Threats to Him or the Mother.

Witnesses tell of peculiar

With the conclusion of the examination of the Crown witnesses against James Gorham, yesterday afternoon, the defence called three witnesses before adjournment was made at six o'clock.

Two sisters of the prisoner swore that he had not threatened to shoot Capt. White, neither did he make threats on his mother's life, as stated by that witness. Both told of the queer actions od the young man which extended over a period of some years.

Sister Mary St. Smith, who had dealings with Gorham during his early school days, testified to his having been, in her opinion, mentally defective.

In answer to the questions of his Lordship, "if she considered him a safe person to be about," witness replied, "No."

The evidence of P .C. Newhall was omitted in yesterday's report. That officer told of Gorham's doings at the bridge. He wanted P. C. Meharry to show himself that he might get a shot at him

When court resumed Patrick Gorham was further cross-examined by Mr O'Connell.

Witness said that on his first ascent of the bridge to reason with his brother, he seemed as if in a dream On the second occasion prisoner was asked if his mother was dead and was told not

On the third ascent he seemed to be alright again and said that he would go down if the crowd left the bridge.

Then he came down part of the way but took up his position again when P. C. Newhall approached, and said that he must give up the weapons.

Later, however, he came down and was driven away in a cab.

How long did your brother go to school? Six years.

Read and write? Yes.

What book was he in? Third book.

Quite a good scholar? Yes.

In consequence of this pain of his, he would be disagreeable? Yes.

MARTIN GORHAM.

The fifteen year old brother of the prisoner said that when his brother came home, the mother objected to him taking two axes and a saw into the house. He answered that "he would fix things and went out and commenced pulling down the pig pen. Later he went to the house and upstairs, coming down again with a pistol.

In telling of the shooting, witness said that his brother was not on a line with the police officer.

When he entered the house he asked his mother to forgive him. She replied "Yes," then he made the statement that he didn't mean to shoot any person

Witness was asked by his brother to get his rifle and before leaving prisoner shook hands with all and said he was going away

To Mr O'Connell witness said that at 5:30 o'clock his brother looked to be drunk When coming up the road to the house he was staggering.

Have you noticed anything peculiar about your brother?

Yes, he wouldn't eat his meals with us very often.

Anything else?

Yes, if told to cut some wood he would start talking as if to the wood.

Anything else peculiar?

Yes, if there was anything wrong with him he didn't want to talk to anybody.

Ever see him frothing at the mouth?

Yes, on the day when he pulled down the pig pen.

Witness said his mother had told him to go to his father and tell him that Jimmie was crazy and that he had a revolver and might shoot somebody.

This witness was the last called for the prosecution.

THE DEFENCE.

Annie Gorham, sister of the prisoner, was at home when the shooting took place. At 6.15 her brother was at home. He was throwing up his hands and screaming. He acted as a person who was crazy. When the boards of the pigpen refused to yield to him, he talked at them. When he demolished the pen he caught one of the pigs and moved as if to cut its throat with a knife Then he went into the house and broke the furniture. Later and after he had gone up stairs he threw some clothes at Capt. White and then picked up a cup and shot at it. He was a perfect shot.

Capt. White's statement that the prisoner said he would blow his (White's) brains out was not true.

When he went outside his mother asked him to be good and he replied that he would if she gave him enough money to get out of town.

When P C. Meharry arrived she told him to be careful as her brother had a loaded pistol. He said alright and went towards the fence.

After the shooting her brother came into the house, and said "Annie did I shoot mother." When told that he did he said, "My God, I did not mean to shoot anybody. He brought in a cat with him. Witness said she thought her brother was clean crazy. He was frothing at the mouth and his eyes expressionless.

Her brother went out and returned when Dr. McNulty was present. He said, "How do you do Father." Witness had noticed he acted peculiarly for years. He talked to the wood and to the cat. About 14 years ago he fell off the top of some trees and was unconscious for almost a full day. He didn't go to school very much and there seemed to be a dullness about his mind.

Generally he was bad tempered. He had complained about his tongue being sore and always had a fixed stare in his eyes.

As to his meals he would not dine with the family.

A number of years ago he ate a ball of blue. Last winter Dr. McGrath was called to treat him for a fit. At that time he rolled on the floor and said he saw the devil.

Another night he started to walk through a window believing it to be a floor. He was drunk that time and had to be watched all night.

To Mr Meredith witness said she did not know of her brother carrying arms before.

Asked if she had ever seen her brother's tongue witness replied yes.

How much asked the prosecutor. Witness demonstrated with her own tongue and a titter ran through the court room.

Take two Witnesses fell of peculiar

Witness several times lost her composure as Mr. Meredith went on with his cross-examination.

MAMIE GORHAM.

Mamie Gorham, eighteen years past, and sister of the prisoner, said she arrived home at 6.05 and her brother followed three or four minutes later. He was staggering. Witness told of the conduct of the prisoner in practically the same manner as the previous witness.

DID NOT THREATEN.

Her brother did not threaten to blow out Capt. White's brains, neither did her mother reprimand him. He did not threaten to shoot anybody when outside the house.

Witness corroborated the evidence of her sister as to prisoner bringing in a cat asking the forgiveness of the mother, and alluding to Dr. McNulty as Father.

On cross-examination witness said she didn't think her brother was going to shoot P. C. Meharry, but was afraid that someone in the house would get shot.

As to the position of the two men she judged that they were out of line between six and eight feet. At dinner time on the day of the shooting her brother was quite rational

MENTALLY DEFECTIVE.

Sister Mary St. Smith, recognized the prisoner as a pupil at the Lake street school, some three years ago when she was principal.

His teacher had occasion to send him to her on account of his conduct. Her observations of the prisoner then resulted in the opinion that he was mentally defective. He was heedless and punishment or advice were of no avail. His progress in his studies was only slight.

Once while crossing the C. P. R. bridge, he acted in a reckless manner at the approach of a train.

Do you think he is not fit to be at liberty, do you sister?" asked Chancellor Boyd.

"Yes," replied witness.

To the prosecutor witness said that Gorham smiled when told of the death of his mother, by her at the jail.

This concluded the afternoon session.

CASE GOES TO THE JURY

At the Gorham trial this morning further evidence was introduced by the defence with the object of showing that Gorham was not a responsible person.

A DULL PUPIL.

Sister St. Davis, who had taught James Gorham at school, corroborated the evidence of Sister St. Edward.

From his actions she decided that he was mentally deficient. There appeared to be no serious side to his nature.

To the prosecutor she said that he had no remembrance of his being promoted from the primary class.

"He knew what was right or wrong?"

He didn't act that way. He had no strength of character.

BROTHER THINKS PRISONER PECULIAR.

John Gorham, the eldest brother of James Gorham, and eight years older, had always been at home. One thing he had noticed was that when his brother did anything wrong, his brother didn't appear to realize what he had done. Some nights he was restless. During the last six months before the shooting he complained of his tongue.

On two occasions a year ago this summer, while at work at a boathouse with his brother, a rafter would not go up straight and he got very angry and talked to it.

Witness could remember on six occasions of prisoner having frothed at the mouth twice. He was not under the influence of liquor. On the night of Dr. McGrath calling the witness saw his brother lying on a sofa. He seemed to be "all in."

Punishment, instead of subduing him, would irritate him.

During the last three years he had supper with the family only four times. The longest he worked at any place, so far as he could remember, was one month.

To Mr. Meredith the witness said that to a certain extent his brother would talk intelligently and knew right from wrong.

"Why didn't you get a doctor if there was anything wrong?"

"My mother told me that she would attend to him when he was home and the doctor could be secured."

"Had he ever acted before as on the night of the murder?"

"Once, when he was under the influence of liquor to a certain extent. He kicked the door open, and I asked him why he couldn't behave himself. When he came into the house he started to break the furniture. That same evening he tried to walk through a window."

"Do you think it safe for him to be left at home?" asked His Lordship.

"No," was the reply.

GORDON KELLER.

Gordon Keller told of a trip to Lindsay with Gorham three days before the shooting. The prisoner was drinking heavily of whiskey and gin.

On the following morning, after coming back to this city, they met P.C. Newhall.

On the 19th prisoner was in police court and was dismissed.

On the 20th the witness saw Gorham at his home about twelve o'clock, and again at 1.30. He was then cutting wood, and, with Mr. Tobin, was drinking ale. When witness left Gorham appeared to be pretty drunk.

SET FIRE TO A CAT.

The witness knew Gorham to be cruel to animals. One day he saturated a cat with oil and ignited the oil with a match.

The prisoner had mentioned about his tongue being sore, but witness thought this was from smoking. He had seen him froth at the mouth, and this was when he was very angry or drinking. He was a good shot.

To Mr. Meredith—

"Were you and your brother ever charged with the prisoner at the police court?"

"Not that I can remember."

"You were an associate of the prisoner?"

"Yes."

"What did you do in Lindsay?"

"We went to see about a gasoline engine and were drinking. Gorham paid for the drinks as he had received his money for working on the C.P.R. fifteen or twenty days."

"Didn't he talk sensibly?"

"Yes, when he wasn't drinking."

"He knew what was right and wrong when he wasn't drinking?"

"I think so. If anybody bothered him when he was drunk he would get angry and froth at the mouth."

"Did he tell you the soreness of his tongue was from smoking?"

"No."

"He smoked a good deal?"

"Yes."

"It didn't seem to bother his tongue?"

"No."

A ROUGH ROLLER SKATER.

Leo Dineen told of the conduct of Gorham at the George street roller rink. When the music started Gorham would race around, knocking people down, and would yell.

Once when he was ejected from the rink the prisoner got into a fury.

To Mr. Meredith—

"Many others did the same thing?"

"Yes, but not as much as he did."

"You swear he deliberately knocked people down?"

"Yes."

"They might have been playing with him?"

"Yes."

PATRICK LAVERY.

Lavery had worked with Gorham at Matthews' packing house. On one occasion, with other boys, Gorham was playing tag on the roof of the building. He tripped and fell on his shoulder, dropping about fifteen feet. Lavery wasn't sure that he fell on his head.

"Was he unconscious?"

"Yes."

HAD A FIT.

Thomas McGinty, the next witness, said he knew Gorham about a year and had worked with him in McDonald's lumber camp. On one occasion he took a fit or a spell and fell to the floor.

"Was he unconscious?"

"Yes, for three or four minutes."

"Frothing at the mouth?"

"I didn't notice."

"What did you do?"

"Gave him some water."

"Did he come to?"

"Yes."

"How was he after that?"

"He got up and said 'what in the world happened to me?' "

"Was he working under you?

"Yes."

"Did you notice anything about his actions?"

"Sometimes he was queer and didn't act quite right."

"What did you notice queer about him?"

"Sometimes he would work and sometimes he didn't care whether he worked or not. He would curse and swear?"

"You didn't know the cause of this faint?" asked the prosecutor.

"No."

"That was on a Sunday and he worked on Monday?"

"Yes."

Alfred J. Cameron, surveyor, was called, and testified to the correctness of a plan of the Gorham and Peck property.

License Inspector Stewart testified that Gorham was not on the blacklist.

Dr. Yeates, of Belleville, was called to give testimony as to the carrying powers of the pistol used by Graham.

EPILEPTIC INSANITY.

Dr. St. Charles said he had spent eight years in asylum service.

"Are you familiar with epilepsy?"

"Yes."

"Have you examined prisoner?"

"Yes."

"For what purpose?"

"To determine his mental condition."

"That he is suffering from epileptic insanity."

"Assuming that he pointed the revolver at Meharry, do you think he knew the nature of what he was doing?"

"No."

Witness said it was an act of this kind that draws attention to an epileptic.

"At times he would talk sensible?"

"Yes."

"The average person would not notice anything wrong?"

"No."

NO EVIDENCE OF EPILEPSY.

Dr. Bruce Smith, Inspector of Prisons and Public Charities, of thirty-one years' experience.

"Did you make examination of the prisoner?"

"Yes, on the 17th day of June."

"In the Peterborough jail?"

"Yes."

SPORTING NEWS

NEGRO A NOVICE AT RACING GAME

Sheepshead Bay, New York, Oct. 26—In a farcical automobile race here today Barney Oldfield defeated Jack Johnson two straight five-mile heats and won the contest alleged to be for $5,000 a side.

The first heat was a runaway, but in the second Oldfield permitted Jack to keep close to him, to make the affair appear more like a race. Something was evidently the matter with Jack's equilibrator for he was never in it for a moment. He promised either to win or run through the fence, but he did neither. Six thousand spectators tried to grow enthusiastic over the race, but they, too, failed.

Oldfield won the first heat in 4.44 and was about a quarter of a mile ahead at the finish. He took 5 mins. and 4 seconds for the second heat and allowed Johnson to finish within 50 yards of him. In an exhibition Oldfield went a mile in 4 4 2-5.

CASE GOES TO THE JURY

"What happened?"

"I subjected prisoner to usual examination, avoiding any reference to crime. I found prisoner able to give very intelligent answers as to his parentage, his early life, his habits and everyday occurrences."

"Did you see him at any other time?"

"Yes, twice. On Monday and Tuesday of current week. His condition was very much the same. He has given no evidence of epilepsy since 17 of June. His answers were intelligent but they lead to the conclusion that prisoner has been for years morally defective, and to such an extent that he belongs to the degenerate class."

"Is he sane or insane?"

"The prisoner is not insane. I think Dr. St. Charles is misled, and I can readily understand why."

"What do you say of his tongue?"

"He had a smoker's tongue."

"What do you say to his being an epileptic?"

"He is not one."

To Mr. O'Connell witness said that he would not say that Dr. St. Charles' opinions were not right, but he had found no evidence to substantiate them.

Witness would not say that a man suffering from an epileptic fit would not be responsible for his actions.

Dr. Edward Ryan, superintendent of Rockwood hospital at Kingston, who made examinations with Dr. Bruce Smith, said the prisoner had been defective from childhood.

He was defective, degenerate and suffered from alcoholism.

"Does he know right from wrong?"

"Yes."

To Mr. O'Connell—

"Assuming that he was an epileptic, would he have any remembrance of the shooting?

"No."

"The prisoner could not prevent himself from doing what he did on account of his condition?"

"No."

This closed the evidence and the prosecuting and defending counsels decided to rest the case with his Lordship and not address the jury.

At 12.40 Chancellor Boyd charged the jury. He pointed out that the charge against the prisoner was a most serious one—murder, and one of peculiar gravity.

"If you believe the Crown witnesses," said his Lordship, "it is nothing but a case of murder."

All the points in the Crown evidence indicated a deliberate intention on the part of the young man to kill.

For the defence, the witnesses say that Gorham did not aim at Meharry. That doesn't exclude the prisoner from responsibility, but in believing the evidence of the defense you could reduce the charge to manslaughter.

It must be either murder or manslaughter.

His Lordship took up the evidence brought out by the medical men and pointed out to the jury how they were to guide themselves in this respect.

His Lordship concluded at one o'clock and court adjourned with the understanding that the jury would deliberate after luncheon.

Housework Made Easy.

It is clearly every woman's duty when the days of summer approach to lighten her domestic labors as much as possible in order that she may enjoy the open air pleasures and so store up strength and health for the comparatively shut in winter days.

One piece house dresses of calico or lawn are nice because they are cool, easily laundered, do not fade and are always becoming.

To keep the house cool and clean in the easiest way we should have bare floors, small rugs which are easily shaken and simple muslin draperies. Many are using double sash curtains at windows for summer, and the effect is quite pretty. The lower curtains are fastened to the sash and so raise with the window, leaving the entire space for air to enter.

Heavyweight sheeting with wide hems all around make dainty bedspreads. They are light and easily laundered.

The kitchen floor may be scrubbed with an ordinary scrub brush fastened to a mop stick, so that one need not get down on hands and knees. Surplus water can be taken up with cloth in another mop stick.

A wise housekeeper keeps a paper over the catch-all pan under the burners of the gas stove and changes it often. That's easier than scouring the pan.

On the sill she keeps a small pot of growing parsley, and she always has green on hand to favor soup and to decorate the meat platter.

General French as a Boy.

General Sir John French has left Canada after an almost end-to-end inspection of her soldiers. But one bet he overlooked, and it was a good bet too. In the route of his march the headquarters staff at Ottawa forgot to mark a stop-over at any of the camps in the Province of Quebec. Montreal officers are somewhat mystified at this apparent neglect and, during the day or two that he remained in the city, before sailing for home, several diplomatic attempts were made to find out from the general himself what reasons were given for not allotting him sufficient time to look over the cavalry at Farnham and the infantry at Three Rivers and Levis.

"That's a conundrum," replied the general laughingly, when the question was put to him point blank. "And, speaking of conundrums," continued he, "I never could get that word straight, much less frame up an answer to one. Cucumbers, cumberers and conundrums all looked alike to me when I was a boy.

"As you probably know I am the only boy in a family of seven, the others, naturally, being girls. At rather an early age I took it upon myself as 'the only man of the family' to conduct family prayers when my father was away. My mother was very pleased at first, but hastily withdrew her consent when she heard my first effort. I said, 'Oh, Lord, cut us not off as cucumbers of the ground'."

Johnny meant cumberers.

Caring For Young Pigs.

The care of young pigs is the foundation of the fatting of the market animal. Wean the pigs at eight weeks, after they have been trained to eat a ration of shelled corn and slop in sufficient amounts to avoid a check on their growth when removed from the dam. Mark the pigs of each litter by the ear notch system and discard the runts or separate them for special care. Provide dry sleeping pens and ample runs.

DECLINED WITH THANKS

FAMOUS BRITONS WHO HAVE REFUSED TO ACCEPT TITLES.

Chamberlain Was Unwilling to Lose Himself Under a Strange Name and It Was Only After Years That Lord Morley Took His Peerage—Radicals Have Several Times Turned Down Honors—Heaton Said "No."

Most men are only too pleased to receive some honor as a mark of recognition of either political services to their party or in the wider sphere of usefulness to their fellows, says M.A.P. It, therefore, requires considerable strength of character to refuse such an honor from motives of modesty or owing to an unswerving adherence to principles. Yet many a famous man has refused recognition by his sovereign and a grateful country for these reasons, some of them more than once.

That great statesman whose failing health has kept him out of the turmoil of politics for so many months has refused to lose his identity under a little known title. Thus, when he went to Washington in 1887 on a mission concerning the fishery troubles between Canada and the United States, Lord Salisbury offered him a peerage on his return, but Mr. Chamberlain refused it, preferring to remain in the Commons where he had won so many triumphs.

It is well known that it was only with the utmost reluctance that Lord Morley was prevailed upon to accept a title. He had refused one several times, but when it at last came to the choice of remaining in the Lower House as a private member or retaining his post as Secretary for India in the calm of the Lords, he finally decided to accept the honor.

When the present Lord James of Hereford became Solicitor-General he refused for some time to accept the knighthood that goes with the post, but Mr. Gladstone insisted that tradition should be respected.

More than one sturdy Radical who had no belief in the peerage, has refused promotion to the Gilded Chamber, or declined lesser honors. Two years ago it was expected that the Birthday Honors List would include the name of Mr. Arthur Acland, who entered Mr. Gladstone's last Cabinet in 1892 at the same time as Mr. Asquith, but it was understood that he had declined the proffered peerage. Then, when that veteran statesman, Mr. Henry Chaplin, left the Conservative Government ten years ago, he did not see his way to accept the peerage that Lord Salisbury was anxious to bestow upon him.

Knighthoods have been declined on the same grounds, while others have preferred to retain the simple title of plain "Mr." In two cases knighthoods have been refused after The Gazette has contained an announcement of their bestowal. Mr. Henniker-Heaton, the famous advocate of universal penny postage, who is retiring from the representation of Canterbury at the end of the present Parliament, declined knighthood on several occasions. When Mr. Balfour resigned office in 1905 he recommended Mr. Henniker-Heaton for the K.C.M.G., in recognition of his work in binding the Empire closed by means of cheap postage. The member for Canterbury was then on one of his visits to Australia, and when he heard of the announcement he at once wrote to decline it.

The same thing happened to Dr. J. W. Hackett, a prominent politician and newspaper owner of Western Australia. He was astonished to receive a cable from London announcing his knighthood, but he had no desire for the honor and promptly refused it.

At the time of the Imperial Press Conference last year at least two of the colonial representatives did not see their way to accept a knighthood that had been offered. But they do not set much store by titles in the colonies, and many statesmen belonging to the dominions beyond the seas have preferred to remain undistinguished above their fellows. That noted Imperialist, Mr. Deakin, has consistently refused every honor, even a Privy Councillorship having no attractions for him. At the last Colonial Conference those visiting Premiers who did not already belong to the Privy Council were sworn in as members, but the Australian Premier again declined as he had already done in 1900.

It is only within comparatively recent years that the arts of literature and the drama have been recognized as deserving honor as much as painting and the sciences. Mr. J. M. Barrie, who is equally successful as novelist or dramatist, is of such a shy and retiring nature that no one was very surprised when he refused a knighthood offered him twelve months ago.

Very few men have refused an honor in so graceful a manner as did Major Karri Davies, that sturdy Outlander who was a thorn in the side of the late President Kruger, and who led the South African Light Horse so gallantly during the Boer War. He was offered the Commandership of the Bath, but he wrote expressing his thanks and asking that he "might be permitted to serve His Majesty without any reward, as that was reward enough."

There are unregenerate people who look on the Victorian Order as a sort of negative honor to be without which is a greater distinction than to possess it, but it was not for this reason that M. Gunnar Knudsen refused the Grand Cross when the late King Edward was visiting Scandinavia two years ago. He asked leave to decline it as he disagreed with orders in general, an explanation that was published at the time, because some thought it odd that while the Premiers of Denmark and Sweden were created K.C.V.O. the Prime Minister of Norway was left out.

The King's Castles.

There are four residences which are always considered as being in the personal occupation of the King, namely, Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, Marlborough House, and Frogmore. It is said that in future the occupants of the last-named will be Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck.

The new Lethbridge Hospital recently opened, was left a $40,000 endowment by the late Sir A. T. Galt.

FIRST NEWS OF MUTINY.

British Were Warned by W. Brendish, a Telegraph Operator.

The following story of the Indian mutiny is told in The London Daily Mail:

There has just been retired from the service of the Postmaster-General a servant who may be said to have practically saved India to this country. This is W. Brendish, telegraph master, the sole survivor of those who were present in Delhi in May, 1857, and who, in the courageous discharge of his duty on the memorable 11th of that month, rendered invaluable service to the state.

It was Mr. Brendish who, without orders and acting on his own responsibility, despatched the telegram which warned the authorities of the Punjab of the outbreak of the terrible mutiny. "The sepoys have come in from Meerut and are burning everything," he wired. "Mr. Todd is dead, and, we hear, several Europeans. We must shut up."

The fateful news was sent to Lahore by Mr. Brendish, who was then but a youth, while the mutineers were pursuing their work of slaughter in every part of the cantonment. It has been acknowledged that this presence of mind on the part of young Brendish saved India. The story is told by Mr. Brendish in a modest narrative of his services on that eventful day. The telegraph staff at Delhi, he says, consisted of Mr. Todd, assistant in local charge, and two young signallers, Brendish and Pilkington.

On Sunday, the 10th of that month, in the forenoon, the signallers at the Meerut office wired that eighty men of the 3rd Cavalry had been confined, and were to be blown away from guns for refusing to bite the Enfield cartridges only recently issued to the troops. No further news was received, and at 4 p.m. the line with Meerut was found to be interrupted. On the following morning Mr. Todd took a dak and started for Meerut, to ascertain at what point along the road the break had occurred. He got no further than the bridge of boats over Jumna, for he there met the mutinous 3rd Cavalry, who killed him.

The signallers remained at their post in the telegraph office, which was fortunately outside the city walls, about one mile distant from the Kashmir Gate and from the Flagstaff Tower. They saw a regiment of native infantry with two guns pass along the road from cantonments towards the city, and learned afterwards that they had joined the 3rd Cavalry. Later on, heavy firing was heard in the city, and Brendish, who was at the signalling instruments, kept on wiring to Lahore all news that was brought to him.

At noon he went out on the road to see what was going on, and presently there passed a wounded British officer, driving from the city, who called out: "For God's sake get inside and close the doors.

"We did so," says Mr. Brendish, "but even then Pilkington and I did not feel we were secure, as we were but two lads encumbered with the wife and child of Mr. Todd, whose sad end was not yet known to us, and surrounded by servants who perhaps were prepared to take our lives, but who were doubtful as to the termination of events."

For two hours more the boys held on, listening to the firing within the walls. At 2 p.m. Brendish went to the Umballa instrument for the last time and signalled to the hands at the other end of the wire the historic message, ending "and now I am off," the meaning being that they were leaving the office.

He and his comrade had persuaded Mrs. Todd to accompany them to the Flagstaff Tower, where a number of Europeans had already congregated, as it was the only possible place of safety. They remained there until sunset, and witnessed the blowing up of the magazine. That night the refugees fled, and the two signallers eventually got safe to Umballa.

A Latham Incident.

An Italian paper has a good story of Latham, whose accomplishments include prowess with the gun. The aviator made a long stay in Abyssinia, and indulged in big-game shooting. One day he brought down two elephants, male and female. The law of Abyssinia required Latham to pay for his authorization two of the tusks. He sent those of the female, the smaller ones. The authorities demanded the larger, but the aviator flatly refused. Then began Fort Chabrol anew. Latham barricaded himself in his house, which the soldiery surrounded. He was well armed and well provisioned. The siege lasted a month, and it was brought to an end by Menelik learning of the incident. The Negus ordered the forces to retire, and returned the trophies to the heir-at-law of Nimrod and Icarus.

Base Canard.

Spring chickens were scarce, and they had killed the ancient gamecock for Sunday dinner.

"Ah," said the old farmer reverently, "this certainly was a game chicken. In fact, he was the bravest in two states."

The star boarder glared at the carcass of the deceased fowl.

"If I only had an axe," he mumbled.

"And what would you do with an axe?" demanded the farmer curiously.

"I'd assassinate the man that started that expression, 'The bravest are the tenderest'."

He Was Engaged.

An Irishman being prosecuted for a breach of the peace, a witness for the accused was told by the magistrate that he might have stopped the fight.

"Indade, no, your honor," said Paddy. "I was too busy fighting a friend of my own."

A Double Purpose.

"They say that melody will make cows yield more milk."

"Then the installation of a sextette of operatic milkmaids might increase the dairy output and also keep the boys on the farm."

Wagakabi, a Japanese, was acquitted of murder at Vancouver, a plea of self-defence being found legitimate.

like illness, it is often necessary quickly to raise the temperature of a room. For instance, in those hours between midnight and dawn, when the day temperature has been allowed to drop, if you are called upon to get up, the room is chilly and cold. NOTES FROM CAVAN

Typhoid Epidemic—The Road Roller—Personals A New House

Special to the Review.

Cavan, Oct. 24.—A special meeting the Young People's Anglican Society was held last Wednesday evening, at the club rooms, Ida. After the principal business on hand had been dealt with, the following election of officers took place:—Miss Elgin Lough, President; Miss S. McNeil, Vice-President; Mr. Lou Winslow, Secretary; Mr. Alf. Morton, Treasurer.

ANNIVERSARY.

Anniversary services were held at the Ebenezer Methodist church last Sunday. The Rev. Mr. Adams, of Newtonville, a former pastor of the circuit, addressed the congregation both morning and evening. Special music was provided by the choir.

Master Leslie Pritchard, who has been seriously ill for the past two weeks, is improving a little, although he is not able to walk around as yet.

Miss Kennedy, of the 10th Line, left on Saturday for a two weeks' visit at the home of her niece, Mrs. Wm. Kennedy, of Barrie.

PERSONALS.

Mrs. Angus Kennedy, of Burke's Falls, who has been visiting friends in this vicinity for the past week or so returned home on Saturday.

Mrs Wallace Martin, who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Kerr, of Lorneville, returned home last week.

THE ROAD ROLLER.

Has anybody seen the new road roller recently purchased by the Cavan Council. The formidable looking monster was observed resting quietly under the shade of a wild gooseberry bush on the middle road one day last week. Just what redeeming influence the above instrument of torture will have on the surface of our public roads is pretty hard to conjecture. But, leaving all jokes aside, we would suggest that the Council find some means of anchoring it to an elm tree, or some other substantial structure over night, as in its present abandoned condition it offers an irresistible temptation to the various junk dealers which travel over our highways.

NEW HOUSE.

Mr. Matt Hutchinson has erected a new $3,000 house on the farm recently purchased from his brother, Mr. Lou Hutchinson. The property, which is commonly known as the "Ranch," will be turned into such by its present owner, who intends to devote his attention chiefly to cattle raising.

Thanks In Advance

So much interest was displayed in the "Where they Are and what they are Doing" column which appeared in the Review on Saturday, that it has been decided to make this column a feature of our Saturday issues. If any of your family or friends have left the city, write or telephone us, giving us their present occupation and address and any little incident that may be of interest in connection with them, and we will be glad to use it in connection with the other items collected by our reporters.

Halifax Canadian Club will build a memorial tower at the cost of about $24,000.

Life Insurance

Many a father is going to mortgage the house in town or the farm in the country this Fall that the son may go to college. Possibly that "rainy day" fund is going to be drawn upon for this purpose. I have enough faith in Canadian youth to believe in such investments. The son intends to pay back to his father every cent just as soon as he gets into business for himself. With but an exception now and then, he will—IF HE LIVES. It is the latter point I want to emphasize. Life is not a certainty. A glance at any college catalogue will show the asterisk in the list of students and the word "deceased" at the bottom of the page. Frequently there is added to the loss or the son the LOSS OF THE COST OF HIS EDUCATION. The latter may mean the loss of the home. One of the legitimate uses of life insurance, it seems to me, is to take care of just such cases. The cost of life insurance for the son is very slight, because he is young and a good risk. It adds but little to the financial burden. In return it gives full protection to the parent, and in later years—after college debts are paid—it safeguards the home which the son sets up for himself. No son who can get insurance has the right to mortgage his father's or his mother's future happiness when there is such a good way to avoid it. One word more, young man. Be sure that your insurance is in a well established, responsible company.

Someone has said, "The true value of a life assurance policy must be gauged by the security of the protection given; if it proves to be a good investment, all the better; when both are shown, there is nothing on earth to equal it."

The security of the protection afforded by the SUN LIFE OF CANADA needs no comment, and the profits paid—let the actual results tell their own forceful story.

BLUFFED AND WON

A Dramatic Incident of the Fateful Hundred Days.

ONE OF NAPOLEON'S COUPS.

The Way of the Great Military Genius Overcame the First Opposition He Encountered on the March to Paris After His Return From Elba.

A striking incident in the career of Napoleon is described by Camille Cosuaud in his book, "Le Retour de l'Isle d'Elbe" ("The Return From the Island of Elba"). It describes how he met the first opposition offered to his march to Paris after his escape from Elba:

"Meanwhile Napoleon had traveled by the Alps to Dauphine, advancing into the interior of the country. Having received information on Sunday, the 4th of March, the prefect of l'Isere had immediately, in concert with the military authority, taken measures to deal with the startling situation. A detachment composed of a battalion of the Fifth regiment of the line and two companies of engineers was dispatched to prevent the further advance of the emperor.

"The meeting between this detachment and the little troop from the isle of Elba took place on the 7th of March near Vizille, but not before the peasants had had time to hasten to inform Napoleon of the antagonistic disposition of the officers commanding the troops which had been sent from Grenoble. In order to avoid the shedding of blood the emperor ordered Cambronne, who was accompanied by a small escort, to enter into treaty with the cocardes blanches (white cockades). Cambronne found the detachment ranged in order of battle. The commanding officer refused to enter into communication, and the soldiers remained silent and gloomy.

"Napoleon immediately took his share in the proceedings. He gave the order to his grenadiers to put their rifles under their arms, in order to give proof of their pacific dispositions. Then he advanced alone, while some of his friends cried to the soldiers of the line:

"'Friends, do not fire! There is the emperor, who wishes to speak to you.'

"Napoleon now found himself about thirty meters from the Grenoble detachment. He dismounted and, his arms crossed on his breast, remained standing in the middle of the road.

"'Soldiers of the Fifth,' he said in a loud tone—'soldiers of the Fifth, do you recognize me?'

"'Yes, yes!' they all replied.

"Then Napoleon, throwing open his gray cloak with a dramatic gesture and pointing to his breast with his hands, replied:

"'If there is one among you who wishes to kill his general, his emperor, he can do it. Here I am!'

"The response was unanimous, sublime: 'Long live the emperor!' Long live the emperor!'

"Breaking the ranks, their shakos at the ends of the swords or on the bayonets, the soldiers of the Fifth, to whom were joined the engineers, ran toward Napoleon, surrounded him, embraced him, kissed his hands, called him their preserver, their father, their general, their emperor. Finally the two detachments mingled together and became consolidated. Napoleon then had 2,000 men with whom to march on to Grenoble.

"They took the road, and it was a triumphal march. The people of the district came to meet the column, acclaiming Napoleon as the liberator of the nation and as the living incarnation of the revolution.

"The peasants wept with joy. At this sight the emperor, turning toward his officers, Drouot and Bertrand, said to them:

"'Everything is now in good order. Within ten days we shall be at the Tuileries!'"

Song of the Flame.

Fire can be made to sing. A writer says: "Take a lighted candle and blow gently against the flame. You will hear a peculiar fluttering sound. The fluttering sound is fire's first attempts at music. Instead of the unsteady breath of our lips let us employ the steady blast of a blowpipe. Instead of the pale and flickering light of a candle let us use the bright and ardent glare of a chemist's lamp. When you have a lamp and blowpipe you can make fire sing in earnest."

An Evident Success.

"So you have a position as stenographer. I hope you will succeed in making yourself indispensable to your employer."

"I think I have, auntie. We are to be married next month."—Pittsburg Post.

A WEIRD PROCESSION.

It Startled a Woman at Midnight In a Corean Mountain Pass.

The mountain north of Seoul is crossed by Pekin pass. We had overtaken the relay of chair coolies in the afternoon, but the journey had been long and trying on all, and the men, completely exhausted, swayed and reeled from one side of the path to the other under their heavy burden. I insisted that they should rest.

Grateful for an opportunity to rest my cramped limbs, I scrambled from the chair, then stood transfixed with fear and terror. Coming over the crest of the mountain were hundreds of torches and lanterns. Faintly from far away came strange wild voices, shouting and screaming. Louder, louder swelled the weird, fantastic noise, and drums, bells and gongs could be heard.

Turning to the men, I cried, "What is this?" and pointed to the strange thing now descending quickly toward us. The men in an excited way talked all together. I could see that it was something very unusual, and they seemed to be very much frightened. My Christian boy, Ke Tai, came to me to keep me from being alarmed. He carefully explained, but using many words I had never heard before. I listened more mystified than ever. Whether it were a mob or an uprising I did not know. He saw that I did not understand, and so at great length and with many more strange words not in my vocabulary he tried to enlighten my bewildered mind.

Nearer came the menacing mob, and above the clanging of brass the yelling and wailing arose in an unearthly roar. Alone at midnight on the dark mountain pass I stood and faced—what? I knew not, but certainly something terrifying and awful. My heart was filled with horror, and a strange, unutterable longing for my home land and mother swept over my heart. Had my time come to go? It might be indeed so.

With faltering voice I insisted again: "Can't you tell me in a few words what it is? I will not fear." This time the boy understood what it was I needed and made reply:

"Yes; it is a nobleman who has departed from this world."

It was a great funeral, nothing more. Midnight is the favorite time for the procession to the grave. The darkness will help to keep away the evil spirits, so they think. The bells and drums are used also to frighten away the malign demons by the noise. The loud wailing and piercing cries were from the large crowd of hired mourners.—Ellasue Wagner in The Christian Herald.

Compliments of Lady Spencer.

During his first Viceroyalty, from 1868 to 1874, Lord Spencer and his wife, who was then at the zenith of her beauty, were popular even in quarters where British officials are not as a rule looked upon with favor. The earl was nicknamed the Red Cross Knight and the Lady-Lieutenant came to be known as Spencer's Faerie Queene. Lord Spencer's last public appearance before leaving Ireland in 1874 was at a school where his wife was distributing prizes. The speaker called upon to return a vote of thanks to the distinguished guests concluded his remarks by saying to the Lord-Lieutenant: "We all hope to see you back again—you and the work of art that sits by your side." The remark was meant as a compliment to Lady Spencer, but might certainly have been more happily worded.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Literal.

"What is your last name, my boy?" asked the teacher of the new pupil, a frightened looking youngster of some half dozen years.

"Tommy."

"Tommy what?"

"Tommy Tompkins."

"Then Tompkins is your last name," turning to his record book.

"No, sir," came the reply with the air of one accustomed to render literalness to inquiring elders. "I don't think so, sir. Tompkins was my name already when I was born, and aunty says they didn't give me the other for a whole month afterward."

It Wouldn't Stretch.

The assessor was doing the very best he could, but the farmer was shrewd and wary.

"How many acres of farming land have you?" he inquired wearily.

"'Bout twenty, I guess," said Reuben.

"Twenty! Why, it looks to me like nearer 120. Come, now, can't you increase that a little? There are surely more than twenty acres in that tract. Suppose you stretch that a little."

"Say, feller," said the farmer, "this ain't no rubber plantation."

Lord Mayor a Teetotaler.

Sir Thomas Vesy Strong, who was recently elected Lord Mayor of London without opposition, is a pronounced temperance advocate, and enjoys the distinction of being the first teetotaler to become chief magistrate of the metropolis. He was born in 1857, and in 1900 married Lillie, the eldest daughter of the late James Hortnoll. Sir Thomas was educated privately. In business he has been successful as the head of a paper supply firm. He was knighted while occupying the office of sheriff of the City of London. He is a director of the United Kingdom Temperance and General Provident Institution, and a Commander of the Order of Isabella the Catholic of Spain, and of the Order of Our Lady of Villa Vicosa, of Portugal. The mayor will figure prominently in the entertainments and ceremonies connected with the coronation of King George.

Gorham Indictment Was Not Properly Made Out—Names Weren't Written on Paper—New Trial May be Asked For

There is a possibility of the defence claiming a mistrial in case Gorham is convicted.

The statutes of Quebec and Manitoba say that the name of all Crown witnesses must be on the back of an indictment or the indictment shall be invalid, and the statutes of Ontario say that the names shall be on the indictment, but this is not further qualified.

The names of two grand jurors and one Crown witness were not on the Gorham indictment. Chancellor Boyd noticed this and Clerk of the Court Sherry was instructed to write in the names.

Crown Prosecutor Meredith says the judge has the power to rectify the matter and counsel for the defence refuse to discuss whether they will ask for a new trial in case of an unfavorable verdict.

GORHAM GUILTY MURDER

Strong Recommendation to Mercy —"Liquor the Cause" Said Foreman

"Guilty of murder, with a strong recommendation to mercy" was the verdict returned by the jury in the Gorham case this afternoon, at twenty minutes to four.

"How did you find as to his sanity," asked the Chancellor.

"We consider liquor was the cause of his act," said the foreman.

He stated in response to further questioning by the Court, that the jury thought the prisoner would have known the quality of the act if he had not been under the influence of liquor at the time.

His Lordship concurred with the jury in their finding and would communicate with the proper authorities concerning the case, and for that reason deferred sentence. He did not think Gorham a proper subject for capital punishment.

When the prisoner left the court room he was smiling, and waved his hand, saying 'Good-bye, fellows."

CONFLAGRATION AT VICTORIA, B.C., THAT WILL COST $1,500,000

Fire Was First Discovered in David Spencer's Departmental Store and Spread With a Rapidity That Once Threatened the Annihilation of Entire City.

Victoria, Oct. 28.—Victoria was on Wednesday night visited by the greatest conflagration in its history, which destroyed an entire block and at one time seemed to threaten annihilation of the city. The loss is variously estimated, being as high as $1,500,000 according to some estimates.

How the fire started is a mystery. It began in the departmental store of David Spencer, Ltd., about 11 p.m. The two night watchmen state that they went their rounds as usual at 10.30, but saw nothing wrong. They then went to the top floor to have their supper, but presently smelled smoke and saw smoke and flames along the east wall of the first and second storey. Some people going by on the streets turned in the alarm. So rapid was the spread of the fire that when the firemen arrived a few minutes later, the establishment was already a mass of flames.

A splendid fight was made by the brigade, which was assisted by a large number of volunteers from among the citizens who had gathered. A call for help was also sent to the Work Point barracks, and the gunners and engineers at once responded. Some of them were called off to assist in keeping back the crowds, while others assisted the firemen. Others also were posted among the neighboring roofs, where they did good work in putting out the sparks, which had fallen everywhere.

The new high water pressure plant was also called into use for the first time and proved of very great assistance. At times it looked as though a large portion of the city was doomed, but utimately the fire was confined within the city square in which is started. By three o'clock yesterday morning the flames were under control, but the immense number of people which had assembled stood around until daylight.

From the David Spencer store the blaze spread across to Five Sisters block, an office building with stores below. This place was ablaze by midnight. H. Young & Co.'s dry goods store was the next to catch, then the adjoining offices and the Royal Bank buildings across the street were also for a time in considerable danger. The Driard Hotel on Broad street presents a rather unkempt appearance to-day, with all of the plate glass front smashed, but otherwise it is not seriously damaged.

The Times' newspaper, which was surrounded on three sides by the David Spencer block, escaped the flames, but the damage which it has suffered from water is very considerable. The newspaper machinery has been rendered temporarily useless, and The Times is being got out in the office of The Colonist.

No deaths occurred in the fire, but Mrs. Samuel Share, wife of the proprietor of the Bismarck Hotel, after arousing everybody in the building, collapsed from the excitement, and died in a few minutes. Fire Chief Davis was also hurt by a nail, which went through his boot, and he will be lame for some time.

Among the losses to be recorded are a large number of legal documents, belonging to the City of Victoria, which were in the office of Mason & Mann, formerly city solicitors. The plans of the new isolation hospital and the new court house in Vancouver were also destroyed. These were in the office of Thomas Hooper, architect, in the fire-swept block.

The Colonist newspaper building was for a time in danger, so much that the files and valuable business papers were removed to a place of safety. The building, however, was not damaged, but the linotype machines were put out of commission by the injury to the gas mains and electric connections, so that the paper yesterday morning had to be set for the most part by hand.

INAUGURAL MEETING OF NORMAL SCHOOL LITERARY

Decided to Continue School Colors of Green and Gold —The Programme.

The Literary Society of the Peterborough Normal School, at its inaugural meeting, and when all the officers were present, discussed school colours and decided to continue the green and gold.

The programme opened with a piano solo pleasingly rendered by Miss Payne This was followed by addresses from the newly elected officers.

Mr. Clubine, the president, spoke on "The Aims of the Society and the Benefits to be Derived Therefrom." Among other points well worth remembering he said that the Literary Society would encourage (1) the essay, (2) the debate, (3) the impromptu speech, (4) music, (5) general culture and pointed out some of the benefits derived from public speaking, showing that we gain thereby efficiency, power of expression, correctness and preciseness of language. We also gain confidence and over come the fear of hearing our own voices, a very great drawback to an otherwise successful speaker. It will be found a most valuable aid in speech and manners and in training the imagination. The president closed his remarks with an appeal to the Normal students to do all in their power to advance the culture of all with whom they came in contact.

Miss Gordon, the 1st Vice-President, spoke briefly on "The Benefits of the Social Side of the Society." After voicing the appreciation of the Normal students of the welcome given them by the people of Peterboro, she urged all the students to be free in their intercourse with one another and to be friendly with all.

The 2nd Vice-President, Miss Garrow, in a few well chosen words pointed out the many advantages to be derived from the debate. Miss Garrow has made arrangements to give a practical illustration of these benefits at an early date.

Mr. Winsor, the Secretary, brought out a number of good points on the value of a musical training to the public speaker. Quality of tone as well as volume are essentials sometimes lacking in the voice of a young speaker. These are obtained by a study of music. The training of the ear, the eye, the hand and the great culture value received from the study of music were all pointed out.

The treasurer, Mr. Bailey, gave a number of good reasons why the essay was an essential means of cultivation in language and thought training.

Miss Helen Allen was called upon for a vocal solo and sang "Jock O'Hazledean."

Mr. Chisholm congratulated the students on the success of the inaugural meeting, after which Miss Foster gave a humorous selection.

The meeting was brought to a close by singing the National Anthem.

"We have to have the support of the courts," said Sergeant Lyons, "and while there is no armed guard at the farm to keep the men from running away, they must be made to know that it means longer terms in prison if they do." The Pole, who would only have had to serve out his time till next August, working and living on the farm, will now have to go back to prison life for practically two years.

John MacDougal is at Selkirk conferring with the St. Peter's Reserve Indians on behalf of the Dominion Government in regard to the sale of their lands, which caused such a sensation in Parliament last session, when George Bradbury, M.P., told the story, is considered here as forecasting action by the Government.

Some time ago it was stated that unless reparation was made to these Indians the case would be taken into the courts. The initial steps towards this have now been taken, but procedure will be stayed if any indication is shown that justice will be done to them [illegible] of the Government.

THE JURY DISAGREED

The prisoners will not be admitted to bail, but will be sent up for a third trial.

Judge Mercier, who on Wednesday afternoon, charged strongly against the two brothers, censured the jury very strongly.

"The day that Parliament abolishes the death penalty for murder will be a regrettable day. There will be open license for murder and pillage of the worst kind," he declared.

In this movement it is asserted that the Socialists are aided secretly by the Republicans.

As a means of combatting the attack the Government has resorted to court-martial proceedings, and arrested several Socialists for delivering anti-military speeches. It is also considering the matter of asking the Parliament to prosecute several Socialists, arrested for delivering anti-military speeches, and Socialist Deputy Eglesias.

The question will come up in the House immediately after the opening of Parliament next month.

It is probable, therefore, that the Dominion of Canada will be represented at the coronation by twenty Liberal members of Parliament, twelve Conservatives, the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, and the Premiers of the various provinces.

One effect of this will be that the session about to open will be short. Prorogation may be expected not later than May.

Preliminary sessions were held yesterday with three crowded departmental meetings and an evening banquet. At the King Edward Hotel, the immigration-industrial section held the boards, while the state and provincial secretaries of North America held a session in St. James' Cathedral Parish House, and the railroad secretaries of the C.P.R., G.T.R., and Boston & Maine lines in the Cathedral itself. Some of the problems of the lightening and improving the foreign elements who are emigrating to Canada and the United States, were discussed at the conference of the industrial-immigration branch of the international Y.M.C.A, committee yesterday. Canada has been getting the better of the U. S. in the quality of immigrants from Europe, according to a statement issued to the delegates. It stated that "Canada received two Britishers for every one from continental Europe, whereas the U. S. received two Britishers for every 13 persons from continental Europe in 1909." Further, it stated that Canada admitted 1,345,298, or, one to every four of its population, while the U.S. admitted 8,368,386, or, one to every four of its population in the past ten years, and during that period 358,172 migrated to Canada from the U.S., while 237,924 went from this country across the border. Touching the percentage of illiterate immigrants, Canada seems again to have the advantage. One out of every ten coming to this country were illiterate, as against three out of ten on the other side.

Present at the conferences were 11 secretaries from Europe and the British Isles, seven from Canada and 15 from the U. S. There were also five workers from Europe and 84 from Canada and the United States. After all the phases of dealing with the foreign elements—their education and sociological improvement — had been discussed by secretaries from all centres, and classes of work where foreign labor is employed, the following resolutions were passed and sent on to the various international committee:

(1) That the committee approve the complete plan of the united work for emigrants and immigrants which includes rendering service at points of embarkation; en route in the steerage; at ports of landing; en route to destination; at destination.

(2) Commending the progress made, the committee urges special attention to the development of work on board ship as a possible field for efficient service for immigrants.

(3) Realizing the need of standardizing our work, we recommend that the world's committee give special attention to the preparation and distribution of all printed matter for this work in Europe.

(4) Noting with interest the request of the world's committee that attention be given to returning immigrants, who have been in touch with the association in North America, we recommend that the necessary inside consideration be given to the subject, with a view to relating these men to associations in their home countries.

A DEBATING SOCIETY

The Literary Society of the Peterborough High school just organized is a very worthy one. They will encourage debating. Many people who have keen brains lose all power of thought when they rise to speak. They get weak where the trousers bag—their thoughts flee. They say what they did not mean to say. They stumble, get red, flounder and sit down. It is from this evil that the Literary Society of Peterborough Normal school seeks to deliver its members.

By this they will save many an audience from pain in later years.

REV. MR. DAYFOOT'S STATEMENT

At the great Baptist convention now being held at Toronto, Rev. P. K. Dayfoot, M.A., speaking on "Problems of Church Life" had this to say; "The average prayer meeting is a sad affair. Personally I think I would rather attend a funeral. There is more real live interest in the average funeral than in the average prayer meeting, and there are certainly more people there. Three weakening figures in our prayer meetings are the incessant talker, the hobby rider and the debater. The devotional element is lacking."

However, true as Mr. Dayfoot is, the church socials continue to attract and suppers and church concerts draw a big house. Rev. Mr. Pogue last Sunday said that the prayer meeting was the thermometer of the church. Who said the church was freezing? How can a person be expected to go to prayer meeting when he or she has worked hard all day? The moving picture show, the theatre, oh! that's different. We have been to funerals and we have been to prayer meetings. Thinking the matter over carefully, we believe that Mr. Dayfoot is wrong, the odds are in favor of the prayer meeting. It's not quite as dead as a funeral. Who said hell was hot and the church was cold?

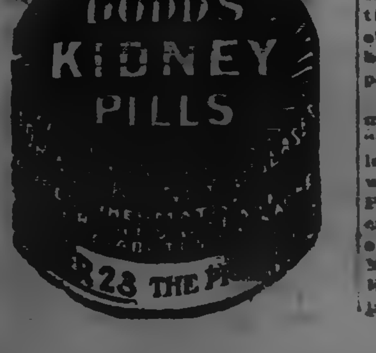
TERRIBLE! TERRIBLE!

Holy Smoke, the reverend editor of The Toronto Globe must have had a time in Mexico. He tells in his daily memoirs of a banquet and this is his description of how it wound up—

With that we were locked tight in each other's arms, clasped heart to heart, patted each other affectionately on the back, embraced at least three times before we let go, while the onlookers cheered at what one American editor called "Canada being officially hugged by Mexico." One of them said he would give fifty dollars in gold for a snap-shot of the performance. I had seen the thing done once before and so could play the part.

Did anybody dance on the tables? Was it all done on ginger ale? Were there any chandeliers smashed, or tables kicked over? It really looks as if there would be more than higher criticism discussed at the next meeting of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.—Ottawa Free Press

We don't believe that Holy Smoke would burst into a blaze when away from home. He might smudge furiously, but that's all—nothing more. Locked tight in each other's arms sounds like fire and flames, but it was only one male osculating and embracing another. However, we have known of a well known Doctor of Divinity who visited Paris and stood in front of a theatre. Had he walked on he would never have done it. He paused, men always pause before they fall off the rock or off the pedestal of virtue on which they place themselves. He paused, a ballet dance inside of most Parisian type. He entered the box office and bought a choice seat. Inside was a member of his church, and they rubbed shoulders coming out. This world is small, isn't it?



GUILTY OF MURDER

"Guilty of murder, with a strong recommendation to mercy," was the verdict returned by the jury in the Gorham case this afternoon, at twenty minutes to four.

"How did you find as to his sanity?" asked the Chancellor.

"We consider liquor was the cause of his act," said the foreman.

He stated in response to further questioning by the Court, that the jury thought the prisoner would have known the quality of the act if he had not been under the influence of liquor at the time.—From the report of the Gorham trial yesterday.

The fact that a drunken man shot his mother and was yesterday found guilty of murder will do more to make men and women think seriously about the horrors of excessive drink than an hundred sermons or a temperance campaign. Had Gorham been sober he would never have shot his mother. The matter resolves itself like this: The voters of Peterborough were an accessory to the murder. They allowed the license, they were a party to the selling. Under the law as it is to-day the man who sells liquor is as legitimate as the man who sells tea, or manages a bank. Gorham stands guilty of murder while drunk. Peterborough voters sanctioned the selling of the drink. Peterborough is an accessory to the murder.

They say the whiskey isn't as good as it once was. We clip the following from the Guelph Herald;

> "Inspector Oakes made an important seizure in one of the local hotels on Saturday last of some case goods, and is having the same analysed at Toronto this week. Some interesting developments may be expected in a short time.

Perhaps this is why so many murders are committed when people get drunk. Is it in the whiskey? Is it squirrel whiskey, fighting whiskey they sell to-day?

The Dutch don't murder—they drink beer and sing and eat limburger.

Regarding strong drink is compensation and Governmental control a feasible way to deal with it?

AT LAST!

Edward Allen Poe has at last been honored with a niche in the Hall of Fame at New York, but it has taken a long agitation to secure this recognition. Poe was found dead drunk on the street and never recovered consciousness. But the genius in him sings on and on, gathering power with the unrolling of the days. Who has not read "The Raven."? Last night at "The Midnight Sons" in the winding up of the banquet "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot" was sung with great vigor, with hands hands clasped and arms crossed. Ah! Bobbie, and many a time ye were hungry, laddie. Well, it's ever thus, the genius does not live for this day. He must die, rot, be mouldered into dirt, and from his dust springs immortality. Burns' "nichts" are world wide. Who knew life better than Bobbie?

"But pleasures are like poppies spread;
You seize the flower, its bloom is shed
Or, like the snowflake on the river,
A moment white, then melts forever."

And, glancing over the world's history, few are those whose names have reaped the reward for their immortal genius in this here and now.

MR. PUGSLEY CRITICIZED

The impression made in St. John by Mr. Pugsley's refusal to go into the witness box, and his payment of nearly $10,000 and costs to bring Mr. G. S. Mayes' suit to an end evidently is very bad. The Globe, owned by so old and eminent a Liberal as Senator Ellis, condemns the transaction in sharp terms.

"Mr. Mayes," the Globe says, ironically, "is declared by his friends to be delighted with the ten thousand dollars awarded him in the settlement, with the securing of costs, and with some other little concessions made him, but which do not appear openly in the settlement. Those persons who took the side of the Crown are also delighted because Mr. Mayes did not get the full amount of his demands. In a case where both sides are satisfied and happy there is little left to argue about. Mr. Mayes had been for many years a staunch friend and supporter of Hon. Mr. Pugsley, and when the latter was practising law there was not only political friendship, but close business relations between them. Those relations were finally disturbed. There was a quarrel, which resulted in the severance of their friendship and much subsequent unhappiness, which culminated in the law suit brought against the Crown. The settlement of that the other day indicates a considerable advance towards the wiping out of all recollections of the old scores and the renewal of better relations between the two parties.

"There is a view of the whole matter," the Globe goes on to say, "which is much broader than that largely taken so far in the discussion which has been going on. Hon. Mr. Pugsley has been subject to some criticism because he, as the Minister of the Department against which Mr. Mayes took action, went into the Exchequer Court himself, set his lawyers aside, and personally effected a settlement of the whole matter, a most excellent settlement, say Mr. Mayes' friends; a most excellent settlement, say Mr. Mayes' enemies. Besides the settlement saved time, court costs, and possible unpleasant examination of witnesses who might be compelled to unravel the alleged mysteries of the alleged mysterious business of dredging."

The Globe contains in a vein of bitter irony:—"This was surely wise on the part of the Minister and may furnish an example well worth following by the different departments of the Government which are always more or less involved in suits against the Crown. Let the Minister take his coat off, and go to secure a settlement, let him not trust to officials who are often more concerned in having their views upheld than in saving expense to the country, or even in the justice of a case, and, as in this public works case, the result will be satisfactory to everybody and the country will save money. This case in Mr. Pugsley's Department, as handled by the Minister himself, is a most striking precedent, striking in its originality, notable in its simplicity, and wonderful in its results."

THE STAGE

Now that the theatres are in full swing again, the tide of comment upon them, approving and adverse, is naturally rising, as it does every season. The editor of the "Ladies' Home Journal" has had an increasing number of parents writing to him, asking, "Cannot something be done to discourage the growth of the theatre and the increasing desire of our young people to attend plays?" The answer given by the editor is, "Something certainly can be done—a great deal in fact, but to our mind not exactly what these parents would do." The Montreal Witness also discusses the matter. The Witness is a paper of the Puritan type. It will not run a liquor advertisement. It did not contain a line of the Johnson-Jeffries fight. The Witness believes that the taste for the theatre is a live one, one that will grow and cannot be denied. So do we. The theatre is a power in the land. So is literature. The theatre is being filled with a new spirit. Go to the library and we find that fiction is the stuff that people read. Go to the theatre and we find it is the ordinary comedy drama that takes. In spite of all this there is a new and serious spirit among play-writers and actors. There is a decided movement to elevate the stage. The day was when actors and actresses were only tolerated in social life, now they are wined and dined and knighted when they rise to prominence.

The church teaches it great lesson. Literature has its story. So has the stage. Who could see Faust without being a better man? Who could witness Richard III. without believing that our evil life spells its doom not only in the next world, but in this. The stage has its mission, and it is but finding it.

OUR CREED

> The editor of the Peterborough Review wishes it understood that he "does not agree with Edison." Or with anybody else, living or dead, for that matter.—Orillia Packet.

This is not hardly true. We do not agree with Edison when he says there is no immortality of the soul, but we wish we had half the brains Edison has got on matters practical, and we would not be pushing a pen for a living.

Great men who are faddists and extremists on one thing are often off their base on other things. Witness a hundred people whose names are large in history. We take off our hat to no one. We respect good and right, no matter whether it comes in rags or silks, trails in the dust, or comes in a $10,000 automobile, resides in an obscure cottage or a great mansion. When we meet a great man we try to rob him of his thoughts. When we meet a mutt we go away as poor as when we met him.

SIDE LIGHTS

THE END OF THE WAY

(Halifax Herald)

My life is a wearisome journey;
I am sick with the dust and the heat;
The rays of the sun beat upon me,
And the briars are cutting my feet.
But the city to which I am journeying
Will more than my trials repay,
And the toil of the road will seem nothing,
When I get to the end of the way.

There are so many hills to climb upward,
I am often longing for rest,
But He who appointed my pathway,
Knows just what is needed and best.
I know in His word he has promised
That my strength shall be as my day—
And the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

Cooling fountains are there for the thirsty
There are cordials for those who are faint,
There are robes whiter and purer
Than any fancy can paint.
So I mean to press hopefully onward
Thinking often thro' each weary day,
Why the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

THE WHITE WASH.

Its Presence on the Hudson Bay Company's Boat Explained.

It is or was a rule of the Hudson Bay company that no woman be allowed passage on its boats. One day some years ago as a steamer of the company neared one of the northernmost ports a string of white garments was seen stretched across the deck. The watchers were amazed, for to them the wash line suggested only the presence of a woman aboard the boat.

Comment was freely made of the scandal that would ensue and the shakeup that would follow. When the boat docked the line of washing had disappeared—still another proof of the scandal.

Later one of the landsmen said to the captain:

"Why, how did it happen that you carried a woman passenger this trip?"

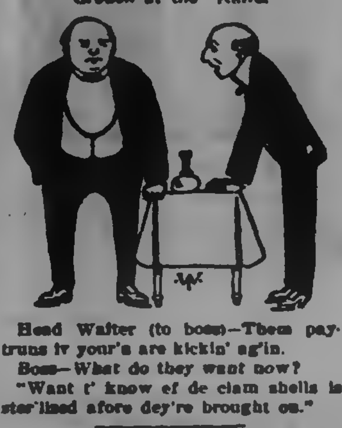
"There was never a woman along the whole voyage," was the indignant answer. "What do you mean?"

"If there was no woman aboard where did all that white wash come from?" was the triumphant reply.

The captain looked puzzled for a moment, and then he laughed.

"Oh," he said, "and didn't we have Lord Strathcona, the governor himself, along with us on this trip? And every day doesn't he insist on having his clean white shirt, no matter how far north we are? That's the white wash you saw strung along deck. And, what's more, doesn't his lordship insist upon having his London paper laid beside his plate every morning, no matter if it is a year old?"—Pearson's.

Grouch at the "Knife."



Head Waiter (to boss)—Them paytruns iv your's are kickin' ag'in.

Boss—What do they want now?

"Want t' know ef de clam shells is ster'lized afore dey're brought on."

He Did.

Said the lady: "Here's a rug to beat;
Also some pumpkin pie to eat
When you complete it."
The hobo cast a greedy eye
Upon that wholesome homemade pie
And longed to eat it;
Then thoughtfully he eyed the rug,
And, with a silent shoulder shrug,
He straightway beat it.

The Mosquito Family.

The mosquito family is a large one, as might be suspected. The experts have captured, identified and classified no less than 125 different species. In addition to the simon pure mosquito, there are any number of counterfeits. Scores of them are so closely allied to the real thing in looks, buzz and other characteristics as to be mistaken by the amateur for a member of the original family.

Life Insurance

Many a father is going to mortgage the house in town or the farm in the country this Fall that the son may go to college. Possibly that "rainy day" fund is going to be drawn upon for this purpose. I have enough faith in Canadian youth to believe in such investments. The son intends to pay back to his father every cent just as soon as he gets into business for himself. With but an exception now and then, he will—IF HE LIVES. It is the latter point I want to emphasize. Life is not a certainty. A glance at any college catalogue will show the asterisk in the list of students and the word "deceased" at the bottom of the page. Frequently there is added to the loss of the son the LOSS OF THE COST OF HIS EDUCATION. The latter may mean the loss of the home. One of the legitimate uses of life insurance, it seems to me, is to take care of just such cases. The cost of life insurance for the son is very slight, because he is young and a good risk. It adds but little to the financial burden. In return it gives full protection to the parent, and in later years—after college debts are paid—it safeguards the home which the son sets up for himself. No son who can get insurance has the right to mortgage his father's or his mother's future happiness when there is such a good way to avoid it. One word more, young man. Be sure that your insurance is in a well established, responsible company.

Someone has said, "The true value of a life assurance policy must be gauged by the security of the protection given; if it proves to be a good investment, all the better; when both are shown, there is nothing on earth to equal it."

The security of the protection afforded by the SUN LIFE OF CANADA needs no comment, and the profits paid—let the actual results tell their own forceful story.

A Gentleman From Mississippi

By THOMAS A. WISE

Novelized From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THOMAS A. WISE

"Do you but listen to our suddenly good friend Langdon. He wants to be the only man to make money out of the naval base. He won't listen to any other member of the naval committee making a cent out of it. Why, he"—

"Great God, sir!" exclaimed Langdon. "You are going too far, Peabody. You state what is false, and you know it, you—you"—

"Then you are willing that others should have their rightful share?" put in Stevens. "Oh, I understand now, senator."

"No, no, no!" cried Langdon. "You do not understand, Senator Stevens, and I must say I am ashamed to speak of you by the honorable title of senator, sir. I will not listen to any person enriching himself at the government expense, and I am your enemy, you, Peabody, and you, Stevens, beyond recall. You both know you misrepresent me."

Langdon walked over to Stevens and faced him directly.

"Do you remember, Stevens, Lorimer Hawkslee, back in wartime?"

"Yes," said Stevens, puzzled. "I remember him—a very fine gentleman."

The old planter sneered.

"Yes, a very fine gentleman! You remember he got rich out of contracts for supplies furnished to the Confederate government when it wasn't any too easy for the Confederate government to pay and when he was in that government himself. I never quite thought that the act of a gentleman, Stevens. It seemed to me to be very like dishonesty. I refused to speak to Lorimer Hawkslee in the Carroll hotel at Vicksburg, and when the people there asked me why I told them. I want to warn you, Stevens, that I'm likely to meet you some time in the Carroll hotel at Vicksburg."

Stevens backed away angrily. "I catch your insinuation, but"—he received a warning glance from Peabody and broke into a pleasant smile calculated to deceive the old planter—"this once I will overlook it because of our old friendship and the old days in Mississippi."

"You are a fine talker, Langdon," said Peabody, coming to Stevens' rescue, "but I can readily see what you are driving at. You want an investigation. You think you will catch some of us with what you reformers call 'the goods,' but forget evidently the entirely simple facts that your family has invested in Altacoola lands more heavily probably than any one else among us. You want to raise a scandal, do you? Well, go on and raise it, but remember that you will have to explain how it happened that there is $50,000 invested in the name of your son and $25,000 in the name of your daughter, Miss Carolina, not to mention a few thousands put in by the gentleman who, I am given to understand, is to be your son-in-law, Congressman Norton.

"How about that, Norton?" Peabody asked, turning to the congressman, who had followed Stevens.

"I corroberate all you've said," remarked Norton. "I can state positively that Senator Langdon knew that his money was going into Altacoola land. I will swear to it if necessary," and he glared bitterly at Carolina's father, feeling certain that the girl would cling to him as opposed to her parent.

Langdon made a threatening move at the congressman.

"I'm likely to meet you some time in the Carroll hotel."

"I consider my riddance of you mighty cheap at the price," he cried.

"Come, come, Langdon," fumed Peabody, "I must get away from here to catch the midnight train. Let's get through with this matter. You must realize that you cannot fight me in Washington. You must know that men call me the 'king of the senate. I can beat any measure you introduce. I can pass any measure you want passed. I can make you a laughing stock or a power.

"Why, my friend from Mississippi, I can even have your election to the senate contested, have a committee appointed to investigate the manner of your election, have that committee decide that you bought your way into the honorable body, the senate of the United States, and on the strength of that decision have you forfeit your seat! What a pretty heritage to hand down to posterity such a disgrace will be! Why, the very school children of the future will hear about you as 'Looter Langdon,' and their parents will tell them how particularly degrading it was for a man of your reputation to drag into your dishonest schemes your son, sir, and your daughter. For who will believe that this money was not put in these lands without your consent, without your direction, your order? Did you not sign the mortgage on which this $50,000 was raised?"

Senator Langdon waved his hand deprecatingly. "I'm learning the underhanded ways of you professional politicians. I'm getting wise. I'm learning 'the game,' so I know you're bluffing me, Peabody. But you forget that the game of poker was invented in Mississippi—my native state."

Pressing a button, Langdon summoned a servant and said: "Send in Mr. Haines. I guess I've got to have a witness for my side."

"It's no bluff," spoke Stevens as Haines entered. "Peabody can and will break you like a pipestem; he's done it to other men before you who—who tried to dispute his power. But I'll try to save you. I'll ask him to be merciful. You are not of any importance in the senate. We do not need to deal with you"—

"Then why do you both spend so much time on me?" asked Langdon innocently. "Why doesn't Peabody go to Philadelphia?"

"Langdon," said Peabody, "you know my control of the senate is no piece of fiction. But I will forgive your obstinacy, even forget it. I"—

"Look here," cried Langdon, "just because I'm a fat man don't think that I can't lose my temper." He stopped and gazed at his two colleagues.

"Now, you two men stay still one moment, and I'll tell you what really will happen tomorrow," he exploded, "and I'm only a beginner in the game that's your specialty. The naval base is going to Altacoola"—

'Because I'm fat don't think I can't lose my temper."

"Good!" simultaneously cried both Peabody and Stevens. "You're coming in with us!"

"No, I'm not, but I'll pass the bill so that nobody makes a cent, just as I said I would. I'll fool you both and make you both honest for once in spite of your natural dispositions."

Stevens and the Pennsylvanian stared at each other in disgust.

"Furthermore," continued Langdon, "Altacoola must have the base because I've known for some time that Gulf City was impossible. But some crooked senators would have made money if they'd known it, so they didn't learn it. Altacoola, that proud arm of our great gulf, will have those battleships floating on her broad bosom and the country will be the better off, and so will the sovereign state of Mississippi—God bless it—but neither Senator Peabody of Pennsylvania nor Senator Stevens of Mississippi is going to be any better because of it. No, and if you men come to my committee room at 12:30 tomorrow noon you'll have a chance to hear how all that's coming about. If you are not there by that time I'll bring in a minority report in favor of Gulf City just to show you that I know how to play the game—this Washington game"—

"Come, let's go. We can do nothing with him," said Peabody to the senior senator from Mississippi.

"Well, senator, in the name of goodness, what are you going to do? How can you win for Altacoola without letting these grafters make money out of it?" asked Haines in astonishment as the other two walked away. "What are you going to do at 12:30 tomorrow?"

Langdon turned to him and rolled his eyes toward the ceiling despairingly.

"I'm blamed if I know!" he exclaimed.

CHAPTER XXII.

LOBBYISTS—AND ONE IN PARTICULAR.

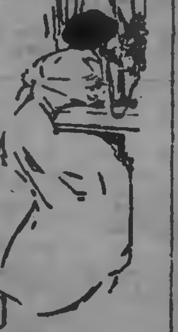
WASHINGTON has known many lobbyists in its time, and it keeps on knowing them. The striking increase in legislation that aims to restrict unlawful or improper practices in business, the awakening of the public has caused a greater demand than ever for influence at the national capital, for these restrictive measures must be either killed or emasculated to a point of uselessness by that process which is the salvation of many a corrupt manipulator, the process of amendment.

Predatory corporations, predatory business associations of different sorts and predatory individuals have their representatives on the field at Washington to ward off attack by any means that brains can devise or money procure and to obtain desired favors at a cost that will leave a profitable balance for the purchaser. When commercial tricksters, believing in the lobbyists' favorite maxim, "The People Forget," feel that they have outlived the latest reform movement and see "the good old days" returning, the professional politicians introduce a few reform measures themselves, most stringent measures. They push these measures ahead until somebody pays up, then the bills die. The lobbyist knows all about these "strike" bills, but does not frown on them. No, no. Perhaps he helped draw up one of these bills so that, with the aid of his inside knowledge of his employer's business, the measure is made to give a greater scare than might otherwise have resulted. The bigger the scare the bigger the fund advanced, of course, for the lobbyist to handle. All this also helps the lobbyist to secure and retain employment.

Not all the Washington lobbyists are outside of congress. The senator or congressman has unequaled facilities for oiling or blocking the course of a bill. Sometimes he confines himself to the interests of his own clients, whoever they may be. But sometimes he notices a bill that promises to be a pretty good thing for the client of some other member if it passes. Then he begins to fight this bill so actively that he must be "let in on the deal"

Capital." The sensational headlines flitted through her mind. Then she would grit her teeth and dig her finger nails into her palms. She had to have money to carry on the life she loved so well. She must continue as she had begun. After all, she reasoned, nothing definite could ever be proved regarding the past. Let the future care for itself. She might marry again and free herself from this mode of life, who knows?

So reasoned Cora Spangler for the hundredth time during the last two years as she sat in her boudoir at her home. She had spent part of the day with Carolina and Hope Langdon and in the evening had attended the musicale at their house. But she had been forced to leave early owing to a severe headache. Now, after an hour or two of rest, she felt better and was about to retire. Suddenly the telephone bell rang at a writing table near a window. She had two telephones, one in the lower hall and one in her boudoir—to save walking downstairs unnecessarily, she explained to her woman friends. But the number of this upstairs telephone was not in the public book. It had a private number, known to but two people except herself.



"Hello! Who is it?"

Taking down the receiver, she asked in low voice, "Hello, who is it?"

"Mr. Wall."

It was the name Senator Peabody used in telephone conversation with her.

To be continued.

DUELS BETWEEN ANIMALS.

Fight of a Tiger and a Crocodile With Native For a Spectator.

It is said that the most common form of duel between animals is that afforded by the instance of two stags, which, while fighting, interlocked their antlers so tenaciously that they could not separate them, and so starved to death.

One of the most interesting of animal duels was that told of a swan and a pike, which occurred in a body of water situated on an English estate. A laboring man, who passed this pond every morning on his way to work, observed a swan with its head under water. The next morning the bird was in exactly the same place and position. Still, that was not remarkable, however, when he saw that the swan was in precisely the same position, he called the attention of the keeper to it. The keeper found that the swan's head had been swallowed by a large pike. Both were dead.

In India a native went to bathe in a ravine. He was in the water up to his neck when a tiger on the hill above gave a leap toward its prey. But the tiger had not calculated that, since his victim was much lower than himself, a leap of the right strength for a horizontal range would carry him far beyond his mark; consequently he fell some ten feet on the other side.

Now it happened that a hungry crocodile was at the same time drawing a bee line under water toward the native. When the crocodile had almost come upon his prey, he heard a splash just in front, and made a dash bringing his enormous jaws down on the tiger's paw.

The bather nearly fainted with fright when he saw the tiger fall into the water, and for a few moments he could not understand why the creature did not devour him. Why did he persist in keeping one of his paws under water beating savagely with the other. And the water turned red!

Then all at once the assaults of the tiger became more furious and his growls developed into roars. The huge tail of a crocodile reared up out of the water. The obvious intention was to pull the tiger under water and drown him and the tiger understanding this purpose, tried to frustrate it by beating the snout of the crocodile with his other paw. But the snout was too far down, and he left much of his force on the surface of the water. His struggles became more and more feeble and at length he disappeared altogether, only a cluster of bubbles remaining to show where he had been.

His fight, however, had been a game one, not entirely in vain; for, when the bodies of the two beasts finally came to the surface, it was seen that the tiger had literally torn away the whole front of the crocodile's face and had blinded it so that its victory was a useless one.

Story of a Royal Residence.

It is not generally known that King George almost purchased a residence in the North of Ireland a few years ago, and the true story why he did not do so has never previously been told. The residence in question was one that particularly appealed to him. The estate was extensive and possessed excellent fishing and shooting rights, while the scenery in the neighborhood was among the most picturesque it would be possible to imagine. Both the Prince and Princess of Wales (as their Majesties then were) fell in love with the place, and negotiations for its purchase were well advanced when the matter came to the ears of the leaders of the Irish party. A protest was at once entered with the Prime Minister of the day, and a significant hint was given that if the Heir-Apparent took up his residence in Ireland matters would be made pretty awkward for the Government in the House of Commons. The Premier was consequently in something of a dilemma, and sought an audience of the late King.

King Edward listened to what his chief political adviser had to say, and then consulted the Prince of Wales, and pointed out the objections that had been raised, and the awkward position in which the viceroy would be placed every time the prince or princess appeared in Dublin. King Edward further added reasons of his own for opposing this plan chiefly on account of the distance from London that his heir would be when residing upon his Irish estate. His present Majesty at length agreed to forego his project, and to accept Frogmore as his country home.

Far Too Official.

During a portion of the South African war, Lord Kitchener had as an orderly a young scion of a noble house who had joined the Imperial Yeomanry as a trooper. He could not quite understand that he was not on terms of perfect equality with the members of the staff, and having been summoned one morning to carry despatches for the commander-in-chief, he entered the room with a jaunty air. "Did you want me, Kitchener?" he asked calmly, while the rest of the staff gasped for fear of what would happen next. Kitchener, however, merely looked at him with a quiet smile. "Oh, don't call me Kitchener," he remarked gently, "it's so beastly formal. Call me Herbert!"

Irish Avoid the Navy.

In proportion to its population, Ireland supplies very few sailors to the royal navy. The number of boys who joined within the last two years was only 211, as compared with 6,349 for Great Britain. In the same period 318 second-class stokers were enlisted in Ireland, and 7,466 in Great Britain. There is no naval training ships on the Irish coast, the number of boys joining in Ireland being too small to justify it.

Imagination.

It is imagination rather than reason that distinguishes man from brute, and no person who is devoid of imagination can know extremes of happiness or misery. Happiness to a great measure depends on the faculty for forgetting.

The Siamese Twins.

The Siamese twins were the most famous freaks that were ever shown in American museums. They were Chinese boys born at Bang Becklong and taking their title from the country where they were brought up. Their names were Eng and Chang. The babies, born in 1825, were united by a band of flesh that stretched from the breast of one to the breast of the other. They were brought to America when they were little more than children and were exhibited in museums for many years. Their death occurred in 1872.

SPECTACLES SHOULD BE CHANGED

Frequently people will get spectacles which suit them, and go on wearing them for years without having their sight tested to discover whether any change has taken place. This is wrong. All who wear glasses should have their eyes tested at intervals, even if the necessity of such is not apparent to them. As a general rule spectacles for old sight require changing about every 3 years, but it is desirable that the sight should be carefully tested every two years.

Have Eyes Tested at Intervals

Whenever you feel uneasy in your spectacles, don't hesitate to call and see us. We are always glad to help you.

USUAL FALL OF SNOW ARRIVES

Just a Little Reminder that the Coal Bin Needs Attention

No doubt, many citizens were surprised at the fall of the "beautiful" this morning, but yet nothing unusual had happened.

This reminder of empty coal bins, chilly blasts and snow shovels, was about due.

Early this morning, Mr. Walter Peters, the local Government weather man, remarked that the time had arrived for a fall of snow, about seven o'clock it came.

But it doesn't necessarily mean that winter has commenced. No, we will have lots of fine weather yet.

"MIDNIGHT SONS" IS ONE GOOD SHOW

When Lew Fields put "The Midnight Sons" together he had it in mind to give the public something bewilderingly big and he certainly succeeded.

"The Midnight Sons" is a production that represents the last word in elaborate stage craft. For all the scenes the stage is dressed in brilliant and gorgeous garb, but at that the pictures are not blurred with extravagant trappings. All the scenes are clean cut reproductions of original ideas from the resourceful brain of the producer.

The honeymoon special—the big train scene at the end of the first act is a masterpiece of ingenuity and the applause was prolonged and vigorous.

The thread of the story of the play is a very fine one and is used simply to hold together a piece that is a mammoth, but light one and about as diversified and entertaining a spectacle as one would wish to see in a day's, or for that matter, a two days', journey.

There were toe dancers and heel dancers, broiler and Amazons, character comedians and acrobats, bewitching costumes and surprising effects, and everything else that goes to make a magnificent extravaganza.

"The Midnight Sons" was the first Fields show to visit Peterborough and on account of its excellence much may be expected in new ideas and effective methods in the presentation of Blanche Ring's piece "The Yankee Girl." Miss Ring is the brightest musical comedy star in the Field's constellation.

AMERICAN DRAMA OF A DECADE

"The White Squaw" A Strong and Appealing Play of Real Human Interest

"The White Squaw," a romantic drama, will be the attraction at the Grand on Wednesday next, Nov. 2nd. The play is by Della Clarke, a talented young actor-author, and will be presented here under the direction of Louis F. Werba. Miss Clarke, who until recently, was identified with Chas. Frohman's forces, and before that with Augustin Daly, will play the principal character in her drama. Associated with her in the cast are some of America's best known actors.

Romance, comedy and a tremendous vein of human interest form the basis of building of "The White Squaw" The scenes are laid in the forest of Michigan just a century ago, near to what is now the prosperous city of Detroit. Years before the time of the play's opening, a French Canadian trapper, and his English wife and their two baby daughters, Leah, dark and French like her father, and Octavia who had her mother's golden hair and blue eyes; settled in this forest land. The father goes hunting one day, the little dark eyed daughter accompanying him. He is slain by a beast of prey. The child is rescued by an Old Indian chief, and the redskin and his squaw rear the girl to believe she is their own child. At the opening of the play both the sisters have grown to womanhood, each unaware of the other's being. Jacques Cartier, a French Canadian trapper, is in love with the supposed Indian girl, Neamata by name, while she has given her heart to an English fur trader named Bruce Marshall. He in turn is in love with Neamata's beautiful sister, who dwells in the foreign land from whence he comes. With her chaperone, the golden haired Octavia comes to visit her fiancee; the sisters come face to face, not knowing each other, and it is from this situation that Miss Charles has woven her play, said to vibrate with emotion of the dramatic sort and to pulsate with the sweetest sentiment to which frail humanity is heir.

Gordian Knot

McNEILL—McNEILL.

"Sunny Brae," the home of Mr. and Mrs. John McNeill, Cavan, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, when their eldest daughter, Mary Martha Louise, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Charles Frederic McNeill, youngest son of Mrs. M. J. McNeill, of Janetville.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Canon Allen, of Millbrook, in the presence of the immediate friends of bride and groom. The bride was given away by her father and wore a brown travelling suit. She also wore a gold brooch set with pearls, the gift of the groom. The young couple were unattended.

After the ceremony the guests partook of a dainty wedding breakfast after which the young couple left in automobile for Millbrook, where they took the 9.30 p.m. G.T.R. train for Toronto and points west.

The bride was the recipient of many handsome presents among them a cheque from her father and one hundred dollars in gold from her uncle Mr. Charles McNeill.

On their return from their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. McNeill will reside in Janetville.

LIFE IMPRISONMENT FOR JAMES GORHAM

Seems the Probable Sentence—Minister of Justice Will be Influenced by Chancellor Boyd's Opinion in the Case —Defence Can do Nothing Further.

It is quite safe to say that the death sentence will never be passed upon James Gorham, convicted at the High Court yesterday on the charge of murder.

The jury's recommendation to mercy was so seriously considered by Chancellor Boyd, that he refrained from passing sentence till the recommendation had been forwarded to the proper authorities.

The matter will come before Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice, and he will be strongly influenced by the judge's bearing. As the latter stated that he didn't think Gorham a proper subject for capital punishment the sentence will be commuted.

Chancellor Boyd will then probably be called upon to pass sentence, which will likely be life imprisonment.

To the Review to-day Mr. G. N. Gordon junior counsel for the defence, in the Gorham case, said the defence had done everything possible in Gorham's behalf, and stated that no further steps would be taken by the prisoner's counsel. On account of the judge's attitude it will not be necessary to have Gorham represented before the Minister of Justice.

NO NEGLIGENCE ON THE PART OF DEFENDANTS

Jury Had Lengthy Deliberation of Evidence in Foley-West Action.

"We find that there was no negligence on the part of the defendants, and that the accident was purely accidental."

Such was the verdict returned by the jury in the Foley vs. Wm. West jr., and Wm. West sr., at 2.05 this afternoon, after having been out since ten o'clock.

Edward Foley claimed $3,000 damages from the defendants, West jr., and West sr., portable mill owners, of Havelock, for injuries which he received while in their employ.

He alleged that the machinery broke and a flying piece struck him on the leg, breaking it.

The jury returned during the progress of the Innis vs Corporation of Havelock action, and his Lordship did not then make any further disposition of the case.

Mr. D. O'Connell conducted the examination on behalf of the defendants.

$20,000 DEBENTURE BY-LAW FOR WATERWORKS PURPOSES PASSED BY CITY COUNCIL

The Water Commissioners of the city met last evening with the City Council, to talk over the issuance of $20,000 worth of debentures needed by them for water-works purposes.

Alderman Bradburn inquired if the contingent fund had been drawn on Commissioner T. F. Matthews thought that such a question was unnecessary. He stated that the contingent fund was untouched.

Ald. Hicks inquired under what act the Council was legislating in moving that the by-law be passed. City Clerk Armstrong told him "the act of 1906."

Mr. Matthews said that he was not as familiar with the workings of the Council as he should be. Mr. Hicks replied that he thought it would be better if the Council were more familiar with what the Water Commissioners were doing.

"As far as making good with the rate-payers," said Ald. Hicks, "I always try to make good." He thought that the public would like to be consulted about what the Water Commissioners are doing.

Mr. Matthews replied that there was no desire on the part of the Commissioners to conceal anything, and they would always be pleased to have questions asked."

"There is one matter," said Mr. Matthews, "on which we cannot make any communication and that is about the matter of the new dam. There are matters in dispute at the present time which make it impossible.".

Regarding the water-works question Ald. Hicks had something to say. He wished to know if by paying the cost of present water-works extension, water would be cheaper for users in future years.

About the new dam, Mr. Hicks said that his questions, if he should ask any, would relate to the construction of it, but if it had not been settled he would refrain from mentioning it. Mr. W. H. Moore also thought it would be unwise to refer to it at the meeting.

Ald. Hicks said that he did not intend to embarrass the commissioners by any questions.

The by-law for the issuing of the $20,000 of debentures was then passed.

WHO'S COMING AND GOING

Mrs. J. G. Harris, Halifax, is at the Oriental.

Dr. J. M. Brown, Seattle, Wash., is a guest at the Oriental.

Mrs. John Lane, Water street north, and her grandchild, Miss Helen Lane, will spend Thanksgiving in Toronto.

Mr. Fred Myles will spend Thanksgiving Day in Toronto.

Mr. Harry Bennett the comedy entertainer arrived in the city this morning from Toronto and will appear on the program at the band concert this evening. He is registered at the Oriental.

Mr. G. A. Wood, son of Mrs. James Wood, has returned from a trip through the west. Mr. Wood met many of his former Peterborough chums, who are now scattered throughout the west, among whom were G. M. Cox, Geo. Hooey, Mick G. Cameron, D. Collins and Kenneth Shook. Mr. Wood was greatly disappointed in the condition of the crops, and thinks Ontario can still hold its own.

The schools of New Westminster, B. C., are badly over-crowded.

ATHLETICS KNEW BATTERY SIGNALS OF THE CUBS

Chicago, Oct. 28.—Not a few of the defeated Cubs attribute the terrific hitting of the Athletics in the recent series to the fact that the Mackmen had the Chicago catchers' signs and knew what was going to be pitched before it was pitched.

The Cubs do not accuse their conquerors of unfair tactics. It is a ball team's business to get its opponents' signals if it can be done by close watching. The Cubs believe that the American Leaguers were "on" and give reasons to back their belief. Chief among the reasons is the "toe hold" taken by the Philadelphia batsmen. Usually, when a batter doesn't know whether a curve or a fast ball is coming up, he is afraid to walk into the ball as did the Mackmen, because if he was guessing it for a curve and it turned out to be a fast one, he might be "beaned."

But the Athletics appeared to know what was coming and they stepped into the curve balls and laid back for the fast ones just as if they were wise to the pitchers' plans. Jack Pfiester said he was the most surprised man in the world at the way in which the Athletics outguessed him. On one occasion, with Ira Thomas at bat, Jack pitched a fast ball. Ira was looking for one and took a healthy swing, but succeeded only in fouling the ball into the stand. Kling then signed Jack for another fast one but Pfiester shook his head and pitched a curve. Ira swung right out from his shoulder as if he thought it was going to be fast. The curve was low and inside, and, according to Jack, Thomas missed it by two and a half or three feet. Other Club pitchers corroborated Pfiester's testimony. They were not "knocking" the Athletics when they did this, for they realized that it was a battery's own fault if it allowed the opposing batters to know what was going to be pitched.

VARSITY TEAM WENT WENT THROUGH AT NOON

The Toronto Varsity rugby team went through on the C. P. R. at noon to-day, on their way to Ottawa, where they play the Ottawa College to-morrow. The team had a special car.

A telegram stating that four inches of snow had fallen at Ottawa was received before starting from Toronto. Capt. Hugh Gall and his team-mates are confident of a win, and believe that another championship will come their way. After Saturday, the team has two games with Queen's.

Thompson will not be playing to-morrow, on account of the injury to his leg, but will be in shape for the remaining games. Mike Kennedy will work at his position at outside wing.

The line up will be: backs, Dickson, Maynard, Gaul, Gage; quarter, Foulds; scrimmage, Bell, Carroll, Leonard; wings, Lajoie, German, Parks, Grass, Kingstone, Kennedy.

PUNCH CAMERON OUT WITH DUNDAS

Bert Cameron is out with Dundas again. Bert has had a rather checkered career in rugby. Starting in Peterborough, he has played in Dundas, Hamilton and Montreal, and back to Dundas again. He is a staunch supporter of Ross Craig, who is making them all sit up with the game he is playing this fall.

A WORLD WONDER TO CLOSE

The Peterborough Hydraulic Lift Lock will be closed for the season on Saturday night of this week. The various tugs and steamboats on these waters have about finished their season's work and most of them will be in winter quarters on Monday. The Rice Lake boats will be running to Peterborough until the river freezes up.

SPORTS OF THE DAY

RACING.

Sheepshead Bay, Oct. 27.—Following his victory over Jack Johnson, Barney Oldfield gave out this statement; "I faced Jack Johnson for neither money nor glory, but to eliminate from my profession an invader who would have had to be reckoned with sooner or later. If Jeffries had fought Johnson five years ago the white man would have won, and after Jeffries retired he would never have had to fight him again. If I had ignored Johnson for a year or so he would probably have gained much experience on the tracks and bought high powered cars, while I am not getting any better from day to day. I am glad if my victory over Johnson will have any effect on the 'white man's hope' situation."

BASEBALL.

Chicago, Oct. 27.—Joe Tinker, of the Chicago Cubs, publicly announced his retirement as a shortstop. Never again, he declares, will he play shortstop for any team. He has declared himself a candidate for third base. Tinker is anxious to retire as a shortstop and more than anxious to become a third-baseman. He is determined never again to play short.

"From now on I am a third-baseman," said Tinker. "I have notified Manager Chance of my intention. I think I will last three years longer as a third-baseman than I would as a shortstop. Don't think I'm out after Steiny's job. I simply want to play third. Maybe I'm all in as a shortstop—maybe not, but from now on it's third base for me."

"BIG SIX."

New York, Oct. 27.—To show their appreciation of his yeoman work in clinching the baseball championship of Greater New York for the Giants by defeating the Yankees in three games and acting as rescuer in a fourth, Christy Mathewson has been presented with a gold watch, valued at $400, by his team-mates. Each of the fellows chipped in and purchased the beautiful gift for "Big Six."

Matty and Chief Myers are at Hammerstein's this week in a little baseball sketch called "Curves," written by Bozeman Bulger.

THE MAT.

Buffalo, Oct. 27.—Dr. B. F. Roller, the Seattle wrestler, undertook to throw three heavyweight wrestlers in an hour here last night and failed. He disposed of two within 40 minutes, but Mort Henderson stuck out the 20 minutes. Charlie Olsen, the Hoosier mat artist, and his Turk, Mahmet Yousif, both won their handicap matches.

The big mat men to-day talked quite a bit about the prospects of Gotch's retirement being permanent, and also of the coming of Hackenschmidt and Zbysco. The report that Gotch had turned over his title to Henry Ordeman of Minneapolis was accepted very coolly, as there is no more precedent for such a move in wrestling than in pugilism, and Corbett, Jeffries, Tommy Ryan and others have discovered that.

SPORTING COMMENT

A report from Hamilton says that Ben Simpson will likely play against Montreal Saturday.

The Tigers defeated Dundas in an exhibition game yesterday by one point, the score being 7—6. Simpson played left half.

Cornelius McGillicuddy, or, to be brief, Connie Mack, the general of the world's champion baseball team, was married yesterday.

Of late nothing has been heard of Lindsay's ink and paper rugby team.

Indoor baseball has commenced at the armories. There should be no trouble in arranging games with outside teams this season. Port Hope and Belleville are in the game.

The charge against Jack Johnson of assaulting a hotelman, and which caused some anxiety on the part of his camp before the fight at Reno, has been dismissed. Witnesses failed to put in an appearance for the prosecution.

Chas. Liffiton, a member of the Montreal Hockey Club, is in the city and registered at the Oriental Hotel. Mr. Liffiton is in the city on business being identified with a Montreal jewelry firm.

Local Option movements would be needless if every-one understood that Regal Lager benefits but does not intoxicate. It quenches thirst delightfully, makes the appetite healthy, and aids digestion. Good at meals.

The Race is Off

A race for a side bet which was to have taken place on Hunter street this afternoon between two runners who can step the distance in about eight seconds on a windy track is declared off.

Bad weather and cold feet are the reasons given.

Hit the Pavement

The first snowfall of the season occured at George and Hunter Streets to day, when a gentleman had his bedsteps upset by quick and hard contact with the sloppy pavement. He fell right at a drug store too, but no salve was required.

Long and Short Novels.

What is the right length for the novel? England, that large and long-established manufacturer of fiction, is beginning to ask itself this question. The general opinion seems to be that 100,000 words represent a "comfortable limit." A minimum of 80,000 is mentioned—which implies a reasonable maximum of 125,000.

One publisher regrets that there is not more scope for a shorter novel—one of about 30,000 words. A good deal can be said within those limits, and such a length seems a promising one for the untried beginner. Big men, who go in for big themes, must naturally be allowed more elbow-room. Yet some of the biggest, like Turgenev, have not needed it.

William de Morgan, whose productions are far from brief, has been brought into the discussion. "If a story is uninteresting," he says, "the shorter it is the better." A good many letters reach him from readers, he adds, and few of them complain of undue length. Thus does he justify the 300,000 words of "It Never Can Happen Again."

Though the prospect for volumes of short stories remain as poor as ever, there is hope for the short novel, as witness the success of "Monsieur Beaucaire," which runs considerably under the 30,000 word length proposed. Several of the McCutcheon stories are scarcely longer.

Mr. de Morgan closes with a comparison between books of characterization and books of adventure. Sheer action and vivid drama are not to go on too long; "but if a man has a strong power of characterization and is able to interest his readers in the characters he draws there can be no arbitrary limit to his writing."

Cannon Law.

One of the best gasconnades attributed to Henry of Navarre is connected with the siege of Chartres. When the town surrendered it is said that a deputation came to the Porte St. Michel to present the keys to the victorious monarch, whereupon the chief echevin began to deliver an elaborate harangue, in which he proposed to prove that Chartres really belonged to his majesty both by divine and by civil law. "By cannon law also," the king abruptly retorted, setting spurs to his horse. "Come; let us pass."

Forget Once In Awhile.

The health of the body as well as of the mind depends upon forgetting. To let the memory of a wrong, of angry words, of petty meanness, linger and rankle in your memory will not only dissipate your mental energy, but it will react upon the body. The secretions will be diminished, digestion impaired, sleep disturbed and the general health suffer in consequence. Forgetting is a splendid mental calisthenic and a good medicine for the body.

THE RUSSIAN PEASANT.

Stupid and Poor, a Good Fellow Who Merely Exists.

The Russian peasant does not live; he merely exists. "Nitchevo" ("It is nothing"), he merely says when anything happens to him. Nothing matters, nothing could be worse, and "Nitchevo" is his panacea for all evils. And yet the Russian moujik is really a fine fellow. Ordinarily, H. P. Kennard tells us in his book, "The Russian Peasant," he is a splendid, well built man, large limbed, large headed and healthy. He is equally unaffected by 20 degrees of frost or twenty glasses of vodka. He is clothed in uncured sheepskins and carries in winter more clothes than the average Englishman could stand up in.

He is unspeakably stupid, however, and his dream of happiness is to gorge, to sleep as much as possible through the winter and dance and sing in the summer. But the stranger's first objection to the moujik is that he smells—not because he does not wash himself. As a matter of fact, in every village there are public baths—bassa—and the peasants wash themselves there unfailingly every Saturday in order to be allowed to go to church on Sunday, for the Orthodox church enjoins cleanliness.

The Russian peasant is always poor and generally in debt. He plows the land in the same way that his father plowed it and gets as little for his labor. His main worry in life is how to pay the governor's taxes. If he says he cannot pay he is flogged, or perhaps he will sell part of his next year's power of work—i. e., work for nothing for several months—to raise a loan, and of course he is worse off than ever the following year.

On Christmas night at dusk the marriageable village girls go out into the streets and meet their young men, and one says, "What is your name?" The young man answers "Foma," and she replies, "My husband's name is Foma."

Some days later at the girl's home relations are gathered together. There comes a knock at the door. The starosta and the young man enter, carrying loaves of bread. The starosta says something like this:

"We are German people, come from Turkey. We are hunters, good fellows. There was a time once in our country when we saw strange footprints in the snow, and my friend the prince here saw them, and we thought they might be a fox's or marten's footprints or it might be those of a beautiful girl. We hunters, we good fellows, are determined not to rest till we have found the animal. We have been in all cities from Germany to Turkey and have sought for this fox, this marten or this princess, and at last we have seen the same strange footprints in the snow again, here by your court. And we have come in. Come, let us take her, the beautiful princess, for we see her in front of us, or can it be that you would keep her till she grows a little older?"

Thus does the moujik ask for a wife.

Inventor Davy and Love.

Sir Humphry Davy, the inventor of the Davy lamp, found love something of a delusion, if not a snare. Writing to his mother, he said, "I am the happiest of men in the hope of a union with a woman equally distinguished for virtues, talents and accomplishments." And in a letter to his brother he expresses his rapture thus: "Mrs. Apprece has consented to marry me, and when the event takes place I shall not envy kings, princes or potentates." The widow must have been a person possessed of great powers of fascination, for Sir Henry Holland makes mention of her as a lady who made such a sensation in Edinburgh society that even a regius professor did not think it beneath his scholarship to go down on his knees in the street to fasten her shoe. The sequel need not be dwelt upon further than to add that the marriage turned out to be altogether a mistake.

Fergusson and the Rabbits.

Robert Fergusson, the poet, was first matriculated at St. Andrew's university in the session of 1764-5. It was the custom at this time for each bursar to take his turn in invoking "blessing" at the meals. The college table having been surfeited with an unbroken diet of rabbits in various forms of cookery, Fergusson, on being called to say grace, repeated what are now celebrated lines:

For rabbits young and for rabbits old,
For rabbits hot and for rabbits cold,
For rabbits tender and for rabbits tough
Our thanks we render, for we've had enough!

It may be added Fergusson was not sent down, but the rabbits were "rusticated."

The Quipus.

The quipus, upon which the ancient Peruvians kept their records and accounts, consisted of a thick main cord, with smaller cords tied to it at certain distances. Upon these smaller cords the knots were tied by means of which the reckoning was kept. The length of the main rope varied from a foot to several yards. The cords were of various colors, each with its own proper meaning—as red for soldiers, yellow for gold, white for silver, green for corn, and so on. The reckoning seems to havebeen largely regulated by the distances of the knots from the main cord and the sequence of the branches. —New York American.

Same Effect.

"Cyril," said his mother as they sat down to the breakfast table, "did you wash your face this morning?"

"Well, no, mamma," said he slowly, evidently casting in his mind for an excuse, "but," he added reassuringly, "I cried a little before I came down stairs."—Delineator

An Enviable Reputation

Semi-ready Clothes have earned their enviable reputation—fairly earned it

The Designing, Cutting and Tailoring Staff is composed of men who use "grey matter"—men who have graduated from the bench and who are thoroughly conversant with every department of the tailoring craft. The power behind it all is specialized service—the keynote of the Semi-ready organization—the element which developes expert tailoring. There is a personal service in the watching and examining of every garment as it goes through the various stages.

Our prices are based on the cost of material and of work, and there is more value in each grade, from the $15 to the $18, $20, $22.50, $25 and $28 and $30 suits.

Thieving as a Calling.

Thieving is an honorable calling among the members of the Zakha Khel Afridi tribe, which inhabits the country south the Khyber Pass, one of the principal gateways into Afghanistan from India. A young Afridi woman will not look favorably upon a young man unless he is proficient in the art of stealing and the dearest wish of a mother is that her little boy may become a daring thief. Every child is consecrated, as it were, at its birth to crime. A hole is made in the wall similar to that made by a burglar and the mother passes the infant backward and forward through it, singing in its ear all the time: "Be a thief, be a thief, be a thief."

An Amendment.

"See here," indignantly exclaimed the pompous little man, "did you tell Blank that I couldn't tell the truth if I tried?"

"No, sir," replied the big man; "I never told him anything of the kind."

"That's all right then," rejoined the little chap. "I didn't believe it when I heard it."

"On the contrary," continued the big fellow, "I told Blank that I thought you might be able to tell the truth if you tried, but I didn't believe you had ever tried."

An Exception.

"Politeness always pays," said the old gentleman. "Always practice politeness. You never lose anything by it."

"Yes, sometimes you do, dad," interpolated his son. "For instance, I lost a comfortable seat coming home in a crowded train to-night through that very cause."

ANCIENT LUXURIES.

Silver Lined Cooking Utensils Used Twenty Centuries Ago.

While the housewife of today may reasonably pride herself on the conveniences which her kitchen affords, she need not smile too superciliously at the thought of the makeshifts of days long gone by. She would certainly not do so were she to spend a little time inspecting the kitchen and other household utensils that were in use 2,000 years ago, as exhibited in the national museum at Naples. Saucepans lined with silver, pails richly inlaid with arabesques in silver and shovels handsomely carved figure among the household goods of those times.

An egg frame that would cook twenty eggs at once and pastry molds shaped like shells suggest luxuries of the kitchen of 2,000 years ago. Gridirons and frying pans, tart dishes and cheese graters were in use then as now.

The Roman lady's toilet table was well supplied. Ivory combs, bottles of perfume, pots of cosmetics, buttons, hairpins and even a hair net of gold wire figure in the museum.

Bronze thimbles and spindles are to be seen among the relics. The Roman lady even had her safety pin, for there is a specimen of this little convenience which, before the one in the Naples museum was found, was believed to be a strictly modern invention.

The Roman lady, however, apparently lacked one essential. She had no hairbrush. Neither had she a glass mirror. All the mirrors in the museum, with one exception, are of silver or some other white metal. The exception is a dark purple piece of glass let into the wall of a bedroom at the house Specchio in Pompeii.

In surgical instruments the ancient world was rich. Those found at Pompeii deprive modern science of the credit of more than one invention. Needles, probes and forceps resemble closely those in use at the present day.—Harper's Weekly.

An Unfair Attack.

Pietro was working with a gang at railroad construction. He had been told to beware of rattlesnakes, but assured that they would always give the warning rattle before striking.

One hot day he was eating his noon luncheon on a pine log when he saw a big rattler coiled a few feet in front of him. He eyed the serpent and began to lift his legs over the log. He had barely got them out of the way when the snake's fangs hit the bark beneath him.

"Son of a gun!" yelled Pietro. "Why you no ringa da bell?"—Everybody's.

HATES MODERN WEDDINGS.

Prof. William Robert Smith Criticizes Present Day Customs.

British and United States publications, not merely the society sheets and women's magazines, but some of the great daily newspapers have been devoting columns of space to the discussion of a pronouncement of Prof. William Robert Smith, M.D., F.R.S., against the giving and taking of wedding presents on the ground that the practice is immoral as tending to extravagance, to sycophancy, to waste and to imposition. Some publications, which have resented this structure upon a practice which has developed rapidly of recent years, have attacked the critic as "an impossible crank probably more at home among the musty tomes of his antiquated library than he would be in modern society." As a matter of fact, the learned "Professor" is, besides being one of the most up-to-date medical practitioners in London, considerable of a lion in the highest professional social set in the world's metropolis, having a splendid city home in fashionable Bloomsbury square, as well as a country place at Plumstead, in Kent. He is member of four of the most fashionable and smart clubs—the Carlton, the Royal Societies', the Savage and the Pilgrims. He comes by his title of "Professor" as the occupant of the chair of Forenic Medicine at King's College, London, and was educated at Aberdeen and Edinburgh Universities, taking the degrees of M.D. at the former and D.Sc. at the latter. Besides being a physician he is a barrister, having studied for that profession at the Temple, and having taken the degree of Doctor of Laws at Cambridge. He was also granted an honorary degree by the University of Geneva. Dr. Smith is anything but a mere bookworm, his activities having been varied and numerous. He was one of the Departmental Committee of the War Office that drew up the scheme of volunteer medical organization which proved so useful during the South African War, and still holds the rank of colonel in the Royal Army Medical Corps. He was the founder of the British Institute of Public Health and is now principal of the Royal Institute of Hygiene. He has for many years been regarded as the foremost champion in Britain of the cause of public health, maintaining that sickness and the death rate can be tremendously reduced by the introduction and rigid enforcement of well-devised laws for the provision of perfect water and drainage systems, the construction and equipment of homes, factories, schools, institutions, etc., on hygienic principles, the inspection of foods, the segregation of the sick, the disposal of the bodies of the dead, etc., etc. To his exertions it is mainly due that statutory provision was made requiring that medical health officers in Great Britain must possess special qualifications in the department of public health and hygiene, special courses being established in all the medical schools to afford doctors this particular training. As a manager of the Metropolitan Asylum Board he has taken a prominent part in dealing with the question of infectious disease treatment in London, and the result has been the establishment of a system which is regarded as a model one throughout the world. With a view of having the London schools placed in a thoroughly hygienic position, the Metropolitan School Board some years ago appointed him first medical adviser to their body, and under his direction the work was carried through with great thoroughness. During his active career Dr. Smith has found time to write several medical books, all regarded as standards.—Family Herald and Weekly Star.

The Plowman.

To turn a single acre of ground with a twelve-inch plow requires eight and one-fourth miles of heavy furrow travel. In plowing one square mile of land the solitary plowman and his horses must walk 5,280 miles. It would be easier (and the distance is less) to walk around the earth at the equator (if there were no ocean) than to follow a plow turning a prairie of five square miles. To equal our national tale of plowing—the work of myriads of teams, each using force sufficient to move seven tons over a good stone road—it would take an army of 4,550 plowmen to travel as far as from the earth to the moon and back again. For the world's yearly labor of this kind it would send about 80,000 men on that same half million mile journey.—World's Work.

Helping Out His Opponent.

Mr. Gladstone was once making one of his great speeches in the House when Lord Beaconsfield (then Mr. Disraeli) was leader of the opposition. Gladstone had worked himself up into a great state and referred to "the right honorable gentleman and his 'satellites'." On this there were cries of "Order, order!" "Question!" etc., which so disconcerted the right honorable gentleman that he lost the thread of his discourse. He threw back his head and in vain tried to remember where he left off, when Mr. Disraeli leaned across the table and said quietly, "The last word was 'satellites'."

He Meant the Bird.

A man once received as a present from a sea captain a fine specimen of the bird known as the laughing jackass. As he was carrying it home he met a brawny Irish navvy, who stopped him.

"Phwat kind of burd is that, sorr?" asked the man.

"That's a laughing jackass," explained the owner genially.

The Irishman, thinking he was being made fun of, was equal to the occasion and responded, with a twinkle of the eye:

"It's not yerself; it's the burd, I mane, sorr!"—London Spare Moments.

His Terrible Accident.

Admiring Young Listener—And how did you lose your leg?

Old Salt—Well, young man, one night in the dogwatch, while I was carryin' the baby jib, I stepped on a starboard tack and blood plain ensued.

The street railway service at Nelson, B. C., is expected to start about November 1st.

THE CZAR'S LEAVINGS.

A Doubtful Honor That Was Rejected by a Polish Girl.

In Russia royalty is so revered that to the loyal subject it seems a great honor to follow the czar. The government is eminently patriarchal—in theory, at least—and the emperor must supervise as well as patronize the schools. At the Easter festival the pupils are treated with especial favor. Young girls of the upper classes of the Imperial Girls' school are driven in a long procession through the streets in the imperial carriages. The pleasure for them is only that of being allowed to take a drive in a stylish court carriage, with coachman and footman in the imperial livery. There is nothing special to be seen.

The theory of this is that the czar stands in a sort of higher parental relation to all these children. When he once a year visits one of these schools—to which only the children of the nobility are admitted—it is a custom that as a sign of his favor he drops his pocket handkerchief, and the girls all scramble for it, tearing it to pieces, so that each one can get a fragment.

He takes the most brilliant girl to the table and tastes of the food of the institution. It is valued as the highest distinction when he gives one of the girls his plate with what is left upon it. It is the custom and usage for her to eat it with delight shown in all her features. Great was the astonishment of Alexander II. when a young girl, a Pole, whom the czar had taken to the table as being the most distinguished scholar of the institute and to whom he had passed what was left of his meat and potatoes, nodded to a servant and calmly gave him the czar's plate to take away.

The Lord Mayor of Birmingham ascended the new chimney of the Summerlane electrical power station, 250 feet high, and laid the last brick on the structure.

A wheat growing miracle has just been accomplished at Creeksea Hall farm, near Burnham on Crouch. Mr. Suter, a farmer, sowed a field with wheat on July 19th last, on the 24th, only five days later, the wheat sprouted above ground. On August 1st the ground was rolled on September 16th, the first ears appeared, and now a remarkable wheat sheaf is being shown. An acre and a third of similar wheat is expected to be garnered this week. The seed was treated by an electrical process.

A rare instance of fatal poisoning has been investigated at Deptford, at an inquest on James Slocombe, the mortuary keeper at the corner's court. Slocombe was assisting at a post-mortem examination in a case of blood poisoning had, at the time, a small pimple on his left forearm. Two days later he was taken ill and died in the Seaman's Hospital, killed by a corpse.

The wonderful brothers, Messrs. Fred and Walter Melville, now possess two successful theatres in London, and intend to build a third in Shaftsbury avenue. It will not be quite so large as the Lyceum, says Mr. F. Melville, but the bill of fare will be similar. It will be a two-tier house and will have every modern improvement.

The Kent medical officer of health reports that the recent outbreak of typhoid fever at Snodland, near Maidstone, was caused by the eating of shell fish. There were in all twenty cases and four deaths, confined almost entirely to the residents of one short street.

AN APPRECIATION

On motion of Ald. Phelan and Batten the following resolution was passed by the City Council last night:

That this Council desire to place on record its appreciation of the services rendered to the community by the late James Stevenson, who passed away on Tuesday last at the age of 85 years. During his long residence in this municipality of seventy years Mr. Stevenson took a leading part in business life and was foremost in advancing the interests of the city. He was Mayor of Peterborough first in 1854, and in all served ten years as head of the Council, besides being a member of the Council in other years, and served the municipality as a City Trust Commissioner for forty-nine years, a large part of that time as Chairman of the Commission. He also for two terms represented this constituency in the Parliament of the Dominion, during which he was influential in securing the building of the Trent Waterway, and as a member of the Board of Education for over fifty years, a director of the Horticultural Society, a member of the Nicholls Hospital Board, and in other positions he rendered the community valuable services. At a time when the foundations of the prosperity of Peterborough were being laid, Mr. Stevenson was active in securing railway facilities and manufacturing industries, and his efforts were valuable in the development of the city. Although during the past few years Mr. Stevenson has retired from active business, the services he rendered this community were most valuable and permanent in their results. We also desire to tender to Mr. Stevenson's family our sympathy, and to assure them that the work he did for Peterborough is appreciated and will not be forgotten.

BENNETT WILL BE HEARD IN HIS BEST NUMBERS

Harry M. Bennett, spoken of by the press as the foremost character entertainer of Canada, will hold the boards to-night at the popular concert of the 57th Regimental band. As it is some time since Mr. Bennett has favored Peterborough with a visit his appearance here this evening will probably be the means of attracting the largest crowd of the season to the armories. Mr. Bennett will appear in a program of his feature numbers.

The armories will be comfortably heated and seating accommodation will be larger than on the occasion of either of the previous concerts.

OZONE SYSTEM UNSATISFACTORY

Lindsay Water is Not Up to the Mark—Most Recent Test

Toronto, Oct. 28.—The Provincial Department of Health yesterday issued the result of the most recent test of the ozone water purification plant at Lindsay, which was made at the request of Mr. J. D. Flavelle, of the local water commission.

The investigation, which was conducted by Drs. Geo. G. Nasmith and T. D. Archibald, confirms the Nasmith-Phelps test of last year. In a series of 11 tests, colon bacilli were found in 9 cases in the raw water, in 5 in the filtered water, in 6 in the ozonized water, and in 6 in the tap water. The test condemns the ozone system as there exploited as unsatisfactory.

The report further points out that during the initial investigation by Dr. Archibald, the water had been tampered with unknown to the investigating expert.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Review does not hold itself responsible for opinions expressed by its correspondents

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—Alderman Duffus' belated bylaw against the whistling of railway locomotives is well enough, but it is against the lesser evil of two. We suffer more from the jargon of our factory whistles, with their unearthly shrieks at the hours of our sweetest slumbers, keeping it up at various intervals from about five to eight a.m. Besides, while there may be some excuse for the locomotive whistling in order to avoid danger, nothing can be said on behalf of the factory whistle. If every business man, contractor and mechanic would exercise the same liberty what a pandemonium there would be. Nor do they whistle once, but usually three times, and one in particular hangs on until a person would suppose it stops only from sheer exhaustion, and that, too, at the unseemly hour of between five and six a.m. If any, reason can be designed for the existence of a public nuisance so detrimental to our well-being, then let it be reduced to a minimum. Why not let one whistle suffice for every factory, and only blow at the regulation hour of seven a.m. The Edison whistle, while it is the most powerful, is also less goading on one's nerves than the thin, shrill whistle of the others, and ought to answer for all purposes.

Here, Alderman Duffus, is a pointer whereby you can exercise your influence to advantage, and for the comfort of all your constituents.

Yours, etc.,
NERVINE.
Peterborough, Oct. 28, 1910.

To the Editor of the Review,

Sir,—Allow me to express my great pleasure in reading your editorial of the 13th instant, on "A Time of Difficulty." The near future in Canada will be a time of difficulty as you well say, but if you will allow me you might have added that huge sums of borrowed money coming into a country help as much as anything else to lower the purchasing power of wages, as, of course, the more money, unless wages are proportionately increased, the higher the price asked and paid for necessaries. Fifty millions of dollars brought into Canada for work purposes may be expended in more labor (Asiatic for example) but unless the wage is increased the wage-earners already here cannot benefit, although the supply-merchant will. If, however, in addition to that we import enormous quantities of manufactures, which we could make, we are "doing up" the wage-earner altogether. Protection, as of course you will admit, is merely an incident. It is, as you truly set out, really an equalizer. Therefore, when the cost of production in work of an article, such as a farm implement, is higher in the United States than here, for Sir Wilfrid Laurier or anybody else to keep on protecting a company like the Massey-Harris Co., is little less than criminal (in a political sense). It is an entire misuse of the weapon of protection. It is turning it on the very people it was signed to protect. Free trade or laissez faire simply means not "free trade" but a free field for the money power to rule the country, in my opinion. The land tax in Britain is protection.

A Prose Poem

By Farmer George.

Thanksgiving time has come again, but I no turkey see; I'm lucky if I get a hen, for my old wife and me. Time was, when living on the farm, we had the beat to eat; with cords of wood to keep us warm, and cook our pies and meat. But now, retired, and in town, it is a different tale; our purse the prices have outgrown, and we are thin and pale We buy eggs at an awful price, and find that half are bad; the milk is never very nice, the butter makes us sad. My little hard-pan garden plot I dig and work and hoe; but any crop that I have got it never paid to grow. And what with taxes, water-rates and other claims galore, it seems to me the very Fates are always at the door Oh, how I wish we could recall those days of long ago, and back on farm resources fall, where milk and honey flow.—Norwood Register.

THE PRACTICE OF OPTOMETRY

The Science of how to furnish right Glasses when needed

Eye Examination to Determine the Necessity for Glasses.

The furnishing of glasses needed has in the past decade become almost an absolute and exact science, which is based upon purely mathematical and optical principles. This is now so firmly established that laws regulating the practice of Optometry are written on the Statute books of 34 of the States of America, two of the Provinces of Canada, and in Great Britain. It is a foregone conclusion that similar legislation will be enacted in other States and Provinces. We believe that it is not possible to examine too thoroughly or to make the mathematical calculations too carefully for the eye, when so much comfort, happiness and ability to earn a livelihood is dependent upon such.

AERONAUTS SAW ONLY DEATH IN WILDS AHEAD OF THEM

Hard Journey to Reach Nearest Settlement.

Hawley and Post Tell Story of Their Flight in Balloon Race.

Montreal, Oct. 29.—Hawley and Post of the America II. reached Montreal yesterday. Both are in excellent health and spirits, notwithstanding their strenuous experiences of the last ten days.

The aeronauts have made a careful chart of their entire trip, with altitudes and temperature, etc., taken every hour, and sometimes oftener. Their greatest altitude was 16,000 feet, which was when they shot up in the northern wilderness about noon on Wednesday, the last day of their flight in search of a landing-place.

At 10 a.m. on Wednesday, says the log, the balloon was up 14,000 feet, and at noon 16,000. The temperature was 48. A landing was effected at 3.45 half a mile from a small lake called Sandbank Lake, situated 58 miles north of Tschotagama. It would have been suicide to have proceeded, for no further settlement could be made in the direction being taken by the balloon towards the interior of Labrador and Ungava. Otherwise the journey could have been indefinitely prolonged, for six bags of ballast remained.

"There was only time that afternoon before night came on for us to make ourselves comfortable for the night," said Hawley. "We slept in the basket of the car. Then next morning, packing up our balloon, which was uninjured, and is to be brought out by a winter expedition over the snow, we started to walk towards Tschotagama, packing food in ballast bags; we made but little progress through the forest and consumed the greater part of three days making the fifty miles. It was with difficulty that we made slow progress round the shore, which was composed of mountainous cliffs, huge boulders and thickets of alder bushes. We about made up our minds that we could never get out of the wilderness unaided.

"To our intense relief, on Sunday last, after suffering much from sleeping out in rain and snow, and being on short rations, we came upon a hunter's camp, near the River Blanche, the inlet of the lake. The owner, Joseph Maltais, was absent, but the hut was stocked with fuel, provisions, and we determined to await relief. Shouting at the top of our voices, we drew the attention of Joseph Pinaud and Jacques Simard. They were on their way to their winter fur hunt in the interior. They cached their provisions and agreed to return with us to civilization."

FISHERIES COMMISSION

Ottawa, Oct. 29.—The commissioners who have been named to administer the fishery regulations under the recent award of The Hague Tribunal are Hon. Dr. Morrison, K.C., Minister of Justice in the Newfoundland Government, who will represent British interests; Dr. Hugh J. Smith of the United States, and Dr. P. O. Hock, who is neutral. Dr. Hock is expert fisheries adviser to the Netherlands Government.

To Join Canadian Navy.

London, Eng., Oct. 29.—Fifteen boys from the training ship Exmouth have been selected to join the Canadian navy.

CHURCH AND STATE PART

Lisbon, Oct. 29.—The separation of church and the state was announced in a decree issued by the Provisional Government yesterday. Another decree published declares for the freedom of the press.

The Government declined the invitation to attempt a memorial mass for the victims of the revolution on the ground that it desired to remain neutral in matters of religion.

The press generally favors the inauguration of a system of government, with a President and Cabinet, similar to that in the United States, in preference to the system of Parliamentary Government generally in vogue on the continent of Europe.

Among the measures being prepared by the Minister of Justice is a new divorce law, based upon the principle of separation by mutual consent.

THERE'S TROUBLE IN THE DOUMA

St. Petersburg, Oct. 29.—The fourth session of the Russian Douma opened yesterday.

As had been anticipated, there was trouble at once over a proposal to honor the memory of Prof. Serge Mouromtseff, who died recently. The vice-president declined to put an offered motion that the members rise as a mark of respect to the former President of the Lower House. Immediately upon the announcement the Constitutional Democrats and the Radicals withdrew from the sittings.

The first important business of the fourth session of the third Douma, which opened yesterday, was the consideration of a bill introducing universal primary education as it has been elaborated by the Cabinet.

AN IMPORTANT GOLD DISCOVERY

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 29.—News has reached the Soo of what is said to be an important gold discovery. It is claimed that the ore, which comes down from the district in the vicinity of Hobon, on the main line of the C.P.R., carries free gold in large quantities, the richness of which has not yet been determined, as no assay has yet been made.

The lucky prospector who first got on the ground and who first recorded a claim is William Norquist of the Soo. Norquist made the discovery last July and kept the matter quiet until he had located five claims, which have all been recorded.

However, it would appear that news of the new mining district leaked out, and prospectors from Haileybury and Sudbury are flocking into the country, which composes township 49, range 27 Algoma district. The location secured by Norquist is six miles from Pie Siding, twelve miles from Hobon, due north 120 miles from the Soo. Norquist is negotiating for the sale of his property to a firm in Colorado.

It is expected that the entire township will be staked out shortly. Four claims outside those placed on record by Norquist were recorded Thursday from the same township by lucky prospectors, and it is said that up to last night some fifty claims have been staked, although the men have not yet come in to record them.

DID JUSTICE MISCARRY?

Ottawa, Oct. 29.—Alexander Latham, a well-to-do farmer of Bryson, Que., who is at present serving a two-year sentence imposed on him by Judge Weir at the last term of the Pontiac Criminal Assizes in May last, for an alleged serious offence, and whose case is now being reviewed by the Minister of Justice, is said to stand an excellent chance of obtaining his liberty, as the result of two judgments rendered by Judge St. Pierre of Montreal at Bryson on Thursday, in two civil actions brought by the original plaintiff against Latham.

Judge St. Pierre decided in favor of the defendant and stated that there was not one tittle of evidence to support the charge brought by the plaintiff, and for which Latham is now serving his sentence, except the statement of the plaintiff, which was very contradictory and unsatisfactory.

MORE CHARGES AGAINST McCAULEY

Toronto, Oct. 29.—James McCauley, charged with attempting to extort money from J. C. Eaton by "Black Hand" methods, has been further charged with having stolen a gold watch from A. R. Wheeler, who works at the University of Toronto; a camera from H. A. Hager, a former room-mate at Wilton avenue; a gold and a silver watch from Wm. Watson, 42 Mutual street; a medical directory from A. Ballard, 42 Mutual street, and a fountain pen and several other articles from Mrs. Jackson, who kept the rooming-house at 42 Mutual street, where McCauley boarded. All the articles were pawned.

Whitney and Fallon.

London, Oct. 29.—The London Canadian Club elected officers last night as follows: President, S. Frank Glass; first vice-president, T. J. Murphy; second vice-president, Jared Vining; secretary, John M. Gunn; treasurer, Robert Arkel.

The club has a membership of 228, and, under the presidency of C. B. Edwards, has just closed a most successful year.

Sir James Whitney and Bishop Fallon are likely to be the chief guests at the annual banquet, which is announced for an early date.

TEACHERS WILL FIGHT DISMISSAL

Montreal, Oct. 29.—The sequel to the dismissal of the five teachers of the Catholic School Commission on account of their alleged Freemasonry tendencies came yesterday when a writ of injunction was applied for by ex-Ald. St. Denis to compel the commission to reinstate the teachers.

The writ is returnable to-day, and a lively legal fight is promised as the whole question of Freemasonry may be reopened.

Western Materialism.

London, Oct. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Rev. Douglas Ellison, writing to the council of the archbishop's Western Canada fund, says:

"We are face to face in new towns with the potent force of materialism. Gross forms of vice are rampant, on Sundays, which under American influence are largely days of pleasure."

Contracts have already been let for clearing away the debris and Spencer's and other firms will rebuild at once.

THIS IS WHERE HE WAS "STUNG"

Pittsburg Millionaire Had Acustiphones Put in His Wife's House.

Pittsburg, Oct. 29.—In a desperate effort to learn the details of the defence which his beautiful English wife means to enter to his action for divorce, on the grounds of infidelity, Andrew W. Mellon, the millionaire banker of this city, spent thousands of dollars equipping his mansion on Forbes street with a remarkable invention by Thomas A. Edison, the acoustiphone.

Thirteen of these instruments, each one of which will magnify a whisper 1,000 times and carry it to any given point, were installed in the house by Mr. Mellon during his wife's absence, and arrangements which his wife held, either with her attorneys or her friends taken down in shorthand.

The servants in the house were apprised of Mr. Mellon's plans because it was impossible to install the instruments without their knowlege. The most liberal inducements were given them to keep the matter a secret, but one old servant, said to be the housekeeper, declaring that the plan was "despicable and contemptible," apprised her mistress of it, with the result that Mr. Mellon's spies were treated to some amazing conversations, not one of which will be of the slightest use in the litigation which is soon to come to a head in the courts.

When Mrs. Mellon, her attorney, Paul S. Asche, and her friends wearied of amusing themselves at the expense of Mr. Mellon and his agents, they took hatchets and chopped out all the carefully laid wires.

A group of New York bankers have signed an agreement for a $50,000,000 loan to China.

Charles Sutherland, district manager at Detroit for P. C. Larkin & Co. of Toronto, is dead.

David Gibson of New York was shot in mistake for a deer while hunting in North Vancouver.

Schott Bros.' safe at St. Thomas was blown open with nitro-glycerine, but the robbers secured less than a dollar.

Progress on the Toronto to Ottawa line of the Canadian Northern Railway is stopped by work on many bridges.

B. A. MacNab, managing editor of The Montreal Star, has severed his connection with that paper, being replaced by Edwin Beck of The Herald.

MILLIONAIRE CORPORAL REDUCED

Washington, Oct. 29.—To be reduced to the grade of private, and to be confined at hard labor for three months, and to forfeit $50 now due or to become due—this is the sentence imposed by a general court-martial at Fort Banks, Mass., upon Corporal Albert J. Myer, millionaire, clubman and society man, grandson of General Albert Myer, for whom Fort Myer, Va., was named.

The charge for which Myer was tried and found guilty was "neglect of duty, to the prejudice of good order and military discipline." Myer enlisted in the army after failing of appointment for West Point because he had passed the age limit. All last winter he was stationed at Fort Myer as an enlisted soldier in the Signal Corps. Raw rookies from middle-western farms last winter stood in silent awe as young Myer emerged from his corporal's uniform, donned faultlessly evening clothes and rolled away in a limousine to the exclusive drawing-rooms of wealthy Washington.

Being ordered from Fort Banks to Fort Myer on Aug. 17 last, Myer neglected to obey the order.

Candy a Food.

St. Catharines, Oct. 29.—Police Magistrate Campbell has disposed of two Sunday selling cases which have been dragged through the local Police Court for several days. Andrew Smith, proprietor of the King Edward Restaurant, was fined $5 for a breach of the Lord's Day Act, in selling cigars on Sunday. Joseph Rosenblatt, who sold candy in the Loraine Restaurants, was acquitted of wrong-doing, in view of the fact that the candy, being food, was sold in a bona fide licensed restaurant.

Y.M.C.A HAS INCREASED ITS MEMBERSHIP 60,000 IN 3 YEARS

Two Thousand Delegates Are Expected to Arrive by Monday—E. R. Wood of Toronto is Elected President For the Next Three Years.

Toronto, Oct. 29.—That the growth of the Y.M.C.A. movement had been larger in the last three years than in all the forty-one years of the organization, previously, was called to the attention of the conveners in Massey Hall yesterday afternoon by Dr. L. C. Warren, chairman of the international committee. In three years, he said, the membership had increased 60,000, and the value of the buildings had swollen to $16,787,000, or 50 per cent. increase.

"Nothing in this recent growth of the association," continued Dr. Warren, "has been more significant than the progress of the work in Canada. To the Washington convention your committee reported the increase of its Canadian membership, their organization as a Canadian section with an office and a working quorum in Montreal and with a force of international secretaries serving the Canadian Associations. The following members now constitute the Canadian section:

"Wm. M. Birks of Montreal, chairman; Albert Kingman, D. W. Ross, John W. Ross and Gerald W. Birks, also of Montreal; Harry Ryrie of Toronto, John Penman of Paris, Ont.; H. J. Crowe of Newfoundland, George F. Stephens of Winnipeg. As advisory members; D. A. Budge of Montreal, Samuel H. Blake and Robert A. Falconer of Toronto, and William Whyte of Winnipeg.

E. R. WOOD.

"The section continues to maintain a relation of leadership and great helpfulness to the supervision and development of association work throughout the Dominion. Under the wise administration of the Canadian section and the provincial committees, the development of association work among young men throughout the Dominion has been beyond precedent.

"In happy recognition of this rapid and significant progress the cordial invitation of the Toronto association to entertain this convention was gladly accepted by your committee."

Dr. Warren attributed the growth of the association to the close relationship maintained to the Christian Church. Out of the Y.M.C.A. movement had come a federation of churches. Eighteen million Christians were by it united in Christian uplift.

Toronto has proved a big drawing card for the delegates to the International Y.M.C.A. convention. It promises to be the biggest yet in point of numbers, according to the calculations of W. H. Morrison of Baltimore, chairman of the credential committee. Last evening 1,263 delegates had registered from all parts of Europe, Asia, United States and Canada, and 800 more are expected between to-day and Monday noon. This will give well over 2,000, while the last convention at Washington three years ago had only 1,468, and this was the largest response that had been recorded up to that time. The next largest prior again was in 1904, when 1,341 attended.

The convention did a great honor to Canada and Toronto last evening in electing E. R. Wood of this city president for the next three years. The announcement of his name was hailed with acclaim. Canada got a representation of three others on the official list, which is a very flattering percentage.

The vice-presidents are Cyrus H. McCormick, Chicago; Alfred E. Marling, New York; W. A. Bowen, Honolulu; Charles L. Huston, Coatsville, Penn.; Harry L. Pierson, Detroit; James D. Husted, Denver; F. A. McCormick, Sioux City, Iowa; John Penman, Paris, Ont.; E. G. Eberhart, South Bend, Ind.; J. C. Acheson, Danville, Ky.; John W. Ross, Montreal; James A. Dummott, Seattle.

Secretary, George E. Coxhead, St. Louis; assistant secretaries, T. D. Patten, Winnipeg; W. A. Lloyd, Jacksonville, and Harry Ballantyne, Calgary.

FOUND DEAD

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Oct. 29.—I understand that a man was found dead in a pool of water at Maberly, about 75 miles east of here, this week. I heard that his hands and feet were tied, but do not know if it is true. He belonged to a railroad construction gang and was of English birth. If you wish to hunt up particulars you could probably find out by wiring the C. P. R. operator at Maberly.

WM. BRYANS.

The above was flashed to the Review to-day by its Havelock correspondent. Maberly is a small station and the C. P.R. were unable to get a dispatch from their operator there owing to the rush of the Thanksgiving "wire traffic."

There is no phone connection with Maberly from Peterborough so it was impossible to get further particulars than those stated in the dispatch.

DANGEROUSLY WOUNDED; WAS SHOT BY AN ITALIAN

(Special To The Review.)

Havelock, Oct. 29.—Joseph Giveran, employee of Dunham & Robertson, contractors on the Trent River at Healey Falls, lies in the Belleville Hospital and may not recover, as a result of a fracas on Sunday last, when an unknown Italian shot him. Giveran and the man who did the shooting had some trouble over the selling of a revolver to the latter, who became dissatisfied and demanded his money back. This was refused, and the shooting followed. The Italian declares that the shooting was accidental. The bullet lodged at the base of the skull and the injury is a dangerous one.

CANADIAN BACON ETC. IN ENGLAND HOGS AND THEIR PRODUCT COME DOWN

(TRADE BULLETIN, MONTREAL FRIDAY OCT. 28th 1910)

Our cables to-day from London quote Canadian bacon 63s. to 67s. with a demoralized market which is a decline of 2s. to 3s. from last week, and shows a steep drop of about 20s. per cwt. from the highest point some time since. Canadian bacon in England and on the way there shows a heavy loss. Hogs in this market are lower at $7.50 to $7.75 live weight, but in Chicago they are quoted a little higher at $7.90 to $8.40 under very light receipts, which are all wanted for the home trade, chiefly in fresh meat. A singular feature in the Chicago market is that while the present prices of hogs range from $7.90 to $8.40, the May quotation for live hogs is $6.00 per 100 lbs. From this it would seem that prices will come down with a run as farmers are now putting their cheap corn into hogs, as well as pork, lard hams and bacon. Cash lard now selling at $13.25 in Chicago is offered at $9.80 for May. Canadian bacon selling in London to-day at 67s. cost packers 72s. to lay it down there.

Within the last two days bacon has declined to 60s. per 112 lbs. and our cable to-day reads as follows: "Danish bacon is selling at 60s. to 62s. Holders cannot clear. Market remains without improvement.

Cardinal Logue's Tribute.

London, Oct. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Responding to the presentation of an address of welcome on his return to Armagh, Cardinal Logue said the Eucharistic Congress had attained the highwater mark at Montreal. Nothing could surpass the magnificence of the display there. He gave his hearers a vivid description of scenes in Montreal and paid a tribute to the kindness and hospitality of Canadians of all creeds.

MADE BREAK FOR LIBERTY

New Westminster, B.C., Oct. 29.—Thursday there was an exciting termination to the trial of three convicts charged in the Assize Court with attempting to escape from the penitentiary, for they had just received their sentences and were being taken to the wagon when they made a determined break for freedom. Two of them, Patrick Mullin and William Ellis, were quickly caught, but the third man, Ernest Dodds, has not been found.

Mullin was in for manslaughter, and was a twenty-year man. He made a desperate fight when recaptured.

Calder, general agent at Seattle, succeeds A. C. Shaw, as general agent at Chicago. E. E. Penn, general agent at San Francisco, succeeds A. B. Calder as general agent at Seattle.

WAS KAISER IN DANGER?

Brussels, Oct. 29.—The extraordinary precautions taken Thursday night to protect Emperor William and Empress Auguste Victoria, when they left the city at 11 o'clock for Berlin, were explained yesterday when the police announced that a letter threatening His Majesty had been received at the royal palace on Thursday.

The communication was signed by a militant Brussels' anarchist and read: "Since no one has had the courage to blow up the German autocrat, I have decided to throw a bomb."

All of the windows of houses overlooking streets through which the royal party passed from the palace to the railway station were ordered closed temporarily, and the station itself was packed with troops.

MURDER POSTPONES MARRIAGE

Goderich, Oct. 29.—No license has been issued for the marriage of Albert Jardine, brother of the young man accused of murder, to Miss Anderson, sister of the victim of the recent murder. It was reported the date had been set for Monday last, but a postponement has been effected.

Edward Jardine was yesterday subjected to a medical examination to ascertain whether his apparent lame hip is genuine or affected.

It is stated that the physicians are convinced that his weakness is genuine, which would, they believe, render it impossible for him to have committed the crime alone.

ANOTHER "BLACK HAND" OUTRAGE

New York, Oct. 29.—A "Black Hand" bomb exploded on the ground floor of a four-storey tenement house on Washington street yesterday and smashed nearly every window in the structure, tore off plaster on three floors, and threw nearly all of the sixty or more occupants from their beds.

Essex Postoffice Dynamited.

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 29.—Robbers gained entrance to the Essex postoffice at an early hour yesterday morning, blew open the safe, and made off with $100 in cash and $300 worth of stamps.

The interior of the building was badly damaged.

NIAGARA POWER TO BE TRIED OUT

Guelph, Oct. 29.—Hydro-electric power from Niagara Falls will be passing through the wires and turning motors and lighting the houses, stores and streets of this city on Saturday, when the first tryout of the city's system with the power from the Falls will be made. Then, if the test is satisfactory, and the power can be secured regularly, the local light and heat department will begin using Niagara power from Monday on.

Ottawa, Oct. 29.—The following appointments have been promulgated by the Minister of the naval service:

AMERICAN CABLE POOL

London, Oct. 29.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Morning Post says there is little doubt that there is a prospect that all cable communications between Britain, United States and Canada will be pooled in an American combine.

The Standard also discusses the rumored combine and urges desirability and reasonableness of a Government-owned cable to Canada.

Retires After Thirty Years.

Regina, Sask., Oct. 29.—The retirement of Assistant Commissioner McIlree from the R.N.W.M.P., after 29 years of active service, was signalized at the Mounted Police barracks yesterday by an interesting ceremony, when Lieut.-Governor Brown presented him with the insignia of the Imperial Service Order.

Burglars at Whitby.

Whitby, Oct. 29.—Men who are apparently amateurs, early yesterday morning burglarized the stores of Wm. Pringle and George M. Rice. They also entered a third place, Harry Nickel's warehouse, on Dundas street east, from which place brass goods were stolen.

Stole Grain by Wagonload.

Stettler, Alta., Oct. 29.—Alfred N. Carey and Walter Conibear have been committed for trial on a charge of stealing grain by the wagonload from Ray S. Harrison and Charles Dennis.

The grain was traced by means of wagon tracks in the trails and on farms.

Ship With $700,000 Missing.

Seattle, Wash., Oct. 29.—The gasoline schooner, May Sachs, from Kolzeberg, bound for Nome, and carrying a crew of two and four miners from the Squirrel River diggings, with $700,000 in gold dust, is 23 days overdue at Nome.

Temporary Heat Quickly

Did you ever stop to think of the many ways in which a perfect oil heater is of value? If you want to sleep with your window open in winter, you can get sufficient heat from an oil heater while you undress at night, and then turn it off. Apply a match in the morning, when you get out of bed, and you have heat while you dress.

Those who have to eat an early breakfast before the stove is radiating heat can get immediate warmth from an oil heater, and then turn it off.

The girl who practices on the piano in a cold room in the morning can have warmth from an oil heater while she plays, and then turn it off.

The member of the family who has to walk the floor on a cold winter's night with a restless baby can get temporary heat with an oil heater, and then turn it off. The

LIFE IMPRISONMENT

Gorham is guilty of murder. He may be sentenced for life. The idea is horrible. A sentence of ten years leaves hope. The ten years will some time pass. A sentence of twenty years leaves the same hope. But life, my God! Hope dies on the prison doorstep. To-morrow I may be free, there is no to-morrow. In the year to come I may walk out a man again. There are no years to come. It's all a hopeless, happless round, the rising in the morning, the cell, the guard, the rattle of the keys that lock the cell, the rattle of the keys that unlock it. Hanging seems merciful to this.

NIGHT AND DAY

Night and Day is on the desk. Splendidly named, this is the title on the front page of a magazine published in the interests of the Barnardo Homes. Poor kids, it is night for a waif in the old land, a night that is blacker than our blackest, a prospect that is without a single hope. Sleeping in boxes, in barrels, under steps, in halls—anywhere, everywhere. Kicked by father, if he has one, cuffed by mother, if she owns him, his lot is hell. It is here that the Barnardo people step in. They wash the youngster, they clothe him. They teach him that all kindness is not dead. They educate him. They ship him or ship her away to new environment. Many a man has made good who once was a waif, many a woman is to-day a happy mother, a queen in a little home, who once was an outcast till touched by some good angel from the Barnardo Home.

THE MAN WOMAN

At the Crystal Theatorium this week was shown the picture of a woman suffragette. She addressed public meetings. Her children were neglected at home. Her husband returned from his office to find the table unset, the dishes unwashed, and the house untidy. His wife was endeavoring to regulate the affairs of the nation. We have no sympathy for the Amazon. They are a relic of the past. A woman's place is not forever rocking the cradle or making pies, or bread, or beds, or washing dishes. A woman's place is first of all to rear a family, to shed her gentle and refining influences abroad through her children. A woman's place is minding her own business, and if she does that well she will have very little time attending to other people's or the greater affairs of the nation.

THE NURSE

The entire nursing staff of a Brantford hospital "walked out" the other day and left the sick Brantfordites all wailing and gnashing their teeth because there were none to run around ministering unto them.

At first thought one's heart goes out to the waiting patients, but on second thought one's heart goes out also to the striking nurses. The reason for their "walk-out" was a simple one—they were overworked.

Nursing is the noblest work in which it is granted to woman to engage. It is likewise the most fatiguing, the most exacting upon the reserves of both physical and mental power.

In view of this, is it not a fair and reasonable demand that provision should be made for working hours which will not sap the mental and bodily vigor of those engaged in this profession?—Ottawa Free Press.

The day is past when a girl jilted in love, becomes a nurse to forget it all. Nursing to-day has advanced till to secure a good nurse is as important as to have a good doctor.

The nurse should have plenty of recreation. She knows enough of sighing, crying, moaning and tossing. She knows the fevered brow, the coming out from the chloroform, the dressing of sores and cuts. She is acquainted with cranks on the sick bed—those who are not half as sick as they think they are. She knows life's sorrows. The good nurse takes all the load the patient will give her. She belongs to no union. Why not give them a gymnasium, a recreation hall? Our sympathies are with the Brantford nurses who walked out.

THANKSGIVING DAY

We are glad Thanksgiving Day is coming. It gives us a chance to put on our double windows, to put on the double door. We can mend our shattered coal bin and put in the light of glass that is broken in the cellar window. We are thankful that Thanksgiving Day is coming. The man who boards will see a real chicken, a real duck, a goose or a turkey on the table. We are thankful Thanksgiving is coming. The man who wants to fix up his patch of land which he calls his garden can do so and not be docked. He can trim the vines, and if snow flies he can rake the leaves. The Dominion is thankful that Thanksgiving Day is near. It can lie abed in the morning, what more could be asked? In the prisons, in the jails, they are glad. They'll have a full stomach for once, full of good things—poor devils. May it be fair; may we enjoy ourselves, and if any must drink, may they not make a hog of themselves in our thankfulness.

THE DIVINE SPARK

A Pole, who was confined in the corrective institution at Guelph for a minor offence, escaped and got as far as Galt. Judge Chadwick, Guelph, gave him one year more when he was brought back to Guelph. Some papers are already making light of Provincial Secretary Hanna's attempt to make it as easy as possible to live right.

Regarding this corrective institution in the Royal City, the Toronto Star has the following—

> According to Captain A. H. St. John, secretary of the Penal Reform League, who was a visitor at the Parliament Buildings to-day, Ontario's new prison farm at Guelph is the most important experiment in the way of punitive and corrective institution at present going on in the world.
>
> Captain St. John came to America to attend the Prison Congress, and has also visited the principal prisons on the continent.
>
> "I was very much taken," said Capt. St. John, speaking of the Guelph institution, "with the amount of freedom given to the prisoners and the trust put in them. The great thing, to my mind, is the building with all its windows, open at top and bottom, and with no cells, and that there are 160 men there, with only three officers in charge.
>
> "It seems to me to be a great pioneer work. We in England will be watching this experiment with tremendous interest. What we want to know is what is going to happen when the whole Central Prison is moved out there. Is it going to be the old-fashioned cell building? If you go back to the old form it will mean a set-back to the prison reform movement throughout the world.
>
> "There is a difficult problem to secure two things. The first is that the prisoners shall not be locked in cells. The second is that they should have privacy. Of course, it is not privacy when a man is locked in a cell, the door of which can only be opened from the outside, and contains a keyhole through which a guard may see at any time just what the prisoner is doing. And to restore a man's self-respect you must give him privacy. Can they manage so to trust the prisoners as to give them privacy and yet not lock the doors on them? If you can do that in Ontario you will lead the world."

We have firm faith in Mr. Hanna's ideas in regard to the Guelph institution.

There is good in every man. It doesn't make a bit of difference whether he speaks English or Yiddish, German or Russian—there is good in him somewhere. You may have to scrape off the dirt on his body and the rust off his mind, and filth from his soul, but there's good there, and it's this good that Secretary Hanna is after, and it is this good, this spark of the Divine, that he will find.

WHO WANTS IT?

"Reciprocity with the United States Who wants it?" Is the heading of an article by Hon. Geo. E. Foster, appearing in a recent issue of the Canadian Century.

Mr. Foster shows that prior to the surtax negotiations at Ottawa and Albany last spring, Canada gave the United States a free list of $90,000,000 or one half the total imports from that country. The United States gave Canada a free list of only $33,000,000. Canada's tariff averaged about half as high as the American tariff. Canada bought $139,000,000 worth of goods from the United States, the latter purchased $93,000,000 worth from Canada and took the balance in cash. In every respect Canada's commercial treatment of the United States was generous and favorable and profitable for that country.

Yet despite all this the Payne Tariff threatened the Dominion with a penalty tax of 25 per cent. of the value of all its exports to the Republic in addition to the general tariff schedules set forth in the Act. Mr. Foster regards the threat as barbarous, as unchristian, as unholy, unlikely to have been enforced, and as in fact a mere bluff. That public opinion in the United States would never have permitted the maximum clauses of the tariff to have been applied to Canadian goods is proved by the wide spread character of the insurgent movement in the Republican party. The average American would have protested against the tariff soaring to 57 per cent. Moreover, Canada would have replied by charging a heavy surtax on all United States goods. The result would have been the dislocation of the great portion of the $300,000,000 of trade which we do annually with the Republic.

It was very generous indeed of Sir Wilfrid Laurier to rescue President Taft from his tariff difficulties this year. Now those difficulties have increased, and Mr. Foster argues that no obligation rests upon Sir Wilfrid Laurier to come to President Taft's rescue a second time.

The present is the most inopportune of times for Canada to negotiate. Negotiations should proceed upon equal conditions, and to-day conditions are grossly unfair. Let the leaven work in the United States; let the Americans pare down their exorbitant duties and give us fair reciprocity on tariffs. Meantime we can adjust our own tariffs to our own needs. We should not sacrifice our own fiscal freedom and the abundant prosperity of the country for the Republican party's advantage.

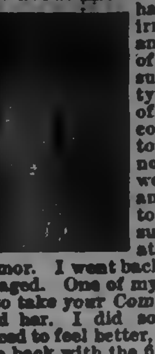
SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Bellerivet, Que.—"Without Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I would not be alive. For five months I had painful and irregular periods and inflammation of the uterus. I suffered like a martyr and thought often of death. I consulted two doctors who could do nothing for me. I went to a hospital, and the best doctors said I must submit to an operation, because I had a tumor. I went back home much discouraged. One of my cousins advised me to take your Compound, as it had cured her. I did so and soon commenced to feel better, and my appetite came back with the first bottle. Now I feel no pain and am cured. Your remedy is deserving of praise."—Mrs. EMMA CHATEL, Valleyfield, Bellerive, Quebec.

Another Operation Avoided.

Adrian, Ga.—"I suffered untold misery from female troubles, and my doctor said an operation was my only chance, and I dreaded it almost as much as death. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured me without an operation."—LENA V. HENRY, R.F.D. 3.

Thirty years of unparalleled success confirms the power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure female diseases.

Made Her Kidneys right with Dodd's Kidney Pills and all her Troubles Vanished speedily and completely.

Eel Creek, Cumberland Co., N. S. October 24th. Suffering from female, kidney and heart trouble, so run down, nervous and depressed that all the brightness had gone out of her life, and never expecting to be a healthy woman again, Mrs. J. W. Leadbetter of this place tried Dodd's Kidney Pills, and is once more in the best of health. Her simple statement is the best evidence that no case of Kidney Disease is so bad that Dodd's Kidney Pills will not cure it.

"I was treated by five doctors," Mrs. Leadbetter states. "Four of them did me no good. The fifth operated on me and that gave me relief for a time. I had Female, Kidney and Heart trouble. I was so nervous and run down that my friends did not think I would ever get better.

"An advertisement led me to use Dodd's Kidney Pills and I found in them a cure for all my troubles. I cannot praise Dodd's Kidney Pills too highly."

Female Trouble and Heart Disease are caused by Kidney Disease. The natural way to cure them is to cure the Kidneys by using Dodd's Kidney Pills.

EGYPT TO MODERN EYES

The Review publishes to-day the first of a series of three letters or articles, prepared for the paper by Mrs. Charlotte K Taylor, of Harmondsworth, Yewdsley, Eng., descriptive of incidents of travel and sight-seeing in Egypt and the Bible Lands. Mrs. Taylor will be remembered by many of our readers as Miss Charlotte Strickland, daughter of Mr. Robert Strickland, of Lakefield, but now residing with his daughter at the vicarage, Yewdsley.

Mrs. Taylor writes most graphically of what she has seen, and only briefly at that, for a five months' tour cannot be compressed in its narrative into a few columns of the Review.

Her first letter is entitled "Egypt and the Nile," and it is that which appears in this issue. It will be followed by another entitled, "Christmas Eve at Bethelem," and the third, "A Visit to Jericho." The two later articles will be profusely illustrated. Mrs. Taylor having supplied some interesting photographs of the remarkable excavations now being made at Jericho and showing portions of the ancient walls of the old city.

Mrs. Taylor writes a brief preface to her letter and introduces herself to our readers.

To the Readers of the Review, at Peterborough, Canada.

Here in the Holy Land, and in this historic city connected with the sacred life and time from which even the dates for our state documents, our daily papers, or our letters are taken, my thoughts go back to you and the scenes with which, some 30 years ago, I was familiar; and I have wandered if some of the old friends of those bygone days would care to have my impression, as a Canadian, of this Holy Land and Holy City.

Our mutual friend, the courteous editor of your Review, which finds its way even here and to England, assures me that you will be interested and also that the younger readers, the sons and daughters of my old friends, will like to hear something about the land where the Bible was written, and its scenes enacted, from one who is even now sojourning at Jerusalem.

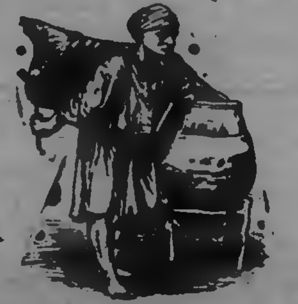
During the months of travel I have kept a full diary or record, and from these I will select what will interest you, and forward the same from time to time to your editor, for insertion in your Review. Of one thing you may be assured, namely, that in spite of some faults in these same articles, you will have a truthful and up-to-date account from an eye witness of people and places as they are to-day in the Holy Land.

Yours very truly,
Charlotte (Strickland) Taylor

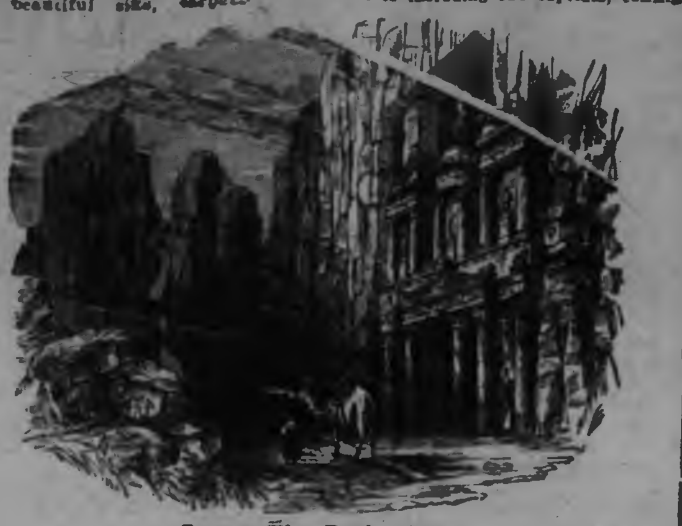
EXTRACTS FROM MY DIARY IN THE HOLY LAND—No. 1.

December 18, 1909.

Here we are at Jaffa, the ancient Joppa of the Bible (Acts ix. 36-38) the first point in the Holy Land which the traveller from Europe or America touches. It is a great change from Egypt, from the hot Suez Canal under the shadowing statue of its great designer, Mons. de Lesseps, from where we sailed away last evening as the sun was dipping down from a golden ball into the blue waters of the Mediterranean. From Egypt, the sunny, the fascinating land, shadowing with wings, and brilliant alike in sunshine and moonlight, and delightfully warm (and sometimes inconveniently hot) even in December. We have been touring there for seven enjoyable weeks, a large and happy party of seven, with our four daughters and my dear father, whose hairs are white now with eighty winters (your old acquaintance, Mr. Robt. A. Strickland, of Lakefield, in former years). We stayed a fortnight in Cairo, that city which is like Paris in the east, and did all the sightseeing possible there, visiting the grand mosques (Mohammedan temples) and the bazaars, with their beautiful silks, carpets, and brass wares; also going down into Old Cairo, where the cave where the Holy Family sojourned on their flight into Egypt is turned into a Coptic church. Then we punted across to the Island of Rhoda, among whose bullrushes Moses was hidden, and found by Thermuthis, the Pharaoh's daughter, who used the island as her summer resort.



Water Seller, Cairo



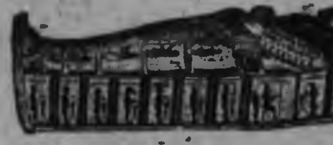
Petra—The Rock City

Then we climbed up to the citadel, for its magnificent view over all Cairo, and saw away to the west in the setting glory of the sun, those grand old pyramids, one of the wonders of the world, the very oldest buildings in the world, old even when Abraham came wandering down into Egypt in search of corn for his retinue. We made many expeditions, too, from Cairo, going out one day to see those great Thizeh pyramids and riding round the desert sands in which they stand with the great stone Sphinx keeping watch before them now for some 5,000 years. And another expedition out to Memphis, the buried city, three miles long, where Moses was reared, and where the great prostrate statue of Rameses II., the supposed Pharaoh from whom he fled into Midian (Ex. II.) is the gazing stock of the traveller, who mounts the wooden bridge to gaze down at the great stone face, over which they have created it, and then on to Sappara, the vast necropolis of Old Memphis, with its numbers of wonderful painted tomb chambers, dug out from the sands where they have lain buried for centuries, with pictures of the Egyptians 20 or 30 centuries ago, painted on the walls as fresh as if the blue and green and red were only put on but yesterday.

Tomb of the Mamelukes

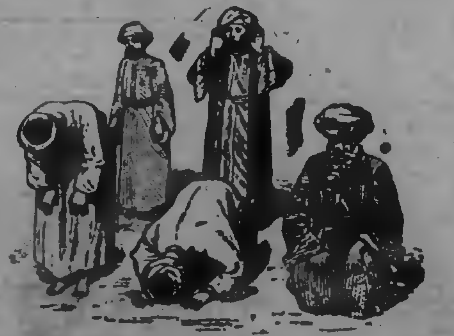
And another expedition to On, or Heopolis of later days, where Joseph got his bride (Gen. xli. 45-50), and where stood the big university, the Cambridge and Oxford of Egypt, of which Herodotus tells us; where Plato came to be educated in after times, and where, doubtless, Moses became "learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians." (Acts vii. 22.) We gazed at its one tall pillar which stood with three others at the entrance of that university, erected, as itself states, by Usertsen I., about 2700, B.C., and we walked along the top of the ruins of its broad walls and saw Arab women squatting on them, grinding what you call Indian corn in Canada, and what the Egyptians call durrha, and which their monuments tell us they grew in Egypt in the time of Joseph. After a fortnight of sightseeing and being eaten by mosquitoes in Cairo, we went on up by the luxurious railway to Luxor, the fashionable winter resort of the invalids from Europe and America alike, who live expensively in the magnificent winter palace, which Cook, of world-wide fame, has put up there. Of course we put up at a more modest pension (hotel) but we had a glorious three weeks seeing that wonderful place. First the temple of Karnak, the very biggest temple ever reared, being built and added to by successive Pharaohs, both Seti I., (who drowned the Hebrew babies in the Nile, it is supposed), and his greater son Rameses II., had the greater hand in erecting it. They put up the famous Hypostyle Hall of 134 pillars.

Some of these pillars, 80 feet high, that is including the capitals, taking seven men, all holding hands to go round each pillar! There, too, stands the biggest obelisk in the world, but up by the "Queen Elizabeth of Egyptian History," the great Queen Hatasu, who lived some 200 years before Rameses II, or Moses. She put a fleet on the Red Sea 500 years before Solomon or King Hiram sent their navy to Ophir, where she, too, got ivory and monkeys and peacocks. She has told you the whole story of this on the walls of her own beautiful Temple just across the river from Luxor, "Darel Bahari," and where three years ago on our first visit to Egypt we met.



Egyptian Mummy Case

Mr. Curtely, the Canadian excavator from Toronto, hard at work with Naville, the great Egyptologist, who kindly gave us a delicious cup of tea and told us some of the wonders of that wonderful valley of the dead in the great necropolis of "Thebes," where Hatasu's Temple stands and where all the Kings and Queens of Egypt are buried where they have discovered the mummies of the Pharaohs—poor old Rameses II., the Pharaoh of Moses among them, whose mummy we saw in its glass case in the Cairo Museum with its one pathetic lock of white hair and one queer little tooth. We took our daughters for a long day's ride all through that wonderful Valley of Tombs and Thebes, a sight and a day they will never forget, diving down into those tombs hewn out of the solid rock, into which they burrowed, those strange Egyptians. Some day I will tell you all about it, why they took such pains to hide their bodies and how strange were the lights down in those great tomb chambers; but I am only taking you for a hasty glimpse of Egypt on our way to Palestine, so I will only stay now to give any of you who may day visit Egypt a piece of advice, namely, be sure and ask for Mustapha No. 90, at Luxor, if you want a donkey man. He will supply you with the best donkeys and pay you such attention. And so to finish with Egypt we had lastly a week at Oswan away up 960 miles on the River Nile (beside the first cataract which we "shot" the day we all went up in a big sailing smack) to see the barrage and the island of Philee beyond. That was a red letter in our lives. We had a crew of light hearted, black skinned nubians, fine brawny armed fellows with dazzling teeth, who chanted their native songs as they rowed, and seemed to enjoy having our party to take up the river. The captain of the boat was a dignified, middleaged man, the father of several of the younger members of the crew, and he informed us with much pride that he had been "captain" to Lord Kitchener's boatmen when he was in the Soudan. He certainly steered us splendidly among those cataracts.



Mohammedan Postures of Prayer, Egypt

Some day I will give you a full description of that wonderful barrage or "Nile Dam" one of the finest pieces of engineering this last century has ever seen and you shall see some engravings of my beautiful photos of the picturesque Island of Philee, which alas! is doomed to be engulphed in the Nile when they have completed the raising of that barrage another 125 feet over which the natives are now hard at work. How you Canadians would stare at those native workers and the way they do their work.

I am loath to leave Egypt though it is such a fascinating old-time land. You seem to go back ages in the history of the world there, and one thing, you get the most beautiful sunsets it is possible to see anywhere, and you see the most wonderful river in the world, the Nile. For one thing it is the longest river in the world, longer even than the rivers in your America. From start to finish, from up in the great Nyanza Lakes, and down to the Delta, where it flows, many mouthed, into the Mediterranean Sea; it is 4,000 miles long. It is the most historic river in the world, except the Euphrates, and to float down the Nile in a big dahabeyeh to the chant of the Nile boatmen, and watch the burning field, splendor of the sunset sky over the Theba hills melt into violet and gold, and then into tender green and amber till the night draws her curtain of deep blue and sets her silver moon there and brings out her diamond stars one by one till the river itself becomes jewelled by reflection, is a sight which once seen will never be forgotten. It just makes you feel what a man was Moses, who "esteemed the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures of Egypt," and who (Hebrews 1, 26) preferred sandy deserts with God's presence to the beauties and luxuries of Egypt without Him.

That landing, too, at Joppa is a thing you would never forget, but not because it is enjoyable. The ship can never land you at the shore for the good reason that there is no landing stage nor pier. Properly speaking, it is not a port at all, and the surf before the shore is full of black, ragged rocks, which forbid the approach of any ship. So, in calm weather you anchor in front of Joppa and the boats come out to take you in to shore among the rocks, and in stormy weather you can't land at all, but have to go all the way up the coast to Beyrout instead. Our last experience was an awful one, which I would rather forget. To-day it was calm—in Joppa, that is—so we landed in boats, which were rowed out to us with the usual amount of shouting, yelling and general noise and excitement, without which they never do anything in the east. Then you have to descend by a narrow staircase swinging from the side of the vessel down to the boat below, which even on a fine day like this, bobs up and down like a cork on the waves. When you have succeeded in cautiously descending that wet and slippery ladder, two waiting sailors grab you and prepare to fling you down into the boat the next time it bobs up. A blue strip of sea rolls between you and the boat as you feel yourself being lifted off your feet and swinging in the air. Are you going to the bottom of the deep blue sea? You shut your eyes and cling desperately to the men who are throwing you. Two other pairs of hands clutch you round your skirts, and the next moment, as the boat goes down, down, between the waves, you are helplessly deposited on your nearest neighbor's lap and engaged in crushing the next neighbor's corns. You apologise profusely rise and lurch on to a farther neighbor's toes, knocking half a dozen hats over as many people's eyes on the way. But at last, amid much noise and shouting we were all in safely, and off, and the brawny Joppa sailors are guiding the bobbing boats over the dancing waves between the dangerous rocks and reefs, and we land in due time at Jaffa, the ancient Joppa. We have missed the early train for Jerusalem, which left an hour before we landed, and as we have to wait for the only next train at 1.30, we take carriages and see the old sea coast town. First, we drive to the house of Simon the tanner, where tradition says St. Peter had the vision on the roof. (Acts ix. 5-9). Jerusalem Walls Wailia Take Your

RUGBY GAME BETWEEN LOCAL AND TORONTO TEAMS

The Collegiates promise a great game of rugby for the holiday afternoon when they play the Jarvis street Collegiate team, of Toronto, at Riverside Park.

The locals willl present a stronger line-up than on previous occasions. New faces will appear, and they with the other members have had good workouts for the past couple of weeks.

The visitors are a classy fourteen and enthusiastic exponents of the rugby game. Their record so far this season has been a creditable one and will give the Collegiates a big struggle. The attendance at the contest should be large. Considerable expense is incurred by bringing the Toronto team here, and no doubt the boys will get a liberal hand.

LOCAL RUNNER CLEANED UP THREE MILE EVENT

The only local entry at the Port Hope Y.M.C.A. Harriers' meet last night was Harold H. Smith, and he was an easy winner in the three mile event, taking the honors by 125 yards. Smith made the distance in 16.20. The track was 14 laps to the mile.

In the one mile for seniors the local runner took second, with J. Caldwell, of Trinity College School, first. Not more than a yard separated the two.

Medals were given as prizes. The attendance was large and the meet was very successful.

Smith and Willis willl take part in the athletic program at Deseronto on the holiday.

WAGNER TO GET BUMPS

Pittsburg, Oct. 29.—There will be a complete reorganization of the Pirates before the next baseball season opens. Manager Clarke has been ordered to report in December, and the work of building up a new team will start. A sensation was caused here to-day when it became known that President Dreyfuss was willing to trade 'Honus' Wagner if he could secure good men in exchange for him. The contracts will have an ironclad anti-drink clause not even a glass of beer being allowed the players.

CLEVER WINDOW DISPLAY

In pleasing harmony with this season of the year is the window arrangement of E. N. McWilliams' hat and fur store, George street, and which attracts considerable favorable comment from passers by.

Overhead the window is gracefully strung with festoons of gold and yellow autumn leaves, while on either side are woodland effects with squirrels, both red and black, visible, the whole scene presenting a natural sylvan scene. In the middle of the window is built a fireplace of stones, over which a kettle is suspended from a couple of forked limbs. A leafy carpet heightens the resemblance to a forest scene. Pumpkin jacko-lanterns, which, when illuminated at night by electricity, convey to the mind the very spirit of Hallowe'en time. The display will no doubt attract considerable more attention at night.

The creation is the work of Mr Arthur Weart, and reveals a sense of what is a becoming window decoration for this season of the year.

MUST RETRACT THE STATEMENTS

(REPORT IN NEWS IS DENIED)

Under the heading "Were Witnesses Tampered With," the Toronto News of Friday, Oct. 28, publishes the following—

TAMPERING WITH WITNESSES

Crown Attorney Wood, when seen by the News, was very reticent in speaking about the affair. "All I can say is that we have good reason to believe our witnesses have been tampered with, and I have instructed the police to hold a full investigation into the affair."

The chief admitted he was holding an investigation, but was also uncommunicative. "I believe we know who the guilty persons are, but I will make no definite statement," he said.

George Gordon, of O'Connell & Gordon, counsel for the defence, when seen by the News, denied all knowledge of anything improper about the trial. "The only thing that I can think of that would look as if the Crown witnesses had been approached was when I spoke to them to ascertain a general outline of their evidence.

PROTECTING HIS CLIENT.

"I did this only to protect my client," continued Mr. Gordon. "I never spoke to any witness about changing a line of his evidence, but I did want to know what he knew before he was seen by the police. I am ready to answer any charge the police like to bring against me, for I know that we conducted the trial in a fair manner."

In connection with the above Mr. G. N. Gordon, of O'Connell and Gordon, who conducted the case in the interests of James Gorham, stated to the Review to-day that he had written the editor of the Toronto News asking that paper to retract the statement published, as it is not correct in any sense.

County Crown Attorney Wood and Chief of Police Thompson have made and signed the statements given below—

Dear Sirs,—Referring to the statement contained in the Toronto News of the 28th inst., re the Gorham trial, I beg to say that I never made such a statement to the News reporter, nor did I tell him I knew the guilty parties, nor that I was instructed to hold an investigation.

Yours truly,
(Signed) D. THOMPSON,

The reporter stated than an investigation had been directed, and my reply was that I had not heard of it.

Yours truly,

A Gentleman From Mississippi

By THOMAS A. WISE

Novelized From the Play by Frederick R. Toombs

COPYRIGHT, 1909, BY THOMAS A. WISE

Not all the Washington lobbyists are outside of congress. The senator or congressman has unequaled facilities for oiling or blocking the course of a bill. Sometimes he confines himself to the interests of his own clients, whoever they may be. But sometimes he sees a bill that promises to be a pretty good thing for the client of some other member if it passes. Then he begins to fight this bill so actively that he must be "let in on the deal" himself. This is very annoying to the other member, but the experience is worth something. He has learned the value of observing other people's legislation.

The outsiders (members of the "third house") and the insiders have a bond of freemasonry uniting them; they exchange information as to what members of both houses can be "reached," how they can be "got to" (through whom) and how much they want. This information is carefully tabulated, and now prices for passing or defeating legislation can be quoted to interested parties just as the price of a carload of pork can be ascertained at a given time and place. Perhaps it is this system that lends grafting members of short experience to wonder how knowledge of their taking what is termed "the sugar" got out and became known to their associates. Did they not have pledge of absolute secrecy? Yes, but the purchaser never intended to keep the information from those of his kind. Lobbyists must be honest with each other.

Not all lobbyists are men. The woman legislative agent has been known to occupy an important position in Washington, and she does yet. She is hard to detect and frequently more unprincipled than the men similarly engaged, if that is possible.

A woman with a measure of social standing would naturally prove the most successful as a lobbyist in Washington because of the opportunities her position would afford her to meet people of prominence. And just such a one was Mrs. Cora Spangler, with whom the Langdons had been thrown in contact quite intimately since their arrival at the capital.

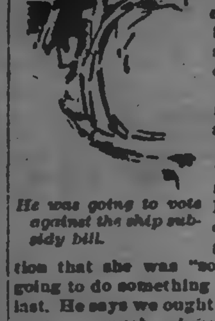
Pretty and vivacious, Mrs. Spangler bore her thirty-seven years with uncommon ease, aided possibly by the makeup box and the modiste. Her dinners and receptions were attended by people of acknowledged standing. Always a lavish spender of money, this was explained as possible because of a fortune left her by her late husband, Congressman Spangler of Pennsylvania. That this "fortune" had consisted largely of stock and bonds of a bankrupt copper smelting plant in Michigan remained unknown, except to her husband's family, one or two of her own relatives and Senator Peabody, who, coming from Pennsylvania, had known her husband intimately.

He it was who had suggested to her that she might make money easily by cultivating the acquaintance of the new members of both houses and their families, exerting her influence in various "perfectly legitimate ways," he argued, for or against matters pending in legislation. The Standard Steel corporation kept Mrs. Spangler well supplied with funds deposited monthly to her account in a Philadelphia trust company.

She avoided suspicion by reason of her sex and her many acquaintances of undisputed rank. Senator Peabody was never invited to her home, had never attended a single dinner, reception or musicale she had given, all of which was a part of the policy they had mutually agreed on to deaden any suspicion that might some time arise as to her relation to the Standard Steel company. It was well known that Peabody had been put into the senate by Standard Steel to look after its interests.

He had found Mrs. Spangler chiefly valuable thus far as a source of information regarding the members of congress, which she obtained largely from their families. He was thus able to gain an idea of their associations, their particular interests and their aspirations in coming to congress, which proved of much use to him in forming and promoting acquaintances, all for the glory of Standard Steel.

Senator Holcomb of Missouri told Mrs. Spangler, at an afternoon tea confidentially that he was going to vote against the ship subsidy bill. Senator Peabody was informed of this two hours later by a note written in cipher. When the vote was called two days later Senator Holcomb voted for the bill. Standard Steel supplies steel for ocean liners, and their building must be encouraged.



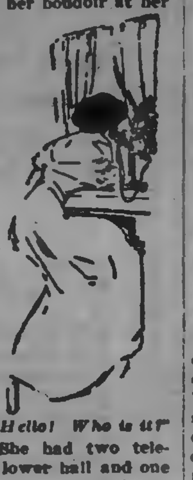
He was going to vote against the ship subsidy bill.

Mrs. Windsor, wife of Congressman Windsor of Indiana, remarked to Mrs. Spangler at a reception that she was "so glad Jimmie is going to do something for us women at last. He says we ought to get silk gowns ever so much cheaper next year." Jimmie Windsor was a member of the house committee on ways and means and was busily engaged in the matter of tariff revision. When President Anders of the Federal Silk company heard from Senator Peabody that Windsor favored lowering the tariff on silk a way was found to convince the congressman that the American silk industry was a weakling and many investors would suffer if the foreign goods should be admitted any cheaper than at present.

President Anders would be willing to do Senator Peabody a favor some day.

Sometimes Cora Spangler shuddered at the thought of what would become of her if she should make some slip, some fatal error, and be discovered to her friends as a betrayer of confidences for money. A secret agent of Standard Steel! What a newspaper story she would make—"Society Favorite a Paid Spy;" "Woman Lobbyist Flees Capital." The sensational headlines flitted through her mind. Then she would grit her teeth and dig her finger nails into her palms. She had to have money to carry on the life she loved so well. She must continue as she had begun. After all, she reasoned, nothing definite could ever be proved regarding the past. Let the future care for itself. She might marry again and free herself from this mode of life, who knows?

So reasoned Cora Spangler for the hundredth time during the last two years as she sat in her boudoir at her home. She had spent part of the day with Carolina and Hope Langdon and in the evening had attended the musicale at their house. But she had been forced to leave early owing to a severe headache. Now, after an hour or two of rest, she felt better and was about to retire. Suddenly the telephone bell rang at a writing table near a window. She had two telephones, one in the lower hall and one in her boudoir—to save walking downstairs unnecessarily, she explained to her woman friends. But the number of this upstairs telephone was not in the public book. It had a private number, known to but two people except herself.



"Hello! Who is it?"

Taking down the receiver, she asked in low voice, "Hello, who is it?"

"Mr. Wall."

It was the name Senator Peabody used in telephone conversation with her.

"Yes, congressman!" she responded.

She always said "Yes, congressman," in replying to "Mr. Wall," a prearranged manner of indicating that he was talking to the desired person.

"I will need your services tomorrow," Senator Peabody said, "on a very important matter, I am afraid. Decline any engagements and hold yourself in readiness."

"Yes."

"I may send my friend S. to explain things at 10:30 in the morning. If he does not arrive at that time, telephone me at 10:35 sharp. You know where. Understand? I have put off going to Philadelphia tonight."

"Yes."

"That is all; goodby."

"Something very important," she murmured nervously as she turned from the desk.

"I don't like his tone of voice; sounds strained and worried—something unusual for the cold, flinty gentleman from Pennsylvania. And his 'friend S.,' of course, means Stevens! Great heavens, then Stevens must now have knowledge of my—my—business!"

She calmed herself and straightened a dainty, slender finger against her cheek.

"It must be something about that naval base bill, I'm sure. That's been worrying Peabody all session," she mused as she pressed a button to summon her maid.

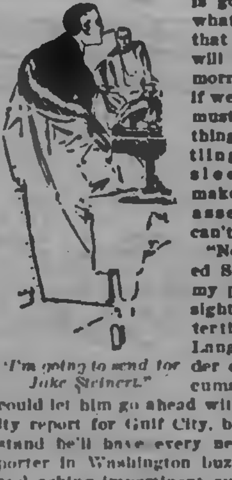
CHAPTER XXIII.

"THE BOSS OF THE SENATE" GAINS A NEW ALLY.

Mrs. Spangler would have flattered herself on guessing correctly as to Senator Peabody's uneasiness had she heard and seen all that had taken place in his apartment at the Louis Napoleon hotel, where he had hurriedly taken Senator Stevens on leaving the Langdon house.

Not only would the two senators lose their immense profits on the Altacoola transaction if Langdon persisted in his opposition, but they would lose as well the thousands of dollars spent by their agents in purchasing options on hundreds of acres and, where they could not get options, the land itself. This land would be on their hands, unsalable, if the base went somewhere else. Moreover, they feared that Langdon's revolt would bring unpleasant newspaper publicity to their operations.

"There's only one course to pursue, Stevens," snapped Peabody as they took off their overcoats. "That is to be prepared as best we can for the very worst and meet it in some way yet to be determined. But first we must try to figure out what Langdon is going to do—what it can be that he says he will tell us tomorrow at 12:30 if we appear. He must have something very startling up his sleeve if he makes good his assertions. I can't see how"—



"I'm going to send for Jake Steinert."

"Nor I," frowned Stevens, "and my political eyesight is far better than that fool Langdon's. Under ordinary circumstances we could let him go ahead with his minority report for Gulf City, but as things stand he'll have every newspaper reporter in Washington buzzing around and asking impertinent questions"—

"Yes, and you and I would have to go to Paris to live with our life insurance friends from New York, wouldn't we?" laughed Peabody sarcastically. "I'm going to send for Jake Steinert," he added.

"Steinert?" Stevens ejaculated. "What"—

IMPOVERISHED BLOOD

A Common and a Dangerous Trouble—You Must Enrich The Blood to Escape Danger

Anaemia is simply a lack of blood. It is one of the most common and at the same time most dangerous diseases with which growing girls suffer. It is common because the blood so often becomes impoverished during development, when girls are too frequently allowed to over-study, overwork and suffer from a lack of exercise. It is dangerous because of the stealthiness of its approach, often being well developed before its presence is recognized, and because of its tendency to grow so steadily worse, if not promptly checked, that it may run into consumption.

The value of the tonic treatment with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills should be known to every mother in the land. These Pills make new, rich blood, tone the organs and nerves, bring a glow of health to pale, sallow cheeks, and drive away the weakness, headaches, faintness, heart palpitation and loss of energy so noticeable in young girls who are suffering from anaemia. To all such Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are an actual life saver. Miss Mabel McTavish, Prince Albert, Sask., says: "In my case I can only say that life had lost its magic; all work was a trial and even pleasure only a task. When I went up a flight of stairs I was ready to drop from sheer weakness, and I had begun to think life would be a continued burden. But all this is now changed, thanks to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These were recommended to me, and after taking them for about a month I found my health renewed. I could sleep better, my appetite returned, and I was so strong and well that housework was no longer a burden to me. My sister seemed to be going the same way last summer and Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were at once sent for and two boxes made her as well as ever. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are now the prized medicine in our home, and doctor bills have been fewer since we discovered the virtues of this great medicine."

Sold by all medicine dealers or sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE FORMULA OF "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

Is On The Outside Of Every Box For All The World To See

Every user of "Fruit-a-tives" knows exactly what is being taken. The formula of this famous fruit medicine is printed plainly on the outside of every box. We have stated many times—and now state clearly—that "Fruit-a-tives" is made of the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, with valuable heart and nerve tonics and antiseptics.

Everyone knows that fruit juice is healthful—but perhaps some do not understand why this is true.

Fruit juice consists of about 91% water, 8% of sweet principle, and 1% of a bitter substance. It is the quantity of bitter principle in fruit that gives the fruit value as a medicine. An eminent physician of Ottawa, after years of experimenting, found a method of increasing the bitter principle in fruit juice, thus increasing the medicinal or curative qualities.

The juices are first extracted from fresh, ripe oranges, apples, figs and prunes. By a secret process, some of the sweet atoms are replaced by the bitter principle. Then tonics and antiseptics are added, and the whole made into tablets, now known far and wide as "Fruit-a-tives."

"Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world that is made of fruit juices, and is one of the few remedies that have let their composition be known from their introduction to the public.
